THOMAS J. MCDERMOTT, one of St. Paul's rising young lawyers, and a member of the Democratic State Central Committee may be the next Mayor of the Saintly City. His chances appear as good as anybody's; and he would fill the bill all right.

MINE owners in Illinois are, it is said, to import Chinese to work in the mines. If a Chinaman is not allowed to become a citizen of this country; how can mine owners import them? Have they got a hole from the bottom of their mine to the flowery kingdom; or is the journey accomplished over a golden path?

JUDGE JACKSON has made another decision. This time he settles it that employes, under Civil Service rules, of the government, can't be shifted around from one position to another at the sweet will of the head of a department. But that a government employe is sure of his position until death, unless deprived of it by trial.

EFFORTS to have the next Congress do something to establish our money on a firmer basis are being put forth by many Republican papers. What can they mean by this zealous advocacy of financial reform? Haven't they been telling us for years past that our money system was all right? That a gold standard was the panacea of all evils? That all we wanted was to sail right along as we are? What reform then do they want in our financial system?

THE Minneapolis Times comments quite severely on the allowing A. Harrington, manager of Great Northern elevator "A" to act as juror in the case of J. R. Howard charged with employing a man to bribe a juror in a Great northern damage suit. It claims that the elevator is the private property of J. J. Hill who is president of the Great Northern railway. It does look as if another man might have been found for a juror, whose temptations to bias wouldn't be so strong.

A FEW of the country gold standard papers had begun to poke fun at the bimetallists who dared intimate that one of the best ways for the administration party to electioneer, this fall, was to put their money into keeping up the price of wheat. Since the elections wheat has been gradually but surely going down, down. What do the gold standard editors now think about it? Is the surplus any greater now than it was before election; or has there been an artificial price maintained for election purposes? We will excuse the gold standard papers if they don't answer this.

THOSE Republicans who were misled into supporting McKinley with a view to having an earnest effort to restore bimetallism to our country through international agreement made, must now be satisfied. Mr. Walcott's committee having given up the effort and returned home after concluding that Eengland don't want us to have anything of the kind. The bimetallists by international agreement are now free to join the ranks of those who want bimetallism in this country, regardless of the dictates of England, or to climb into the gold standard wagon which they prefer. They must get off the fence, on one or the other side.

International Bimetallism.

The semi-annual meeting of the executive committee of the National Sound Money league was held in New York this week. Resolutions were passed starting out with "International bimetallism as a world possibility is dead. Let us recognize this." And further: "The United States must proclaim their acceptance of the "world fact" and plant themselves finally on the single gold standard." This settles it. The republican friends who have been hanging onto the old party in hopes they would bring about bimetallism by international agreement will now be whipped into the gold standard ranks where possible; or will in many cases, perhaps most cases, join with those favoring bimetallism in the United States.

GAZETTE JOB PRINT, DELANO, MINN

Jim Hill Tackles Currency.

Some of the papers are parading J. J. Hill's views on the currency question as having considerable weight. Why Mr. Hill should know any more about what good money is than other people do, is a question. He has the facility of making his investments pay, by pushing them; by getting all he can for his work; and getting others to do the work at as small figures as possible. This much about finance he knows well. But why he should presume to instruct the United States government as to what kind of money it should have is the conundrum. So long as he gets his pay in current funds and pays his employes their monthly pittance, does it matter to him what the money is made of? Does he care if it is gold, silver, or paper so long as it serves his purpose? Is there not a scheme on hand to do just what his letter recommends; and has not this announcement to the public under Mr. Hill's name been made for the purpose of aiding the scheme, by the wonderful influence Mr. Hill is supposed to exert on things financial? Even the Pioneer Press, after giving the article for what it is worth, adds, that when Mr. Hill is quoted as favoring the abolition of the 10 per cent tax on state bank currency it thinks he must have been misquoted. We think he has gained credit nowhere by the whole article.

He advocates that all circulating money furnished by the government should be of equal value, and redeemable in gold.

Everybody wants all money of equal value, unless it be those engaged in making money by handling money: of course if they can get the country flooded with paper money, redeemable in gold, they can speculate on people's necessities, and reap the premium on gold, which they manipulate occasionally.

He wants the smallest United States bank notes fixed at $10. How many people would have the handling of one of them once a month?

Mr. Hill is reported as arguing that under the present system the U. S. Treasury must remain the largest bank of issue in the world. And he claims that because its officers are underpaid, as gauged by other financial institutions, it labors at a disadvantage. If Mr. Hill had control would he not cut their wages still further? And if not, why not? Why would he except them from cuts made on others in his employ?

Mr. Hill is further quoted as saying: "All the United States notes are the obligations of the nation and can only be retired by substitution of other forms of indebtedness. An issue of United States bonds at 3 per cent and possibly at 2½ percent per annum, convertable into treasury notes at par on demand and reconvertable into bonds on the return of such treasury notes, would, to the extent of these notes, make this currency flexible, for the reason that when money was plenty and rates of interest low the notes might have been converted into bonds, and when money brought higher rates of interest the bonds would be exchanged for treasury notes." What a fine chance that would be for cornering the money of the country. Wheat speculations would be nowhere alongside of the opportunity presented of making a safe investment in U. S. money.

Further the financial seer is quoted as favoring in case there is not an adequate supply of government bonds at a low rate of interest, "the bank reserve should be, to a certain extent, held in coin, gold and silver so long as the government maintains the parity between these metals."

How can the government maintain the parity between these metals?"

How can the government maintain the parity between gold and silver with statutes allowing contracts made payable alone in gold? Money shall be money. If the government recognizes both metals, and pays its debts in either as it chooses, people will do the same.

Clearing house associations Mr. Hill thinks good things, if properly run. But favors the enforcement of laws.

He thinks it would be better if large national banks could establish branches the parent bank to redeem the notes.

He wants the 10 per cent tax on state banks abolished, and thinks "that it would be better for the country at large if the general government was out of the banking business."

While some of Mr. Hills ideas may be all right it looks very much as if Mr. Hill or some of his friends wanted to start a big national bank in Minnesota with "branches" in the principle places about the state and freeze out all other financial institutions: and eventually, if possible, have Uncle Sam's treasury go out of the banking business, and the "Bank of Jim Hill" do the whole business of the country. As for us, we think it would be better for the country if Jim Hill would keep out of the banking business and Uncle Sam would coin our gold and silver free as of yore.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 12, 1897.

Today's Cabinet meeting was a somewhat gloomy gathering and Mr. McKinley was chief mourner. Secretary Sherman looked as mournful as the rest of them, but if he felt so it was probably because he feared that the official count in Ohio would not meet the democratic expectations by making Boss Hanna's return to the Senate impossible, and not because of the general rebuke administered to the administration by the increase in the democratic vote and the decrease in the republican vote in every state in which an election was held. When speaking for publication, the republicans try to make light of the results and to claim that such is always the case at the first off year election held under a new administration, but they do not talk that sort of rot among themselves. They know the extraordinary efforts made by their National Committee to hold together the vote given to McKinley last year and the enormous amount of money spent in those efforts, and they see the results for just what they are—a popular rebuke to Mr. McKinley and his administration. They see, too, that it is a forerunner of the election of a democratic majority of the House of Representatives, next year, which will in turn pave the way for the election of a democratic President in 1900.

With the exception of New York, where disgust with the alleged "reformers" of the republican municipal administration brought about the cyclone which restored Tammany to power by an unexpectedly large plurality, and Maryland, where the silver question was dodged and the anti-Gorman democrats, headed by the Baltimore Sun, acted with the republicans, the democrats made their largest gains in those states where they pushed the free coinage of silver to the front as the leading issue of the campaign. This fact shows very plainly that those who pronounced the "silver craze dead last year were not well informed. It also shows that not a few of the republicans who put the McKinley administration in power resent the continuation of the Cleveland-Carlisle financial policy by the present administration.

Democrats in Washington are disposed to give Mr. Bryan a large share of the credit for the splendid showing made by the party in Ohio, and the remark has been made many times, that if the entire campaign in that state had been made along the same aggressive line as the speeches made in the closing days by Mr. Bryan, the democrats would have elected their entire state ticket as well as have assured the defeat of Boss Hanna. Of course those who make these remarks know that it is much easier to say after a campaign is over what would have been the winning policy than it is to make the choice in the midst of a campaign, but the knowledge may be useful all the same, as it may be used to prevent similar mistakes in the future.

The only depressing feature about the election, from a democratic point of view, was the election of a republican majority of the Maryland legislature, which means that Senator Gorman's successor will be a republican.

Delegations of gentlemen representing communities which would like to have that proposed government armor plate factory continue to present themselves and their able arguments before the board of Naval Officers having charge of the investigation to ascertain the best location for such a plant, which indicates either a lack of knowledge of the attitude of the administration towards the project or a belief that Congress will act in the matter regardless of the opposition of the administration.

Hon. Hannis Taylor, who was U. S. Minister to Spain under the last administration and until the arrival of Gen. Woodford, the present minister, at Madrid, several months ago, and who is at present staying in Washington, fails to perceive how occupying a position as a diplomat should operate to deprive him of the right to have and express an opinion of his own after his return to private life, and is therefore not inclined to bother his head about the absurd talk that some of the friends of Spain and of the administration have indulged in since the publication of a very strong and truthful magazine article written by Mr. Taylor and dealing with Spain and its relations with Cuba. These critics charge that Mr. Taylor's article was published for its effect upon Congress, but, unless those who are in positions to know the sentiment of Congress are much mistaken, nothing of the sort will be needed to bring about prompt action by the House on that joint resolution, already adopted by the Senate, directing the recognition of the belligerency of the Cubans.

What They Think of Towne.

Cleveland Plaindealer, Nov. 1.

As an orator Mr. Towne is probably without a peer in the whole United States. Certain it is that no man, not even William Jennings Bryan himself, is a more capable exponent of the doctrine of bimetallism. But Mr. Towne is not a man with a single idea. He is a profound student, than whom no man is better informed, be it science, literature, art, classics, history or politics. Wherever he has gone he has held his audiences spellbound. The equal of William Jennings Bryan in every way, except in the latter's hold upon the hearts of the American people, there is no firmer, more loyal or disinterested friend of Mr. Bryan living than Charles A. Towne. Those who do not hear him tonight at the corner of Pearl and Denison will miss a great deal.—Saint Cloud Times.

Willmar Tribune:—The Great Northern recently completed the largest elevator in the world at Buffalo N. Y. The State Warehouse and Railroad Commission visited the same Saturday.

Minneapolis Tribune: Senator Wolcott is said to be so mad with England for turning down international bimetallism that he will never vote for arbitration again. This is childish. Arbitration stands on its own merits. It was a good thing last year. it is a good thing this year, and will be a good thing next year, regardless of what is done with the silver question.

A gentlemen who is well posted in such matters, informs us that horses which were a drug on the market only a few months ago at $40 to $50 now command from $90 to $100, while extra good ones range much higher. Horses as well as cattle seem to be scarce in the country, and are likely to go much higher. Those who have good ones should not be in any hurry to dispose of them.—The Carver County News.

St. Peter Herald: Henry George struck the true chord of political economy and philosophy in his last speech, made the night before his death, when he said: "I have never claimed to be the friend of the working man. I do not now make any such claim. I have not and do not intend to advocate anything in the special interest of the laboring man. I am for men; the equal rights of all men. Let us be done with forever asking privileges for laboring men." It was a bold speech to make, but the langnage was not of a demogogue. Surely the merchant, the farmer, the banker and the professional man has the same rights and is entitled to the same protection from the law as the laboring man. But that is all. Labor should not, and in fact it does not ask for special privileges. All it asks is a fair chance and it will take care of itself. "Equal rights to all, special privileges to none," is the proper doctrine.

And Now it is the Cattle.

For the past few years hog cholera has laid low herds of swine, with such regularity and rapidity as to almost wholly wipe out the swine raising industry. Now an epidemic threatens to pursue the same course with regard to cattle. We are told that a disease has made its appearance which acts upon cattle much the same as cholera affected the swine of this region. The cattle are suddenly overcome and die within a very short period after the disease puts in its appearance. B. Norman, of Lake Prairie, lost five cattle by the disease last week and Mr. Burgess, of Cordova, LeSueur county, also lost four. Several others have lost one or more.—St. Peter Herald.

A Corker.

J. Sterling Morton, vice president of the league of Nebraska, is reported as having written to the meeting of the national sound money league the other day as follows:

"Mr. Bryan and his disciples are actively engaged in propagation of money fallacies. They have united in one conglomerate, all the fanatics, bigots and idiots in this state for the purpose of upholding the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. It is very painful to observe that this aggregation may quite possibly make a majority of 20,000 at the coming election for candidates who represent all that is inimical and disastrous to agriculture and, in fact, to sound government everywhere."

Mr. Bryan and his disciples seem to have a powerful influence in Nebraska, judging from the above article.

And then the idea of Sterling living in a state where there is a majority of 20,000 "fanatics, bigots and idiots." How can this large majority be so cruel as to become "painful to observe" to the astute politician?

And the idea of 20,000 majority of the people of the thriving state of Nebraska voting for candidates "who represent all that is inimical and disastrous to agriculture and, in fact, to sound government everywhere." Why, what would the people there do for granaries, and corn cribs, if the people had only, instead of voting for free silver and its candidates, voted for Sterling and his associates?

Kellar's Sugar Company.

Senator Henry Kellar of Sauk Rapids, who returned yesterday from Nebraska, where he went to observe the manufacture of sugar from a lot of beets sent there by him, stated that a deal has been closed with German capitalists in New York to put $500,000 into his beet sugar manufacturing company, and that the plant will be located at Minneapolis at once, if certain concessions are made by the railroads.—Pioneer Press.

This picture is home-made: and not copy-righted.—Buffalo Gazette.

I have heard from the Bi-metallic Commission. International agreement is no go. England says no. So I have quit looking to the pawn shops and like institutions, and have climbed down from the fence, and concluded to turn my attention to the best interests of my own country and to home affairs.

I understand Commissioner Wolcott is terrible mad. I don't blame him. I feel somewhat patriotic, myself.

Huns Are Hostile.

Buda Pest, Nov. 10.—In the lower house of the diet to-day Francis Kossuth characterized the action of the Austrian minister of finance in threatening a suspension of the constitution in the event of the Austrao Hungarian compromise bill being defeaten as being contrary to the terms of the Hungarian constitution. Kossuth called upon the government to make a definite announcement of its position in the matter, and addressed an interpellation to Baron Banffy, Hungarian premier, relative to the attitude the Hungarian government would adopt in the event of Austria suspending the constitution, as threatened.—Times.

It is now settled that by adding to his weight and using his own muscular force a man can beat the best time ever made by a horse. The addition required is a bicycle.

The death at the age of 119 years of Aunt Nancy Daniels, a colored resident of Sacramento, Cal., removes another of the 1,000 surviving servants of George Washington.

The late Charles A. Dana studied Russian when he was 76, and Queen Victoria at 78 takes a daily lesson in Hindoo. Such examples remind Father Time that some people never grow old.

Europe is flooded with advertisements of the Klondike region, and a great rush to Alaska may be looked for in the spring. The first railroad to the diggings will be the biggest gold mine.

A New York scientist declares that it is entirely possible for a young woman to marry and live well on two dollars a week. The modern young woman, however, exhibits no inclination to make use of all her possibilities.

Thomas W. Burton, a Wisconsin farmer who was a federal scout in the civil war, once lay within 20 feet of Gen. Robert E. Lee and tried for five minutes to make up his mind to shoot the great soldier. The deed seemed too much like murder, however, and the general's life was spared. Burton now treasures a letter in which Lee thanks him.

The recent dreadful disaster on the New York Central railway has brought to light the fact that during the whole of last year not one passenger was killed on that line, which in the time stated carried over 23,000,000 persons. Fifteen were injured during the year, but of these at least eight suffered from their own fault and none was injured in collision or derailment.

"Old Moore's Almanac," published in London, has for over 100 years given forecasts of important events, and claims to have made some big hits in its vaticinations. For 1898 it predicts "that there will be a terrible civil war in the United States; that the czar of Russia will die; that the young king of Spain will be kidnaped, and that on or about the second week of November of that year communication will be established between this planet and Mars."

Helen Gould, who is worth about $25,000,000 in her own right, has entered the law school of Columbia university with the intention of qualifying herself for admittance to the bar. She does not mean to practice law, of course. What she wants is to learn how to protect her property interests without the aid of attorneys, who are expensive and not always scrupulously faithful. Miss Gould's example is a good one for women to follow who have wealth in their own names.

All American citizens will be gratified by the news that the enlisted force of the United States navy is rapidly becoming Americanized. It appears from the naval reports that more than 54 per cent. of the enlisted men are native-born and that 74 per cent. are citizens of the United States. In addition to this, more than 12 per cent. of those not citizens have declared their intention to become citizens, and among the 1,143 apprentices more than 86 per cent. are natives of this country.

The great Yerkes telescope in Wisconsin is already showing its value as a star gazer. The big lens is picking up new stars and nebulae right along. Jupiter and Mars and Venus and others who move in upper circles will need to be on their good behavior now that this big eye is upon them. Perhaps it will now be learned if the rings of Saturn are cinder paths, if the canals of Mars have a lock on, if the dog star wears a tag, and if the big Dipper has any pointers on the weather bureau.

The art and mystery of train robbing has degenerated since the heroic days when the Younger and the James boys swooped down upon an express car and cleaned up a Klondike stake in a single hour. Nowadays the bandits invariably fail to open the express safe, and beat a retreat with nothing to show for their trouble but the fireman's silver watch, the Pullman porter's "tips" and occasionally a few loads of buckshot in the lumbar region. Blue Cut and Gad's Hill are now mere historic memories.

Several deaths attributed to hydrophobia which have been reported in Chicago recently will stir up the old question whether there is such a disease as hydrophobia. The matter is by no means settled, from a medical point of view. There are those who maintain that hydrophobia does not exist, except as the result of fear, while others content themselves with the declaration that its existence is very doubtful. To the layman, however, who knows nothing of the scientific hairsplitting involved in the discussion, the question will involve few difficulties. He knows people die from rabid dog bites.

We are glad to note the manly and heroic stand taken by organized labor in defense of its right to kiss. At Newcastle, Pa., a man named Kissinger kissed, as was most appropriate and to be expected in view of his name, and was promptly discharged by the man who employed both the kisser and the kissee. Of course organized labor decided that it would not permit plutocratic dictation in the matter of kissing, and the result is a strike. Now all that remains is to have it definitely settled whether a man's right to kiss a pretty girl is to depend on the whim of the employer or the pleasure of the girl.

Bishop Gaines, of Georgia, makes the startling prediction that the entire African race on the American continent is gradually becoming bleached out, and that in the process of years the black face will disappear. Prof. Starr, of the University of Chicago, says that the Caucasian race in North America is gradually changing its characteristics to those of the aboriginal Indians. There is evidently something wrong with a climate and social evolution that prevents any race of people from remaining in status quo, and we anxiously await the next session of the international scientists to hear all about it.

BRAZIL'S RULER IN DANGER.

Attempted Assassination of the President—Martial Law Declared.

Rio Janeiro, Nov. 6.—An attempt was made on Friday to assassinate the president of Brazil, Dr. Prudente Jose de Moraes. The president's brother, an army officer, was probably mortally wounded while shielding the chief executive from a soldier's dagger. Gen. Machado Bethencourt, minister of war, who was of the president's party, was shot and killed. The attempt to kill the president and the killing of the minister of war, it is believed, were the acts of monarchical sympathizers. Another theory is that they were the results of the intense feeling aroused by the proposed arbitration treaty with France.

Rio Janeiro is now under martial law, every soldier having been ordered to arms, and it is feared that another revolution is at hand.

Thousands of persons gathered Friday in front of the government palace to see President Moraes and his cabinet extend publicly the thanks of the republic to Gen. Barboza and his troops. Many members of congress and persons high in military, navy and ecclesiastical circles were present, as were also the diplomatic representatives of several foreign countries.

The victorious troops were passing in review before President Moraes at

PRESIDENT MORAES.

1:50 o'clock, when a soldier in the ranks dashed suddenly toward the president's party, drawing a dagger as he went. Fearing his intention and unable to stop the soldier, Col. Moraes, brother of the president, stepped between the chief executive and his assailant and tried to ward off the dagger thrust.

In this he was successful, but the colonel received the dagger in his own body, the soldier, in frenzy, striking several times before he was seized by those officials around the president. There were shouts of excitement from the crowd, and those in front, forced on by those in the rear, began advancing. The troops were thrown into line in front of the president's party and tried to force the crowd back.

While President Moraes and the members of his cabinet were bending over the body of Col. Moraes a shot was heard, and Gen. Bethencourt, the minister of war, staggered and fell beside the body of Col. Moraes, with a bullet in his head.

The soldier who tried to kill President Moraes is under arrest. He has refused to give any reason for his attempt on the president's life. The person who shot Gen. Bethencourt is unknown. No one knows whence came the fatal bullet.

A Blow at Football.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 9.—Without one word of discussion the house of representatives by a vote of 91 to 3 on Monday passed the anti-football bill, and it is now on its way to the senate. This remarkable result was anticipated, notwithstanding the warm opposition of the state university, which, recovering from the shock of Student Von Gammon's death, tried to stem the tide of opposition in order to save the game. A powerful card was played by an appeal to the mother of the dead student, to which she responded by calling on the legislature not to prohibit a game which her son had loved so well. The bill as passed Monday provides that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to come together and play a prize or match game of football in any park or other place in the state where fee is charged for admission to the game. One thousand dollars' fine or one year in the penitentiary or both together were fixed as the penalty.

Court-Martial for Weyler.

Madrid, Nov. 6.—The Spanish government, as a result of the deliberations of the ministers over the utterances of Gen. Weyler, the former captain general of Cuba, has come to the decision to try him by court-martial, no matter where he lands, if he confirms the accuracy of the press reports of his utterances. The commanding officers at all the ports of the Spanish kingdom have been instructed to demand of Gen. Weyler the moment he can be communicated with the exact terms of the speech which he delivered in reply to the manifestations at Havana upon the occasion of his embarkation for Spain on Sunday.

Height of Mount Ranier.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 8.—The latest computation from the altitude of Mount Ranier places Columbia, the highest point, 14,528 feet above the level of the sea. Chicago, Nov. 9.—August Teandel, a janitor and window-washer, fell from the seventh floor of the Unity building Monday forenoon and was instantly killed.

THE PENSION BUREAU.

Interesting Extracts from Commissioner Evans' Report.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The first annual report of Commissioner of Pensions H. Clay Evans to the secretary of the interior, was made public Friday. A summary follows:

There were added to the rolls during the year the names of 50,101 new pensioners and there were restored to the rolls 3,971 pensioners who had been previously dropped, a total of 54,072. During the same period the losses to the rolls were 31,960 by death, 1,674 by remarriage of widows and mothers, 1,845 by legal limitation (minors), 2,683 for failure to claim pension for three years and 4,560 for other causes, an aggregate of 41,122.

The whole number of pensioners on the rolls June 30, 1897, was 976,014. The net gain over the previous year was 5,326. It will thus be seen that the pension roll has not yet begun to show any diminution, though it has been anticipated by predecessors in office that such would be the fact. Seven widows of revolutionary soldiers and nine daughters of revolutionary soldiers are still on the rolls.

During the year 94,454 pension certificates were issued, of which number 50,101 were original allowances and the balance were reissues, increases, restorations, etc. During the same period 76,234 claims of various classes were disallowed. This number, however, does not include claims which were made for higher rates of pensions.

The amount disbursed for pensions by the pension agents during the year was $139,799,242.12 and the amount disbursed by treasury settlement was $150,475.22, a total of $139,949,717.25. This exceeds the amount disbursed during the fiscal year 1896 by the sum of $1,584,480.18. If 14,671 certificates, which were held in this bureau until July 1, 1897, had been mailed to the pension agents during the fiscal year, they would have required first payments amounting to $2,191,694, besides the additional annual value, which would also have been a charge upon the appropriation. This amount, added to that actually disbursed, makes an aggregate of $141,990,936. The appropriation for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year 1897 was only $140,000,000. The average annual value of each pension at the close of the year was $133.17. The average annual value of each pension under the general law was $162.04; each under the act of June 27, 1890, was $109.25. The aggregate annual value of all pensions at the close of the year was $129,795,428.

Referring to the consolidation of agencies, Commissioner Evans recommends that the executive order of July last suspending the operation of the order of February 6, 1897, the latter of which provided for the consolidation, be continued indefinitely, and adds: "I am still of the opinion that the reduction and consolidation of the pension agencies at this time is not only unnecessary but inexpedient; that the disruption of business in the agencies, the business for the interior department and the general inconvenience of the service would more than offset the anticipated saving to the government." Attention is called to a significant saving in rentals of agencies, a policy still being continued. In conclusion the report recommends the publication of a complete list of pensioners and the passage of a law to the end that no pension be granted to the widow of any soldier that shall marry hereafter.

LOST ON LAKE ERIE.

Only Two Men Saved Out of a Crew of Twenty-One.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The steamer Idaho, of the Western Transit line (New York Central) foundered in eight fathoms of water at 4:30 Saturday morning off Long point, on Lake Erie. This point juts out into the lake from the Canadian shore about 65 miles west of Buffalo, and its vicinity has been the scene of many disasters.

The Idaho, commanded by Capt. William Gillies, of Buffalo, and having on board a crew of 21 all told, left Buffalo Friday afternoon laden with package freight for Milwaukee. A strong southwest gale was blowing at the time, and the weather office had storm signals up for the lake. Capt. Gillies thought he could weather the gale, and headed straight up the lake. Shortly after passing Long point he discovered his mistake, and tried to run for shelter.

The sea was running very high at the time, and in turning the Idaho shipped a big sea, which quenched the fires in the engines, and the boat was helpless in the trough of the sea. The captain and crew were lowering the lifeboat when the steamer gave a lurch and went down on her side, stern first. Two of the crew, a deckhand named William Gill, of Rochester, and the second mate, name unknown, managed to reach the top of a single spar that stood above the water. There they clung until eight hours later, when they were discovered and rescued by the Mariposi, of the Minnesota line.

The Idaho was an old boat, having been built in 1863. She was 220 feet long, and had a gross tonnage of 1,110.

Rebels Pardoned.

Havana, Nov. 9. — Marshal Blanco has issued the following edict, officially described as "expressing the magnanimous sentiments of the queen regent and the firm determination of the national government:"

"I pardon in full all those who have been prosecuted for the crime of rebellion. Rebels prosecuted for common crimes, independent of rebellion, such as spoliation, immorality and the like, will be pardoned as rebels, but judged for other offenses committed by them. Those suffering sentences imposed prior to the date of this edict will have their sentence commuted to a certain extent, and perhaps, in some cases, in full. Persons pardoned should appear before the civil and military authorities at their respective places of residence, which they will designate, and which will be communicated to me. Should they designate places of residence outside the principal towns, they will be advised of the necessity of residing within the military zone of cultivation. The military authorities will be careful not to invade the jurisdiction of the civil authorities. Therefore, those pardoned cannot change their residence without obtaining the permission of both civil and military authorities."

Has Lost Its Terrors.

New Orleans, Nov. 9. — The yellow fever situation continues favorable. There has been no marked change since Sunday and yellow jack has lost his terrors for the people, who are greatly elated over the gratifying turn of affairs. Good news has been received from all points, and it is predicted that trade will have assumed its normal condition by the middle of the month, though it has been dealt a terrible blow by the dreadful plague. The board of health officials are of the opinion that the situation will gradually improve and all indications point that way. Monday's record was: New cases, 17; deaths, 7; total cases to date, 1,756; total deaths to date, 243.

Was a Success.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 5.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Tennessee Centennial exposition, Auditor Frank Goodman filed his report, showing that the total indebtedness of the exposition is now only $36,000. The property of the Exposition company is valued at far more than this sum, and there are collected assets amounting to $39,000. The total attendance officially reported was 1,682,305.

Will Meet in a Cave.

Denver, Col., Nov. 9.—The grand lodge of Arizona masons, which meets Wednesday, will hold its annual session in a cave 300 feet under ground at Bisbee.

GOING TO CALIFORNIA?

Phillips' Upholstered Tourist Cars are Best.

150,000 passengers carried in 17 years and all of them pleased, is a flattering testimonial. Jealous imitators have started rival lines, but they lack the facilities and experience of the Pioneers in the tourist car business.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad runs elegant upholstered tourist cars to California points without change, leaving St. Paul 7:00 p. m.; Minneapolis 7:35 p. m., every Thursday via Omaha, Denver and Salt Lake—the Scenic Line.

On November 2d, and each succeeding Tuesday, we will run an additional car via Kansas City and Fort Worth—the Southern Route, no altitudes and no snow.

The time is only FOUR DAYS via either route. In this age, time is an important factor in the selection of a line of travel. The Albert Lea Route being the quickest and best appointed, is most popular.

Through sleeping car berths only $6.00. A gentlemanly Phillips' conductor and colored porter accompany the car to attend to the wants of the passengers.

Meals served in dining cars, or may be prepared on cooking ranges provided for the purpose in a separate compartment.

Full information as to ticket rates, or berth reservations will be given by addressing A. B. Cutts, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, Minneapolis, Minn.

"MY WIFE'S LIFE."

How I was the means of saving it.

When the lungs are attacked and the symptoms of consumption appear, then begins the struggle between affection and that destroying disease which slays its thousands annually. It is a happy issue to the struggle when disease is conquered and health restored. Such an issue does not always end the struggle, but it did in the case of Mr. K. Morris, Memphis, Tenn., who saw his wife wasting and weakening and physicians helpless, and then suggested the simple remedy that wrought the cure. He tells the story thus:

"Seven years ago, my wife had a severe attack of lung trouble which the physicians pronounced consumption. The cough was extremely distressing, especially at night, and was frequently attended with the spitting of blood. The doctors being unable to help her, I induced her to try Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was surprised at the great relief it gave. Before using one whole bottle she was cured, so that now she is strong and quite healthy. That this medicine saved my wife's life I have not the least doubt. I always keep Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Whenever any of my family have a cold or cough we use it, and are promptly cured."—K. MORRIS, Memphis, Tenn.

The question: "Is consumption curable?" is still debated, and still debatable. It is easy to say that this was not a case of consumption. Yet the physicians said it was. They should know. As a matter of fact, Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has wrought so many similar cures that it seems to argue the curableness of consumption in its earlier stages, by the use of this remedy. There is no better medicine for pulmonary troubles than Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It gives relief in cases of Asthma, and Bronchitis, where relief has been heretofore unattainable. It promptly cures Coughs and Colds, La Grippe, and all affections of the throat and lungs. Heretofore, Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been put up in full size bottles only, at $1.00 per bottle. To meet a world-wide demand for a smaller package, the remedy is now put up in half size bottles, at half price—50 cents. Write for Dr. Ayer's Curebook (free) and learn more of the cures effected by Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Address J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

THE BROTHERS.

One was a true-born rover
And saw all there was to be seen.
The seas were but mill-ponds of water,
And the land, little patches between.
He knew all the world like a primer,
He read it and read it again,
For there wasn't a part but he had it by heart,
And after the manner of men.

And one fell in love with a woman—
The sort that make excellent wives.
They made them a home in a cottage,
With Love, to the end of their lives.
His world was a broad as the ocean
And high as the heaven's blue dome,
And with nothing worth being or knowing or seeing
Beyond the snug harbor of home.

One owned the love of a woman
With whom there were none to compare,
And one saw no woman so lovely
But what he saw others as fair.
One trained the rose of contentment
To bloom in the garden of life,
And one knew the smiles of the world (and its wiles)
But never the love of a wife.

UNCLE JONES' WARNING.

By M. E. Howard.

AUNT ROSILLE had just cleared away her breakfast dishes one bright spring morning, when Mis' Dexter dropped in. Mis' Dexter lived in the road towards the village, and as the stage went by her door twice a day, she managed to keep pretty well posted.

It was very warm for the time of year, and Mis' Dexter looked it; her large fat face was redder than ever, and her thin gray hair seemed literally glued to her little round head.

Aunt Rosille saw her coming, and welcomed her heartily; but Mis' Dexter just nodded, and said never a word. She made straight for the big cane-seated rocker by the sitting-room window, and as she settled herself comfortably on the soft patchwork cushion, she gave a deep sigh of content.

Aunt Rosille hurried in after her, and handed her the big palm-leaf fan bound round with turkey red. Then she settled herself primly on the very edge of Uncle Jones' rush-bottomed chair, and waited for the news that she felt sure was coming. It must be something out of the ordinary that would so hurry and disturb calm, easy-going Mis' Dexter so early on a spring morning.

Mis' Dexter paused only to get her breath. Then she said, eagerly: "Have you heard the news?"

"No; what?" Aunt Rosille leaned forward expectantly.

"Elder Brewster's dead. He died yesterday morning."

"An' what'll become of pore Mis' Brewster an' the children? Where'll they live?"

"Deacon Foster says he'll let 'em have the old Cobb place, if the other members 'il take hold an' help. Seems as if there'd ought to be enough folks who'd put their hands in their pockets. The elder was a general favorite." Mis' Dexter leaned back comfortably and fanned herself slowly two or three times. "An' I came round this mornin' to see what Uncle Jones'll do."

Aunt Rosille's thin brown face looked drawn and anxious, and she began to finger her gingham apron nervously.

"I'll do my level best with him, Mis' Dexter, but you know Anson as well as I do, an' you know he's near. But I'll do my level best with him, an' I'll give suthin' from my egg an' butter money." Aunt Rosille folded her thin, bony hands so tightly that the swollen veins seemed tied in great knots. Mis' Dexter's mild, pleasant face looked the sympathy she did not dare express, and she fanned herself vigorously two or three times.

"Yes, I know," she said, softly, "but I guess he'll come round all right. Men folks generally do. Shall I speak to him, or will you—"

"Oh, let me," said Aunt Rosille, hurriedly. "He might refuse you, an' he's as set as the everlasting hills."

After Uncle Jones had eaten a warm supper and settled himself comfortably by the fire, Aunt Rosille broached the subject. "Mis' Dexter was over this forenoon." Uncle Jones grunted gruffly. "An' she said Elder Brewster was dead, an' Mis' Brewster an' the children are comin' back here to live. Deacon Foster's goin' to let them have the old Cobb place."

Uncle Jones looked intently interested, but he said never a word.

"An' Mis' Dexter wanted to know if we couldn't help 'em a little. All the members are goin' to give suthin'."

"Well, let 'em," growled out Uncle Jones. "They may if they wanter, but I don't see as I'm called on to pervide." He leaned back with an air as if he had thoroughly exhausted the subject. Aunt Rosille sighed and kept quiet. She knew better than to argue with Uncle Jones.

The next morning Uncle Jones was more tactiturn than ever. Aunt Rosille noticed it thankfully. She hoped his conscience was troubling him; but, being a wise woman, she held her peace.

Monday morning Mis' Dexter stopped at the door on her way to the village. "I thought I'd run in a minute an' let you know they're goin' to give Mis' Brewster a donation party next Thursday evenin', an' you must be sure an' come."

As Aunt Rosille watched her down the road, she made up her mind that something must be done. It was already Monday, and none too early to begin on Uncle Jones if he was going to the party Thursday. He was very fond of warm biscuit, so Aunt Rosille stirred up a batch for his supper, and after Uncle Jones had eaten heartily and seemed at peace with all mankind she began gently:

"Mis' Dexter dropped in a minute this mornin' on her way to the village." Uncle Jones glanced up suspiciously, and his dark wrinkled face clouded. "She said Mis' Brewster's goin' to have a donation party Thursday night, and they want us to go."

Uncle Jones' face grew darker. He had hoped that the Brewster matter was settled, that it had slipped Aunt Rosille's mind, but he ought to have known her better.

"What shall we carry? I can spare some yarn an' butter, an' can't you let 'em have some flour an' meal, or some pork? Anything'll come handy where there's growin' boys."

Uncle Jones pushed his chair back with such a thud that the very windows rattled. "What's the use talkin', Rosille? You know I don't believe in donation parties, an' I don't believe in givin'. I think it's everyone's duty to look out for himslef. Besides I ain't got nothin' to spare."

He got up and went over to the door. Aunt Rosille was "all wrought up," and she followed him closely.

"If you can't spare a little suthin' to the widow an' orphan, you'd ought to be ashamed of yourself, Anson Jones' 'Tain't as if you hadn't it. You've got it an' to spare. Besides, it's your bounden duty, an' I don't see how you can sleep nights till you do!"

"Well, when I don't, Rosille, we'll see." He opened the door and went out to the barn. Aunt Rosille threw her apron over her head, and had a "real good cry." She had set her heart upon going, and she wanted Uncle Jones to go and give something.

In a few minutes she wiped her eyes and began to clear away the dishes. Aunt Rosille was not one of those who give up easily, and she had by no means given up all hopes of going Thursday. Her mind was busy at work, and she was thinking over what he had said, when a ray of hope illumined her shrewd brown face.

"He said if he didn't sleep nights he'd give suthin'. Well, he sha'n't! She shut her thin lips firmly together and looked all around. No one was in sight. She went into the buttery and carefully shut the door.

Uncle Jones was very fond of cold tea, and he always drank all that was left. Every night just before going to bed he went into the buttery, ate a little something and took a good drink of cold tea. Aunt Rosille knew this, and she had made up her mind that he should have plenty of tea, and that it should be as strong as it could be made. If that didn't keep him awake nothing would.

After the chores had all been done and everything locked up for the night Uncle Jones wound the clock and went into the buttery for something to eat. He looked all around, and finally took a piece of custard pie and some cold tea. There was an unusual quantity of tea, and it tasted so good that Uncle Jones drank it down to the very last drop. After he had eaten all he wanted he took his candle and went upstairs to bed. Aunt Rosille seemed asleep and he was glad of it. He didn't feel like talking, least of all with Aunt Rosille. His conscience was troubling him. He knew that he ought to do something for Elder Brewster's family, but he hated to; he fairly dreaded to give away the things, and he couldn't bear to give in. He thought it all over for a long time; then he tried to put it out of his mind and go to sleep, but he did not feel sleepy. He twisted and turned, but his eyes refused to stay shut.

He got up the next morning tired and sleepy. Aunt Rosille did not seem to notice anything, and Uncle Jones felt relieved. He could not get the Brewsters out of his head all day long. They came to him out in the fields, in the barn and even in the garden. Aunt Rosille seemed just the same as ever; she moved round just as briskly, and nothing seemed to weigh on her mind, and she never even mentioned the donation party.

Tuesday night Uncle Jones prepared to have a good night's rest, but again he felt wakeful. He slipped out of bed and got something to eat, hoping that it would put him to sleep, but it was of no use.

Wednesday morning came. He felt all used up and thoroughly miserable. Finally, as a last resort, he resolved to confide in Aunt Rosille.

"I don't know what's got into me, Rosille," he said, plaintively. "I can't seem to sleep nights. I didn't sleep any last night, or the night before, an' if I don't sleep some soon I don't know what'll ever become of me. I wish you'd fix me up some bitters; perhaps I'd feel better. I feel all run down."

"I think it's your conscience, Anson," put in Aunt Rosille, mildly, "for not helpin' Mis' Brewster. I've heard of just such cases."

Uncle Jones didn't say a word, but he shut the door quickly and went out to the barn. Aunt Rosille went up into the attic and looked over her herbs. She smiled once or twice, and seemed in excellent spirits.

Along in the middle of the afternoon, she slipped on her things and ran over to Mis' Dexter's to talk over the party.

Uncle Jones took a good dose of his bitters that night, and his spirits rose, for he felt sure that now he should have some sleep. But no! Along towards morning he woke up Aunt Rosille. "I've stood it just as long as I can; an' I'm afraid I'm goin' to die. I can't seem to get any sleep night or day. Nothin' seems to hit my case; an' I can't last long like this." He gave a deep groan. Aunt Rosille smiled to herself in the darkness, but she kept perfectly still.

"Ain't you goin' to get up an' git me suthin' to take?" inquired Uncle Jones, reproachfully. Aunt Rosille sat up straight in the bed.

"I don't think I can help you, Anson. Medicine won't reach your case. It's my honest opinion that it's your conscience troublin' you because you won't do anything for pore Mis' Brewster an' the children." She waited a minute, but Uncle Jones was silent. "I think if you'd make up your mind to do your duty, you'd rest easy nights, an' I don't believe you ever will till you do." Uncle Jones groaned. "You wouldn't miss a bag of meal an' a side of pork." Uncle Jones gave another groan—even deeper that before. "An' 'twould do a sight of good. If you'll make up your mind to do it, I'll do my level best by you; but it's my solemn belief you'll never sleep peaceful again till you do."

Uncle Jones was silent, and Aunt Rosille resolutely lay down. In a few minutes she heard him say, in a feeble voice:

"I'll do anything, Rosille, if you'll only git up an' help me. I'll even give 'em a bushel of potatoes."

Aunt Rosille was all attention. "Besides the meal an' the pork?"

"Yes, I'll do even that," said Uncle Jones, desperately.

Aunt Rosille got up immediately and went downstairs. In a few minutes she was back with a cup of hot catnip tea. "There, Anson, drink this. It'll do you good, an' put you to sleep, I'm sure, now your mind's easy."

Uncle Jones drank it to the very last drop, and in a few minutes he was peacefully sleeping.

Aunt Rosille lay awake for a long time, and thought over the donation party.—Woman's Journal.

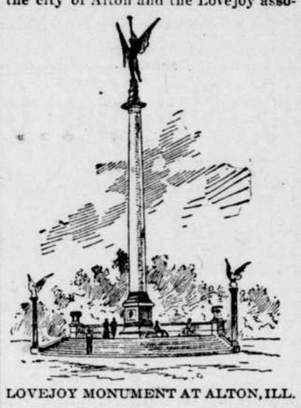
MONUMENT TO LOVEJOY.

Memory of the First Martyr in the Abolition Cause Honored.

Alton, Ill., Nov. 9.—The Lovejoy monument in this city was formally dedicated Monday. It was 60 years ago Sunday that Lovejoy was assassinated in this city because of his outspoken and fiery editorials against slave trade. He was the first martyr in the cause to abolish slavery. Lovejoy's remains would have been lost had it not been for Thomas Dimmock, of St. Louis, who had the grave located by an old sexton, the only person who knew where his coffin was buried. The coffin was placed in a vault until a suitable lot could be secured and here a modest scroll now marks his resting place. Two hundred yards to the south is a 90-foot shaft erected to his memory by citizens of Alton and people of Illinois at a cost of $30,000.

The exercises had to be changed on account of the heavy rain. Instead of being held at the monument, the exercises were held at Temple theater. After an invocation by Rev. Dr. M. Jameson and music by a picked chorus, an address was delivered by Hon. Thomas Dimmock, of St. Louis, who spoke for the city of Alton and the Lovejoy association. W. J. Wilgerson expressed the sentiment of the colored population. A touching tribute to the memory of the late C. A. Herb, who championed the monument appropriation bill in the state legislature, was paid by Senator D. A. Sparks. Lieut. Gov. Northcote delivered the address on behalf of the state.



LOVEJOY MONUMENT AT ALTON, ILL.

The story of Lovejoy's death at the hands of the infuriated mob on November 8, 1837, is briefly told. For months before that fatal day Lovejoy had preached against slavery. Each issue of his paper, the Observer, attacked the hated institution. Bitter animosities were engendered. His life was threatened, and he was advised to leave the country. He refused. His presses were destroyed. But, undaunted, he kept on, until the fourth press had been sent for. A mob broke into the warehouse where it had been received, and it was while defending his property that Lovejoy was shot dead. For years his grave lay unmarked, save by a plain pine slab.

To Protect the Seals.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Only the formal action of the senate is now required to make Russia and Japan allies of the United States for the joint protection of the seals in Behring sea. A treaty to that end was signed at the state department at noon Saturday by representatives of the three governments named, and it will become effective when ratified by the senate. The treaty was signed in the large diplomatic room at the state department. The usual formalities attended the action of the negotiators, who were:

For the United States—Messrs. Foster, Hamlin and Jordan.

For Russia—Messrs. De Wollant, Botkine and Routkowsky.

For Japan—Messrs. Matsai, Fujiai and Nutsikuri.

The text of the treaty will not be given out by the state department until final ratifications are exchanged.

Durrant Must Die.

Washington, Nov. 9. — The United States supreme court affirmed the decision of the circuit court of California refusing a writ of habeas corpus to William Henry Theodore Durrant, under sentence of death for the murder of Miss Blanche Lamont, in San Francisco, in April, 1895. The case has attracted attention throughout the whole of the United States, and this decision permits the law to take its course with the condemned man. Chief Justice Fuller announced the court's conclusion, but made no remarks in doing so, save to cite a few authorities on which the court based its decision.

May Escape Punishment.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 9.—Alec Coudet, the first of five men arrested for the murder of six members of the Spicer family near Winona, last winter, who was tried and found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hanged, has been granted a new trial by the supreme court. Further than this, the supreme court has so riddled the case presented by the prosecution that the attorneys of the state agree that it will be impossible to secure a conviction of any one of the men under arrest that will stand the test of an appeal.

New Gold Fields.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 8.—David Ward, just returned from Alaska, declares that there are greater and richer placer gold fields on the American side of the Alaskan boundary than have yet been found in the Klondike region. In support of his assertion he exhibits nuggets worth over $600 which he says he picked out of one hole in the bank of an Alaskan river that is gold lined for almost its entire length. He brought out a small sackful of dust and nuggets and is preparing to start back early in the spring at the head of an expedition of 20 men.

A Broken Axle.

Charlottsville, Va., Nov. 5.—The Chesapeake & Ohio express, known as the F. F. V., from Cincinnati to Washington, was wrecked near old Shedwell, five miles east of this place, at 1:25 Wednesday afternoon. Four persons were killed and 17 injured. The cause of the accident has not been definitely ascertained, but it is believed to have been due to the breaking of an axle on the locomotive. The engine left the track on a sharp curve and was hurled against a rocky hill.

Promises Are a Sham.

New York, Nov. 6.—Ex-Minister to Spain Hannis Taylor has caused another sensation by declaring that Spain's promises of autonomy to Cuba are a mere sham. "I am now the advocate of intervention by the United States," says Mr. Taylor, "because I am satisfied that it is the only remaining means by which peace in Cuba can be assured."

May Have Been Murdered

T. Risveth, a bachelor, was burned to death on his farm in Becker county, eight miles east of Uien. The circumstances indicate murder and robbery. Risveth, was the oldest settler in that part of the county, had marketed some wheat at Lake Park, and upon returning home paid his threshing bill The next day he was at work plowing and and in evening his house and barn were destroyed by fire. When the neighbors reached the scene they found Risveth's charred body lying in the ashes ot a hay stack that was near the barn. His horses were still harnessed, and as there was no reason for suicide, the neighbors believed that he was robbed and murdered and his body and buildings burned to cover up the crime.

Prison Investigation.

The commission, consisting of Judge Charles E. Flandrau, of St. Paul, Alexander M. Harrison, of Minneapolis, and B. F. Farmer, of Spring Valley, appointed by Gov. Clough to investigate the charges preferred against officials of the state penitentiary at Stillwater, met in the governor's office at the state capitol, arranged preliminary plans.

The commission organized immediately by selecting Judge Flandreau as chairman. Gov. Clough then addressed them, giving his ideas of the manner which the work should be carried on, and impressing upon the commission the importance of a fair, thorough and impartial investigation.

The work on the Capitol.

A crew of men has already been set to work at the new capitol site, erecting derricks and making preparations for building the sheds in which the dressing of Georgia marble will be carried on during the winter months. The sheds will be erected at once and the saws, planers and other machinery will arrive in a few weeks. Connections will be made with the water mains as it is neccessary to keep a stream of water running on the saws, to keep them cool, as they cut through the marble. By the first of the year the grounds will present a very lively air.

Broke Her Contract.

In response to an advertisement that appeared in the Minneapolis papers, a well dressed and apparently respectable young women, who gave her name as Wilson arrived in Duluth to accept a position as housekeeper for a man named Rowan. It turned out that Rowan was a colord man of poor circumstances living out in the West End, and the young woman refused to work for him, notwithstanding the fact that Rowan had advanced her money to come from Minneapolis. She applied to the police for aid, but they claimed they were unable to do anything for her, and the young lady left the police station and has not been seen since.

To Prison Together.

Not for a long time until now have man and wife been received at the prison to do time for a crime committed together. Franz and Minnie Seigel were sent up from Todd county to serve three years and one year respectively for manslaughter in the second degree. The story of their crime was that they had shamefully abused, ill-treated and neglected their 10-year-old daughter Martha, who died in August. They had failed to provide her with clothing, food and shelter, and also neglected her when she became ill from exposure and the treatment she had been accustomed to.

Perhaps.

The application of the Duluth & Iron Range road for permission to increase the capital stock of the road from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000 is considered as an indication that the company has some extensive improvements in view and that the road will probably be extended to the Rainy lake country by another year.

Killed by the Marshal.

Henry Haberling, a thresher, while under arrest at Pipestone for drunkenness, broke loose from Marshal McCall and started to run. He refused to halt, and McCall fired three shots, one striking him in the abdomen. He lived only five minutes. The sum of $65 was found on his person and a letter from his brother at New Hamburg, Io.

Key to the Klondike.

The Pioneer Alaska Railway is the Northern Pacific, and to that company belongs the credit, in connection with the Pacific Coast Steamship Co., of having inaugurated the sale of through tickets to points in Alaska. The Northern Pacific was the first railway to issue a map of Alaska showing the inland passage from Puget Sound to Sitka, Juneau and Chilkat.

Those intending to go to Alaska early next spring, after the snows on the Dyea and Skaguay passes are packed down and the lakes frozen, or at a later date, either via this route or via St. Michaels and the mouth of the Yukon, should remember that the Northern Pacific is the pioneer Alaska line; runs steam heated trains with dining cars, Pullman Standard and Tourist Sleepers from St. Paul to Tacoma, Seattle and Portland; passengers having the option of going via Helena or Butte City (the latter the greatest silver mining camp in the world); also via Lake Pend d'Oreille, Idaho, or through the famous Coeur d'Alene country.

We have issued an illustrated folder, replete with Alaska and Klondike information up to date. Send Chas. S. Fee, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn., two cents in postage and he will forward you this map.

Wherein Nobbleton Shows Sense.

"My friend Nobbleton," said Mr. Tankleby, "is overcareful about many things, but in many ways he shows great common sense. For instance: He always carries with him postal cards appropriately addressed, and if he is suddenly called away anywhere—and his business is such that he is liable to be at any time—he puts a word or two on one of his postal cards and puts it in the nearest letter box. He may not have time to stop and write or to telegraph, but he can always find time to drop this postal card; and it relieves the minds of the folks at home. In this I think Nobbleton shows sense."—N. Y. Sun.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. NEGLECT IS SUICIDE.

Plain Words From Mrs. Pinkham, Corroborated by Mrs. Charles Dunmore, That Ought to Bring Suffering Women to Their Senses.

If you were drowning and friendly hands shoved a plank to you, and you refused it, you would be committing suicide!

Yet that is precisely what women are doing if they go about their homes almost dead with misery, yet refuse to grasp the kindly hand held out to them!

It is suicidal to go day after day with that dull, constant pain in the region of the womb and that bloating heat and tenderness of the abdomen, which make the weight of your clothes an almost intolerable burden to you. It is not natural to suffer so in merely emptying the bladder. Does not that special form of suffering tell you that there is inflammation somewhere?

Shall I tell you what it is?

It is inflammation of the womb!

If it goes on, polypus, or tumor, or cancer will set in.

Commence the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of women in this condition have been cured by it. Keep your bowels open with Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and if you want further advice, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., stating freely all your symptoms—she stands ready and willing to give you the very best advice. She has given the helping hand to thousands suffering just like yourself, many of whom lived miles away from a physician. Her marvelous Vegetable Compound has cured many thousands of women. It can be found at any respectable drug store.

MRS. CHARLES DUNMORE, 102 Fremont St., Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass., says: "I was in pain day and night; my doctor did not seem to help me. I could not seem to find any relief until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had inflammation of the womb, a bearing-down pain, and the whites very badly. The pain was so intense that I could not sleep at night. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for eight months, and am now all right. Before that I took morphine pills for my pain; that was a great mistake, for the relief was only momentary and the effect vile. I am so thankful to be relieved of my sufferings, for the pains I had were something terrible. I am, indeed, very grateful for the good Mrs. Pinkham's remedies have done me."

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, NOV. 12, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—William Zabel is building a new barn on the West Side.

—The High School held their first literary meeting last night.

—Col. Greear, of Kentucky, was seen carrying a gun the other day; probably a slight attack of buck fever.

—The Frederick boys, of Rockford, are out deer hunting. They generally get game when they go after it.

—Good dry wood, and plenty of it, is in great demand this week. The weather grows gradually sharper and sharper.

—A horse buyer from the Midway Horse Market visited Delano Fair. He bought a few animals in this section of country.

—The village council met last Saturday evening and accepted the bonds and granted license to Charles Eppel to sell intoxicating liquors another year.

—Hiram Dyer & Son have sold their butcher business to John Schaust and Frank Speckel. George Dyer expects to go to Texas, but Hi says he will continue to reside on Third Street.

—Last Sunday was what people call a rainy day. There was a steady but not very heavy down pour most all day and a share of the night. Monday morning the sun shone bright again.

—The general agent of the traveling library, being established in neighboring towns was here this week. We don't know how much success he had, as we have seen him but once, when he started in.

—We have not yet seen those new fire escapes to be procured for the school house. Should a fire chance to occur there some day the board would receive severe censure in a case of injury being received by any one.

—Messrs Mowatt, Baltiff and Bohn constituted a jolly trio of hunters on the first day of the week to drive several miles in the rain without seeing any game; and a couple of them at least claim to be good hunters too.

—Diphtheria made its appearance in town last week; Mrs. Simon Weldelee being the one to get it. The children were taken to their grandfather Weldelee's and Simon's house quarantined, with Mr. and Mrs. Weldelee sole occupants.

—Paul Plotnik says a few more coon skins and he will have a fine fur coat made. He says he got about 30 ducks out on the prairie, where three companions, from whom he separated, as they made more gabbling than the geese, got none.

—Dr. Walter reports three cases of blackleg, three young heifers, in Hennepin County, last month. Two died. One recovered, under treatment. Cattle in Nicollet and Le Sueur counties are dying off with some fatal malady. It is well to be on the look out.

—A couple of the most sarcastic and disagreeable talking of Delano's orators held a hot wordy contest in a public place one day lately. Each should have the other fined for abusive language. It might be hard to decide which should pay the heaviest fine for the privilege.

—The Village Council contemplate buying another stove for the City Hall, one is not enough; also building a shed for the road machine, scrapers and other village property. If the village hall was built the full length of the lot and storage room had below it would be the proper thing. The hall is not big enough to seat the crowds that sometimes gather there.

—Owing to the rain Rev. Farber did not go to Watertown to preach last Sunday. We learn from Watertown people that it did not rain there so much as it did here; and that quite a large congregation was disappointed. We hope the congregation will be on hand again at the next appointed day and not take it into their heads to remain away, to get square with the minister. Watertown has a nice little church and should have services as often as possible.

—Louis Waldemar Everson, our nearest neighbor, has our thanks for a copy of his new composition "King Polaris" a two step march for piano. We are not much of a musician but think from the noises Louis has been making about every spare moment lately, that it must be fine. If Mr. Everson is a genius he certainly will find it out, if industry and persistence count for anything. He is also a printer and set up his own composition at the Eagle office where he works. "King Polaris" can be had of Mr. Everson for 25 cts a copy. Patronize home talent.

—Andrew Reider was around Tuesday with a petition for signatures requesting the re-establishment of the mail route, lately discontinued, between Rockford and Delano. It is needless to add that he had no trouble in finding them plenty, since the discontinuance of the route and people have had to wait until Tuesday morning for papers printed Thursday, on the Soo Line, and which had to go to the cities and await their turn to be sent out, they have begun to realize that the daily mail to Rockford was of use. It is hoped that we will again, very soon, be placed in direct communication with our neighbors north of us.

—P. E., R. R. Atchinson will preach at the M. E. church Friday evening, Nov. 12th, at the usual hour.

—Remember the Colonial social. The time has been changed from Friday to Saturday evening on account of the Presding Elder's visit.

—The Epworth League will hold a Colonial social at the City Hall Saturday eve. Nov. 13th. Programme will consist of tableaux and readings from Hiawatha, and old song illustrated. Pumpkin pie, ginger cake and coffee will be served. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission 10 cents.

Personal.

S. W. Junken, of Buffalo, was in town again today.

Mrs. Erb. visited relatives at Montrose, Tuesday

Dan and John Casey, of Corcorantown, visited Delano fair.

George Irving, of Rockford, did business in Delano Tuesday.

Peter Frank, from the west, visited his brothers here this week.

George Darrow and wife, of Rockford, drove over on business Saturday.

Miss Grace O'Hair, who has been on the sick list, is able to be about again.

Policeman Joe Merriman has been confined to the house for several days with sore throat.

Rev. J. P. Nugent, of Watertown, left on the early train Tuesday, to accompany his brother to Liverpool.

Peter Hoppe, K. Bucklin, William Jacobs and Adolph Hohl were among Rockfordites over to the fair.

Dr. and Mrs. Shrader and Mrs. C. G. Halgren, of Watertown, drove over with Miss Eva Shrader Tuesday.

Otis L. Billings, Ernest Otto and M. A. O. Hair attended the Howard trial in Minneapolis this week.

Hon. Joseph Craven, of Norwood, was a pleasant caller Tuesday. Joe is as sound a democrat as ever.

Max Youngman, of San Francisco, Cal. is in town visiting his Uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pfrang.

Dr. J. E. Soper left Tuesday morning for a flying trip to New York. Mrs. S. is in Minneapolis until his return.

Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Flanders, of Montrose, came down to visit their daughter Mrs. S. S. Ball who is on the sick list.

George Goodrick, Albert Johnson, Will Haynes and others arrived home Friday night from work on the G. N. Ry.

George Kridler and Joseph Bland and his son, of Marysville, were among Delano visitors Fair Day. Uncle Jo says prosperity struck him on the shin.

County Cullings.

J. C. Ferrell's store at Smith Lake met with a small robbery last Tuesday night. No thieves caught.

The County Commissioners met last Friday. They awarded the contract for repairing the Dayton bridge to Messrs Brown & Sproul for $725 provided Hennepin county will agree to pay half the expense. Next meeting to be Dec 13.

From the Howard Lake Herald we learn that the G. N. Ry. Co. has paid in full the claim of Mrs. Doretta Prigge as guardian of her daughter Frances $3,250 and costs. the judgment obtained at the June term of court.

Also, the cases of A. Peterson, of Stockholm; Mrs. Prigge for loss of services of her daughter; John Williams two suits for child loosing part of its fingers by car door jaming them, have been settled with F. E. Latham, attorney for plaintiffs.

Less than a year from now will be one of the hottest campaigns our country has ever had. Things are already shaping themselves to begin all along the line Soon meetings of different parties will be held, men will discuss the situation from every standpoint. Parties will become rejuvinated; clubs will be formed; the campaign of education will be carried on. Every voter should take his home paper; one of each political party if possible, so as to keep posted on what is being done, and so that he can vote intelligently; or if he can he should take a county paper and a great city paper like the World, of New York. BUFFALO GAZETTE and Thrice-a-week World for one year $1.75.

The Howard case came up on a change of venue from Wright county, in Minneapolis Monday. Frank M. Nye, who was County Attorney for Hennepin county when the Billings case was tried is retained by Howard. Why should Frank Nye figure in the case if Frank Larabee can't? Haven't the people of Wright county as good a right to their choice of Attorneys as has Mr. Howard, the Great Northern railway, or anybody else? If they haven't they ought to have. The Minneapolis Times has published full accounts of the proceedings. Billing's testimony was much the same as on the occasion when the case was up before in Minneapolis. He claims that all the attorneys interested for for G. N. in the case knew that he was at Buffalo trying to bribe a juryman to hang up the case or get a verdict for the railroad company. Otto admits that Billings offered him money to do so; but says that he refused to accept.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz. 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1.30 for the two papers.

The Hicks 1898 Almanac and Paper.

We are informed that the 1898 Almanac of Prof. Irl R. Hicks is now ready, and judging from its past history, it will not be many weeks in finding its way into homes and offices all over America. It is much larger and finer than any previous issue. It contains 116 pages, is splendidly printed and illustrated on fine book paper, having the finest portrait ever given of Prof. Hicks. It can no longer be denied that the publications of Prof. Hicks have become a necessity to the family and commercial life of this country. His journal, "Word and Works, aside from its storm, weather and astronomical features, has taken rank with the best literary, scientific and family magazines of the age. Do not believe hearsay and reports. See the Hicks Almanac and paper for yourself. You will then know why they are so popular. They are educators of the millions, and unrivaled safeguards to property and human life. It is matter of simple record that Prof. Hicks has foretold for many years all great storms, floods, drouths and tornadoes, even the recent terrible drouth over all the country. The Almanac alone is 25 cents a copy. The paper $1.00 a year with the Almanac as a premium. Send to for one year for $3.00.

When you consider that the regular price of Leslie's Weekly alone is $4.00 a year, you can readily see what a splendid offer it is we are making.

LESLIE'S WEEKLY is the oldest and best established of the great illustrated New York journals. It is the most popular and the most enterprising; its illustrations are all of the highest order and are superbly printed. There is no important event happening, either at home or abroad, but that a LESLIE representative is on hand to chronicle with pen and pencil. Subscribe now both for yourself and for some friend's Christmas Gift.

Remit $3.00 to this office and you will receive both papers for one year.

THE TEACHER'S DREAM.

FROM OUR DUMB ANIMALS.

And then she lifted up her face,
But started back aghast—
The room, by strange and sudden change,
Assumed proportions vast.

It seemed a Senate hall, and one
Addressed a listening throng;
Each burning word all bosoms stirred,
Applause rose loud and long.

The 'wildered teacher thought she knew
The speaker's voice and look,
"And for his name," she said, "the same
Is in my record book."

The stately senate hall dissolved,
A church rose in its place,
Wherein there stood a man of God,
Dispensing words of grace.

And though he spoke in solemn tone,
And though his hair was gray,
The teacher's thought was strangely wrought:
□"I whipped that boy to-day."

The church, a phantasm, vanished soon;
What saw the teacher then?
In classic gloom of alcoved room
An author plied his pen.

"My idlest lad!" the teacher said,
Filled with a new surprise—
"Shall I behold his name enrolled
Among the great and wise?"

The vision of a cottage home
The teacher now descried.
A mother's face illumed the place
Her influence sanctified.

"A miracle! a miracle!
This matron well I know,
Was but a wild and careless child
Not half an hour ago.

"And, now she to her children speaks
Of duty's golden rule,
Her lips repeat in accents sweet
My words to her at school."

W. H. VENABLE.

JUST why a politician who wants a protective tariff so high that Americans must use American goods because they can't get any other, is so dreadfully particular about having money, simply the medium of exchange for goods, on the gold standard, so that the nations of the earth will take it, beats ordinary people What do they want to give their money to other nations for?

HENRY A. HICKS, of New York, was chosen by the Knights of Labor, at their recent meeting, to be Master Workman, instead of James R. Sovereign, who has filled the place for several years. T. B. McGuire, Daniel Brown, and H. B. Martin, of Minnesota, were also superseded by I. D. Chamberlain, Barsfield Fitzpatrick and Henry Bostick, the two latter on executive board. Andrew Best being the third member.

DR. PERKINS who examined the sausage said to have poisoned two young men to death, in St. Paul and who went so far in his analysis as to eat a piece of the sausage and sit down to await results, until he got sick at the stomach, and throwed it up without finding out what the poison was, it seems to us made rather a poor choice of means of finding out. Had he eaten a piece of bread and sat down for a short time and some one came rushing into the room exclaiming "two men who ate from that loaf are dead!" Would he not have immediately emptied his stomach? After eating the sausage and sitting quietly down to think matters over, wouldn't his stomach send up the sausage?

ANOTHER lynching has been added to the already long list for 1897. This one in North Dakota, our neighboring state. A mob of 40 men, at about 2 a. m. Sunday morning went to the jail in Williamsport, where Alex Coudot, Paul Holy Track, and Philip Ireland were confined in the county jail, of Emmons county, and hung them. The three were under charge of having murdered Rev. Thomas Spicer and family, six people in all. on Feb. 15 last. A new trial had been granted to Coudot who had been tried, and the neighbors got tired waiting the motions of courts, etc., etc. Would not more speedy trials, with their convictions or acquitals, be better than dallying along with technicalities? Would not people be better satisfied to allow the law to take its course, if cases were tried as they should be, and not on technicalities. Prisoners are granted trial after trial where it seems clear to all that they are guilty. Lawyers prolong trials and heap up expenses where it is clear they are in the wrong. Should cases be promptly and honestly tried people would not be so fast to mete out lynch law. Lynch law is wrong but it is sure and inexpensive generally.

WILL Moses E. Clapp, who would like to be Governor, interest himself in having Billings hung, as the Tribune's report of his speech in the Howard case makes him intimate he should be; or will he commit the same terrible offense he accuses his friend Larabee of, and not complain on him? Show the state you meant what you said, Mr. Clapp.

THE Globe goes for "Our State Hoss Doctors" rather severely. Referring to the Montivedio Leader it claims a Mr. Griggs had a team which horse doctors pronounced sick of glanders; the state veterinary was called in and concurred in the diagnosis. The team was killed. A post mortem revealed the fact that the team did not have the glanders nor any other sickness. The state pays 4-5 and the town 1-5 of the expense of killing and burying condemned animals. The owner then would get nothing for his horses, worth nothing sick of glanders. But where the board of health and state veterinary order killed a healthy team, the owner should have a good fair price for his horses, from somebody or somewhere. The best of men may make mistakes in diagnosis of horse diseases as well as in other trades or professions.

Hard Money and Free Trade.

It looks very much as if some of our financiers are in favor of two kinds of money in this country, if they are opposed to bimetallism. They seem to want a rich man's money and a poor man's currency. They advocate the issuing of paper in sums larger than $10 or $5; while silver redeemable in gold, will be used for people unable to own a $10 bill.

They even want two kinds of banks; one for the wealthy, run by individuals able to purchase U. S. bonds, not taxed; while Uncle Sam goes into partnership with all the poor boys and girls who wish to save a few dimes; post offices becoming savings banks.

By this arrangement the bankers would soon have our Uncle Sam down on his knees to them, so to speak. Bonds would have to be sold, to get money to pay thousands of depositors in post offices, all over the country, whenever the individual bankers saw fit to make hard times for the poor, by contracting the currency a little. Along about election times the depositors in U. S. postal savings banks could be wrought upon to add more to, or to take out their deposits as the "financiers" saw fit to have them. Elections could be more easily carried in this way.

We are for one money, the money of the constitution, for rich and poor.

We believe Uuncle Sam should have the saying, as he has always had, in the constitution, as to what shall, and what shall not be, money, and the stamp of the United States upon coin whether gold, or silver, should constitute it money, good for its face anywhere in this country.

All this fuss about other nations not being willing to take our money amounts to nothing. The people who are loudest with such arguments are the most earnest workers for protection to our home industries. They want protective tariff to our infant industries, so high that nothing that can be made at home will be bought abroad. What better protection could a nation have than money no other country would receive in exchange for commodities? Do these financiers believe that no other nation would do business with us if we had bimetallism? Do they really want America to manufacture everything and raise everything she uses? If they do believe protection the best thing, and that bimetallism will prohibit the importation of all goods; and that is the state of affairs they want, why don't they vote for it? As for us, give us free trade; gold and silver coin for money, and we think there will be no trouble about trade with other nations.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz. 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1.30 for the two papers.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 12, 1897.

Mr. McKinley has taken a hand in that Hanna muddle by personally taking Senator Foraker to task for the attitude that some of the prominent Foraker men in Ohio have taken against the election of Hanna to the Senate. Whether by so doing he hurt or helped Hanna is as yet a matter of doubt. There was no quarrel between Mr. McKinley and Senator Foraker, but there was plain talk on both sides. Mr. McKinley said that he knew Foraker could stop the fight on Hanna that some of his personal followers were showing a disposition to make, if not actually making, if he desired to do so. Mr. Foraker did not deny his power to do so, but retorted by saying that Hanna had brought it all on himself by his treatment of the Foraker and Bushnell republicans, and intimating that he thought it would serve him good and right if he failed to get elected to the Senate. Mr. McKinley did not defend Hanna's methods in dealing with Foraker's friends, but he made it very plain that the whole power of of the administration would be used to secure Hanna's election, and that it would be useless for any republican who took any part in an attempt to prevent his election to expect the slightest favor from him in the way of patronage. Notwithstanding all this the most that Mr. McKinley could get out of Foraker was a promise that he would not personally do anything against the election of Hanna. Foraker is still in Washington and Mr. McKinley has not abandoned hope of being able to bring sufficient pressure to bear upon upon him to get him to agree to call his followers off and to allow Hanna to be elected.

Secretary Gage now openly admits that he is in sympathy with the gold-bug, self-appointed monetary conference which assumes the right to perform the duties properly belonging to Congress in connection with financial legislation, and to emphasize that sympathy he gave a dinner this week attended only by the members of the so-called conference and Mr. H. H. Hanna, of Indianapolis, who is generally regarded as the creator of the Indianapolis convention and of this conference. At this dinner the work of the conference, as far as it has gone, and the financial recommendations in the annual report of Secretary Gage were discussed. If those men have time to waste they have as much right to waste it in this way as in any other. The only good purpose that will be served either by the recommendations of Secretary Gage or of this conference, composed of his side-partners, will be the increase in the silver sentiment of the country. Senator Chandler has not always been wise in his predictions, but he hits the nail square on the head in his latest, made public this week—"if the republican party permanently acquiesces in the existing gold standard it will be defeated in the Congressional elections of 1898 and in the Presidential election of 1900".

John Wedderburn and John Wedderburn & Co., who were recently disbarred from practice before the Patent Office, were this week placed on the fraud list by the Post Office Department, and will not be allowed further use of the mails. Their paper, the National Recorder, was included in the fraud order, and any letters addressed to them will be stamped "fraudulent" and returned to writer, if address is on envelope; otherwise they will be sent to the writer through the Dead Letter Office. Newspapers which continue to carry Wedderburn & Co's. advertisement after knowing of this fraud order may find themselves in trouble with the postal authorities.

Senator Wolcott arrived in Washington this week and had a conference with Mr. McKinley about the fizzle trip of himself and colleagues to Europe, in search of that latter-day "Holy Grail" known as international bimetallism. The Senator used to be almost always willing to talk to the newspaper men, but he now declines all invitations to discuss the failure in which he played such a conspicuous part.

Lemuel Eli Quigg, who was Boss Platt's mouthpiece in the recent New York municipal campaign and who is about the most discredited political prophet of the day, was at the White House this week. His interview with Mr. McKinley may or may not have included Cuban affairs, but, when it is remembered how he shouted for free Cuba during the last sesion of Congress, the following language used by him after he left the White House is considered significant: "I hope that Congress will not attempt to conduct our foreign relations. They are much better left to the administration. There was a time, perhaps, when a resolution conferring belligerent rights upon the Cubans might have been passed without bringing on a war with Spain, but that time has gone. If the Spanish people have a spark of manhood left there could be but one result of any Congressional declaration favoring Cuba. Our people do not want a war with any one. There is no possible compensation for it. We are not in a proper condition of defense, and it is absurd to invite a war until we are ready for one. That is about as complete a flipflop as any man in public life has taken on the Cuban question, and it indicates that the do-nothing policy is to be continued by Mr. McKinley.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Journey, Drought, Grazing Lands. American Desert, Rocky Mountains, Los Angeles.

BY HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

Recalling once more the great amount of rain during the last summer in in Minnesota, it is remarkable that the territory of so much rainfall should be so limited—apparently confined within the boundaries of Minnesota. On my journey from Minnesota, about the middle of September last, an on awakening next morning beyond Sioux City, I noticed many fields of corn killed by drought, being bleached and sear, as if they had been struck by the withering winds and frosts of winter. These effects of the drought were thus apparent on the route to California, through Iowa, Missouri, and Kansas, and 'till the grazing lands adjacent to the Rocky Mountains were reached, where cultivations are conspicuous by their absence.

These grazing lands begin in Western Kansas and continue through Colorado, New Mexico, and Arizona, being part of the country which was described in the old time geographies as the "Great American Desert," and were it not for the grazing and mining industries the term "desert" would not be amiss at present. The aspect of the region impresses one as being a desert; and the short but nutritious growth of grass, which gives nourishment to extensive herds of cattle, does not releive the country of its desolate appearance.

The great scope of country lying between the Missouri river and Rocky mountains ascends continuously towards the latter, raising at the rate of five feet per mile through the first 200 miles beginning at the Missouri River, after which the ascent is steeper, and at the end of 500 miles near the base of the mountains an elevation of about 6000 feet aboye sea level is attained and it is on these higher elevations that the grazing lands are found.

One peculiarity of this vast scope of country, is, that it keeps an even surface with some undulations, almost to the base of the mountains and extending into the mountain passes so that the latter is often a belt of country of considerable width flanked by mountains and peaks in the distance, so that one travelling across the continent is not always winding around steep mountain sides and declivities, but is moving along smoothly over a prairie like country with characteristics of a desert. This even prairie-like surface ends at the eastern base of the Rockies and summits of the passes, and on crossing to the Pacific slope more undulating and broken country, running into foot hills and mountains is approached, but a great deal of the belt of country constituting the Rocky mountains is not continuous high mountains with peaks and irregularities, much of it being a fairly even like surface. Along the U. P. R. R. in Wyoming large tracts of prairie land lie at an elevation running from 6,000 to 8,000 feet above sea level and constitute the summit of the Rockies at that place, and in Arizona along the Santa Fe route, a comparatively even surface covered with scattering timber meets the tourists eye from the window of a R. R. coach, beyond which high mountains are visible. The elevations of latter, along the R. R., run from 5,000 to 8,000 feet. In New Mexico hawever there are some high mountains crossed, as the Ratan mountains, where the Santa Fe route passes through the state line tunnel on the boundary betweeen Colorado and New Mexico, and also opposite the City of Santa Fe another spur of the Rockies is crossed. Between these mountains, howeyer, there are large bodies of prairie lands, adaptable either to grazing or cultivation. Higher mountain regions, embracing Pike's Peak, Long's Peak and other mountains constituting continuous chains, exist in Colorado, which are perhaps the highest elevations of the Rocky mountains in the United States; those mountains being much lower near the British and Mexican boundaries. The R. R. lines running through central Colorado to Salt Lake attain much higher elevations, than lines running north or south of the boundaries of Colorado. These Colorado railways attain elevations of of 10,000 and 11,000 feeet.

Approaching the boundary of California in passing through Arizona on the Santa Fe route this modified mountain surface continues, but the tourist casting his eyes northward will see the mountains lying toward the Grand Canyon of the Colorada river, and one of the peculiarities of those mountains is the evenness of their crests which continue for many miles, carrying the appearance as the eye traces them above the horizon, as if an immense carpenters plane had reduced them to a perfect straightness parallel to the horizon and the ends of these mountains drop off as abruptly from their straight crests as if the mechanic had sawed them off after straightening the crests. On this route the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River is not visible and at the crossing of the river into California these straight crested mountains have faded into the distance, but some interesting mountain scenery known as the "Needles" is visible at the crossing where there is also a town knon as "The Needles." On crossing the river into California the Mojave or Mohave desert is entered, through which the train passes 170 miles to Barstow. This is truly a desert, for in summer time no water is apparent either by stream or artesian wells, the R. R. company bringing water to supply its water stations in tanks from great distances. At one part of this desert there is a stream known as the Mojave or Mohave river which after running several miles on the surface disappears in the sands of the desert and at a long distance, in the trend of the desert the stream once more comes to the surface. This is a characteristic of California streams or as expressed by some eccentric persons: "The California rivers are turned bottom side up", but the Mojave river is perhaps the most prominen in this peculiarity. After passing Barstow, the Cajon Pass through the San Bernardino mountains is reached followed by the approach of the train to the City of San Bernardino, after which numerous thrifty towns including Azusa, Monroyia, and Pasadena are passed and finally the City of the Angels, Los Angeles is reached.

Dead Against Gold.

Washington, Nov. 12.—It is claimed today that a canvass of the Senate indicates that neither Secretary Gage's financial plan nor any other which provides for bonds payable specifically in gold instead of "coin" can secure a majority of that body. The preliminary canvass seems to show a majority of fifteen against the foundation stone of the plans of both Secretary Gage and the monetary commission. It is believed that the majority would be even larger against the retirement of the greenbacks.—Times.

Tree Culture For Wood Pulp.

By J. O. Barrett, Secretary of the Minnesota State Forestry Association.

Pulp men concede that no other substance, as yet discovered, is equal to spruce, as a basic fibre, for white paper. Their pulp and paper mills consume full 65 percent of all the spruce trees in the United States. Standing spruce in Minnesota is officiall reported at 1050,000,000 feet. It is questionable whether our cut for pulp and other purposes is proportional to that of some states in the east, where the manufacture is more concentrated. To avert a pending famine of the raw material, different companies are buying up large tracts of cut over and abandoned lands to raise spruces from seeds and seedlings. The annual output for making wood pulp board is about 65,000 tons. From sulphite pulp, consuming wood pulp, is manufactured manilla papers whose annual output is 300,00 tons, Pulp is also manufactured into building materials, tubs, pails, mosaic blocks, carriage bodies, bullets for rifle use, protective armor for torpedoes, soles for boots and shoes, alcohol, food products, bedding, silk yarn for garments. In fact there is no end to the practical and and beautiful utilities to which wood pulp is appropriated, and yet the instructive industry is but in its infancy. During the last ten years the increase of the business is estimated at 500 per cent. Spruce does not impart an offensive odor like pine and some other woods hence is much sought to manufacture water pails, butter tubs, etc. from sawed or pulp material. A certain percentage of poplar is generally mixed with the spruce pulp to produce the desired texture.

Pulp men use both white and black spruces. The latter is more common. They can readily be raised on burnt or other open and properly drained areas in the woodlands. In the early spring loosen up the dark soil to fineness; mix proportional, five quarts of spruce seeds with thirty quarts of oats, and sow broadcast; harrow them in; keep out all fires and rumaging stock. They will then take care of themselves. This method is not so available in the open country. For quick growth and quick profit from the prairie plantation, it is better to plant white and Norway spruces, being hardier than the black, when the seedlings are about six inches high. Plant in the spring after the ground is deeply and well pulverized and sunned, placing them, say four feet apart for easy culture, and in due time thin out as needed for the "fittest". Rightly managed, the spruces and poplars can be profitably cut when 15 to 20 years old. Certain it is that no other crop will pay so well in the near future. Such groves are very healthful, beautiful and protective to the home and farm. Strange indeed it is that so many of our citizens, and not a few farmers, will run wild over the Klondike gold discoveries, risking life in an arctic climate, when here in our sunny region a surer fortune is attainable.

Women cannot become lawyers in Delaware—so the supreme court of that state decides—because lawyers are state officers, and persons who can't vote cannot be state officers.

In his recent report Gen. Miles says the American Indians are "making rapid progress toward permanent settlement and semi-civilization." That "semi" is a little hard on both the Indians and permanent settlers.

Sensational newspapers have done much to mislead the public in the matter of great fortunes. The great fortunes are not nearly so great as the sensational newspapers have represented them to be. It is worthy of notice that, as a rule, the inventory of a dead man's estate shows it to be much less than it had been represented to be during his lifetime.

The Oklahoma divorce mills will probably not run overtime any more, now that Judge John R. Thomas, of the United States court, has rendered a decision declaring that the publication of warning notices to defendants is not sufficient and that actual service must be had to make the proceedings legal. This decision will apply to all the territories and will make the procurement of divorce less easy.

Apparently the American people are not drinking as much beer and whisky as has been their habit heretofore. During the year ended June 30, 1897, only 62,465,648 taxable gallons of distilled spirits, exclusive of fruit brandies, were produced in this country, against 86,588,703 gallons the previous year. In the same time only 34,462,822 barrels of beer were brewed, against 35,859,250 the year before.

The great popularity of the American girl abroad is illustrated by the fact that the brother of the khedive of Egypt is willing to renounce all claims to the throne of the Pharoahs if he is allowed to marry a citizeness of the United States whom he met during a recent journey in Europe. All she had to do was to cast her bright eyes on the scion of African royalty and he was at once captured. American girls come high, but the aristocracy of the effete eastern hemisphere must have them.

England is about to build a torpedo boat destroyer, which is expected to attain a speed of 40 knots an hour. The progress made recently in building fast vessels of this type has been so remarkable that even so terrific a speed as this will not be accounted impossible. It seems a pity though that the inventors do not devote their efforts more exclusively to improving the speed of vessels whose mission is purely peaceful. The world would probably wag along quite as well if great speed were not secured for the warships.

Gen. Greely believes that near the north pole there is a considerable body of land covered with ice from half a mile to several miles in thickness. Dr. Nansen believes that the vicinity of the pole is occupied by a deep sea covered with ice not above 15 feet thick. "You pays your money and you takes your choice." Nobody has as yet reached the pole, unless it is Andree, and he, poor fellow, remains to be heard from; and consequently the opinion of one scientific gentleman in the arctic line is of no greater value than that of any of his competitors in the same branch of business.

Lord Kelvin, the great English engineer, is reported as having prophesied that our children's children are never likely to see the Niagara cataract. He believes that the whole water from Lake Erie will find its way down to Lake Ontario through machinery which will be more beneficial to the world than the contemplating of the magnificent scene which the waterfall now presents. Further, that there will be a revival of the prosperity in the Highlands of Scotland; that the people will be happy and industrious, occupied largely in manufactures. All this to come from the water power of the country.

Can the dumb be made to speak? Inventor Berliner says they can, and that, too, without much difficulty. He has devised an apparatus which he asserts will produce sound in the mouth, and with its aid all a mute will have to do to talk as well as anybody is to go through the motions of articulation with the tongue, lips and teeth. Of course the speech will be in a monotone, but it will serve all practical purposes. If this is true, the invention will be of great value. The scientists should now set to work to discover some way to make the deaf hear. That ought not to be any more difficult than it is to make the dumb talk.

THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

Postmaster-General Gary's First Report to the President.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The first annual report of Postmaster-General James A. Gary to the president is made public. Its feature is the strong advocacy of postal savings depositories, as a scheme over which Postmaster-General Gary has worked for many months in the formulation of plans to present to the president and congress. He says the time is ripe for their establishment, and that the adoption of a well-organized system would confer a great boon upon a large number of people and ultimately be of inestimable benefit to the whole country. The estimates of the revenues and expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, are:

Total postal revenue for 1897, $82,665,462.73; add five per cent., $4,133,273.13. Estimated revenue for 1898, $86,798,735.86; add seven per cent., $6,075,911.51. Total estimated revenue for 1899, $92,874,647.37; estimated expenditures for 1898, $98,922,760; deficiency for 1899, estimated, $6,048,112.63.

Following is an abstract of the report:

The increase of the postal deficit for 1897 is largely a reflection of the depressed business conditions which prevailed all over the United States during the first three-quarters of that period. There has been no extravagance of expenditure save that obligated by law. Reiterating the injustice inflicted both upon the postal revenues and the people by second-class mail matter carriage regulations, the enactment by congress of some measure to remedy the wrong, similarly pointed out by past postmaster-generals, is urged. As to this the postmaster-general says: "If this were done there would be an end to postal deficits, and the service could be enlarged and popularized by the broad extension of free delivery without infringement upon the general resources of the government, and eventually result in the much-desired reduction of letter postage to one cent per ounce."

No method of perfecting the organization of the postal service has proved more effective than the consolidation of post offices. Legislative restrictions on its development are to be regretted, and a repeal of the five-mile limit consolidation measure in the 1896 postal appropriation bill is recommended.

The experimental rural free delivery has been generously appreciated; few expenditures have conferred greater benefits in proportion, and it has unquestionably proved a potent factor in attaining what should be a chief aim of government, the granting of the best possible postal facilities to the farming class.

The report reviews in detail the operations of the various branches of the department. The portion on the subject of postal savings, in brief, follows: "Many millions of dollars are undoubtedly secreted by people who have little or no confidence in ordinary securities and monetary institutions organized by private citizens. It is dead capital, but if its owners could be inspired with absolute confidence in the security of an investment, it is altogether probable that the bulk of this fund would find its way into the channels of trade and commerce. If the government undertook this task, the service would undoubtedly be gladly accepted by the people. Their faith in the government is unbounded. Their little savings, which separately could hardly be put out at interest, would amount in the aggregate to a sum that could be invested to their advantage. It would tend to cultivate thrift in a large class; realizing the advantage of depositing with the government instead of wastefully and uselessly expending, it would tend to better relationship, bring into closer relationship the government and its citizens and develop practical and enduring patriotism. This growth of patriotic sentiment and good citizenship constitutes a powerful appeal to statesmanship to make a way for these beneficent consequences.

The proposition is an accomplished fact in nearly every country in Europe, in the British dependencies of both hemispheres, and even in Hawaii. In Great Britain 7,000,000 depositors have upward of $550,000,000 in savings accumulated during 35 years, and in ten years fewer than 10,000 Hawaiian depositors saved nearly $1,000,000. Deposits in Canada in 20 years exceeded $22,000,000. These vast accumulations have been made with the least possible loss to the governments which guarantee their repayment and with a minimum of cost to the millions of depositors. More than a thousand postal savings accounts in European offices are held by minors, and over two-thirds by the most humble callings. It is essentially the bank of this class. Postal savings would not conflict with those savings banks, but would encourage savings rather than accumulations. The conversion of money-order offices into savings depositories would soon afford infinitely more facility for receiving interest-bearing deposits than the interest-paying banks do now. The most aggressive opponents are among the private institutions engaged in somewhat similar enterprises, though associations of the larger cities recognize in it a valuable feeder to the financial currents of the country. Security, and not the rate of interest, is the primary and essential condition of such a system; and bonds of states, counties and municipalities and real estate furnish an illimitable field.

Comparing other countries, the postmaster-general says nearly every country permits its most popular coin as the minimum amount of deposit, varying from five cents in India to one dollar in Canada. Maximum deposits vary from $285 in France to $2,435 in New Zealand. Deposits over the amount are non-interest bearing, and in several countries the surplus is by law invested in national bonds. Both deposits and accounts are usually small. France made a profit in 1895 of $170,000 in handling 2,500,000 accounts, aggregating $143,000,000 after paying three per cent. interest. Great Britain earned a surplus of $83,000 after paying 2½ per cent. interest on $480,000,000, made up of 6,500,000 accounts. The average commission paid to postmasters is one per cent. per deposit. Any account may be settled and withdrawn from any depository in the country. The telegraph is coming into use as a means of withdrawal.

Many Are Idle.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 16.—All the departments of the British Hosiery company at Thornton, with the exception of the spinning department, were shut down Monday and 425 operatives are out of work. Some time ago the knitters to the number of 50 struck for an advance of 20 per cent. in wages. Treasurer Cooper says he had found the operatives who remained at work were supporting those on strike, hence his action in shutting down the department. It is announced that operatives will be taken back only as they apply for work as individuals.

Postponed.

London, Nov. 15.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says: At the request of Marshal Blanco, the government has postponed to the 25th of November the publication of the decree of autonomy for the West Indies. This is with a view of gazetting all the reforms at the same time and of allowing Marshal Blanco, meanwhile, to push operations against the insurgents, and to complete the reorganization of the colony.

Woolen Mills Close.

Clinton, Mass., Nov. 15.—The woolen mills of the Bigelow Carpet company have shut down for an indefinite period. The woolen mills employ over 300 people. The other departments of the plant will run with a reduced working force for some time. The cause of the curtailment is the depression in the carpet manufacturing industry. The mills have been shut down at intervals during the past four years.

Five Score Years and Five.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—The oldest Hebrew in the United States celebrated his birthday Monday. His name is Lazar Greengard and at noon he rounded the 105th year of his life. At the residence of his son, Solomon, in North Tenth street, he received his friends and kindred, the latter including six children, 36 grandchildren, 58 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.

MAKES A GOOD SHOWING.

Annual Report of the Receiver of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 16.—The stockholders of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad held their annual meeting in this city and received the annual report of John K. Cowen, the president and co-receiver of the system.

It shows gross earnings for the year ending June 30, 1897, of $25,582,122, an increase of $1,637,340 over the previous year and $2,764,930 more than in 1895. The total expenses of the line were $20,012,693, an increase of $2,429,673. This increase is very frankly explained by the statement of the large sums required in maintenance of way and maintenance of equipment. The receivers have replaced a large number of old bridges built many years ago with modern steel structures, capable of carrying the heaviest trains, and have made other improvements besides putting all equipment in first-class condition. The deficit for the year was $1,177,120, but had it not been for the increase in expenses of maintenance of way and of equipment the earnings would have been more than sufficient to have paid the interest on the bonded indebtedness of the road.

The report shows a radical reduction made in the amount to the credit of profit and loss. A special committee of the board was appointed to examine the assets of the company and revalue the rolling stock and bonds and certain other assets. This committee made a radical reduction in the value of the rolling stock, stocks and bonds and advances for construction to the various subordinate lines during the year past and certain other assets of the company, reducing the total to the credit of profit and loss by about $20,500,000. The balance sheet gives a very clear and full statement of assets and liabilities.

The members of the former board of directors were all reelected unanimously, 163,740 shares of stock being voted.

A Mob's Work in North Dakota.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 15. — Alex Coudot, Indian half breed, Paul Holytrack and Philip Ireland, full blooded Indians, the first of whom was sentenced to death for the murder of six members of the Spicer family last February, and has just been granted a new trial by the supreme court, and the latter two self-confessed accessories in the murder, were taken from the county jail in Emmons county Saturday night and lynched by a mob. The lynching had been apparently coolly planned and was carried out without a break in the programme, and sudden and swift retribution was meted out by the mob to the murderers. Williamsport, where the hanging took place, is about 40 miles from this city and off the railroad.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 16.—Chief Justice Corliss, of the supreme court of North Dakota, said Monday: "An innocent man was hanged by lynchers at Williamsport Sunday night." Justice Corliss also said that he had ample documentary evidence to prove that Coudot, one of the three Indians hanged by the mob, was not guilty of connection with the murder of the Spicer family.

Dr. Susan A. Edson Is Dead.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Dr. Susan A. Edson, one of the best-known physicians in the United States, and for many years a resident of Washington, died Friday in her seventy-fifth year. Dr. Edson was one of the physicians summoned to attend President Garfield after he was shot, and during the long illness of the president she was at his bedside more frequently than was any other of the attending physicians. As a mark of appreciation for her services to Mr. Garfield congress voted Dr. Edson $3,000. She was for many years physician to the Garfield family. The deceased was of a most unselfish character, and it was said of her that while she wore out more horses and carriages than any other doctor in town in visiting the sick she never rendered a bill for her services. If her patients paid her it was all right, and if they did not she found no fault.

Imports and Exports.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The monthly statement of the imports and exports issued by the bureau of statistics shows the exports for domestic merchandise during October last to have amounted to $109,583,842, a loss of nearly $2,500,000, as compared with October, 1896. The imports of merchandise during October are shown to have been $49,696,813, of which $24,334,333 was free of duty. For the last ten months a gain of $79,292,702 is shown over the corresponding period of last year in the exports of merchandise, and a gain of $64,555,273 in the imports. During last October the exports of gold amounted to $301,616 and the imports to $11,340,786. The silver exports during October aggregated $5,225,342, and the imports $1,691,661. In October, 1896, the silver exported amounted to $4,794,339 and the imports to $993,440.

Surprise to Depositors.

English, Ind., Nov. 15.—Every resident of Crawford county was shocked Saturday morning when it was learned that the English bank had failed to open its doors. Coupled with this came the report that President Willet, of the Leavenworth branch, had not been seen for three days, and that his mind was temporarily unbalanced over the death of his mother. As soon as the failure became known the bank's branches at Leavenworth, Cannellton and Marengo also closed. Nearly every farmer in Crawford and Perry counties is said to be concerned in the failure for amounts ranging from $200 to $3,000. County Treasurer Brown has placed more than $10,000 in the suspended bank.

The Last Bulletin.

New Orleans, Nov. 13.—The following is the last daily official bulletin that will be issued this season by the board of health concerning the status of affairs in New Orleans as regards yellow fever: Cases of yellow fever Friday, 7; deaths, 2; total cases of yellow fever to date, 1,790; total deaths to date, 259; cases absolutely recovered, 1,110; total cases under treatment, 421.

Braidwood (Ill.) District Idle.

Braidwood, Ill., Nov. 15.—With the exception of Carbon Hill the miners of this district have succeeded in bringing about a complete suspension again, and at a secret meeting held in Coal City Sunday night arrangements were made to again tie up the Carbon Hill mines if it became necessary.

Remarkable Time.

New York, Nov. 13.—Charles M. Murphy, a member of the Kings County Wheelmen and a record holder of many years' standing on the cycle path, rode a mile Friday afternoon in the startling time of 1:00 4-5.

Spanish Press Approves.

Madrid, Nov. 13.—The press generally approves the decree pardoning exiles from Cuba and Porto Rico. All foreigners will be handed over to the care of the consuls of their respective governments.

SOVEREIGN IS OUT.

Knights of Labor Pick a New Leader —Change Amicably Effected.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—James R. Sovereign, who has been general master workman of the Knights of Labor for the past four years or more, and who during that time has been one of the ablest champions of the order and its doctrines, was on Friday afternoon relieved of his office by the general assembly, which has been in session in this city since Monday last. Under ordinary conditions Mr. Sovereign's term of office would not expire until the next meeting. This, however, it is said, makes no difference with the order, whose general officers during a meeting are always in the hands of the assembly and can be chosen and deposed at the will of the majority. Along with Mr. Sovereign there were three other officers retired because of the special election, viz.: T. B. McGuir, general worthy foreman, of Amsterdam, N. Y., and Daniel Brown, of Montana, and H. B. Martin, of Minnesota, members of the executive committee.

Henry A. Hicks, of New York, district 253, New York city, was chosen to fill Mr. Sovereign's place, and T. D. Chamberlain, of Pueblo, Col., was selected as general worthy foreman. Sarsfield Fitzpatrick, of Montreal, and Henry Rostock, of Assembly 300, glass workers, were chosen as the two members of the executive board, the third member being Andrew D. Best.

This very decided change in the corps of general officers of the Knights of Labor will cause considerable astonishment in labor circles. Save to those who were on the "inside," so to speak, for the past three months, there was absolutely nothing of this known. It is said, though the change was sudden and totally unlooked for, it was done with the amicable consent of all. On good authority it is learned that it is with Mr. Sovereign's most hearty approval that he steps down and out. It is likewise with the appreciation and in fact love of his brethren of the order that this is done. The same holds good with the other officers who were relieved. Mr. Sovereign stated that he wished retirement. He wanted rest from the labor which the office entailed upon him.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 15.—J. R. Sovereign, the retiring general master workman of the Knights of Labor, resigned his position in order that he might push his candidacy for president of the United States in 1900.

Official Count of Ohio's Vote.

Columbus, O., Nov. 16.—The official vote in Ohio for the respective candidates for governor at the last election is thus recorded:

Bushnell (rep.), 429,816; Chapman (dem.), 401,715; Holliday (pro.), 7,558; Coxey (people's party), 6,254; Dexter (national dem.), 1,661; Watkins (socialist labor), 4,242; Lewis (negro protective), 476; Liberty, 3,107. Bushnell's plurality, 28,101.

The senate has 17 known republican members, 18 known democrats and one fusion republican elected on the democratic ticket in Cincinnati. Total, 36. The house has 58 known republican members, 47 known democrats and four fusion republicans elected on the democratic ticket in Cincinnati. Total, 109. On joint ballot the republicans have five majority. If they get the fusion republicans, the majority will be 11. Of the known republicans three have declined to say how they will vote for United States senator. The Hanna men claim all of the other known republicans, which, if the claim is well founded, would give Mr. Hanna a clear majority of two on joint ballot.

Two Girls the Victims.

Holgate, O., Nov. 12.—Word reached this city Thursday evening from Oakwood, a hamlet 15 miles south, of an outrage perpetrated Wednesday night by white caps upon two girls, Edith and May Roberts, aged 19 and 17 years. Ten days ago the two young ladies received a white cap notice warning them to leave the town and county, but they paid no attention to the notice. Thursday evening they retired early, and during the night they were awakened by a band of eight or ten men entering their rooms and dragging them from their beds in their night robes to the nearby road, where they were terribly whipped by a cat-o'-nine-tails. The white caps then gave them a coat of tar and feathers and took them back to the house, where they were found unconscious by people passing by. Bloodhounds were placed upon the trail of the white caps, but owing to heavy rains and the trampling of hundreds of people about the scene, the animals were unable to follow the scent, and no other clew can be found.

Condemns Football.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 16.—The governor of Arkansas is the first chief magistrate to disapprove of the game of football. In a letter to President J. L. Buchanan, of the state university, at Fayettesville, Gov. Jones takes the recent game between the Fort Smith and state university teams as a test, and strongly condemns the sport as brutal and recommends that there be a stop put altogether to the playing of the game by the students of the state university. The governor is ex-officio president of the state university board of trustees.

Bartley's Shortage.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 12.—Otto W. Helbig, the expert who has been engaged for several months in examining the books and accounts of ex-State Treasurer Bartley, has submitted his report to the legislative investigation committee, showing Bartley's shortage to be $870,000. The amount of the defalcation had been variously estimated at from $700,000 to $1,000,000. Bartley is now in Douglas county jail under a 20-year sentence in the penitentiary.

Michael Wins.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Eight thousand people comfortably filled the Coliseum Friday night and cheered the cycling cracks from all parts of the country, who put up some fine sport. The last event was a 15-mile race between James Michael, the Welshman, and E. A. McDuffie, of Boston, the winner to get $1,000 and the loser $500. Michael won, going the 15 miles in 31:07 2-5, beating the record, 32:49, which was held by Tracy Holmes, of Chicago.

Law Sustained.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 16.—The state supreme court has sustained the constitutionality of the inheritance law passed by the last legislature. The law imposes a tax of five per cent. on bequests to any beneficiary not a relative where the estate amounts to over $100. The tax on estates directly inherited, where the value of the estate is over $7,500, is one per cent.

OPENING AN ACCOUNT.

Woman in a Bank for the First Time Makes Trouble.

"A woman opening a bank account for the first time is a peculiar creature," said one of the clerks in a national bank. "One came in a few days ago and glanced around suspiciously. Then she ambled up to the window and said:

"'If you please, I want to deposit some money.'

"'Yes'm; just go to the next window.'

"She stepped over in a careful way, as if she was breaking some rule or other, and, almost in a whisper, said:

"'Is this where they deposit money?'

"'Yes, ma'am. Do you wish to open an account?'

"'Oh, no,' she said. 'I don't want to have anything charged. I just want to deposit my money. Is this bank really safe?'

"She was assured that it was.

"'This bank is as firm as Gibraltar, madam. You have come to the right place. We will have to have your autograph. Just write your name right there.'

"'Oh, I can't write without a stub pen. Haven't you got a stub pen and some nice violet ink?'

"She was fitted out, and in the most careful way imaginable she wrote out her full name. Then she was provided with a deposit book, which she looked at in an inquiring way. She produced her money, hung on to it for a minute, and then handed it in, all rolled up and tied with a thread. The receiving teller counted it in a rapid way and threw it in with the other receipts.

"'Now,' she said, 'this ain't a good bank. You've just gone and thrown my money in with all the rest, and you can never pick it out again. Take your old book and give me my money. And scratch my name off that big autograph album. Mother said you couldn't tell anything about a bank.'

"She was given her little roll, the autograph was scratched off and the deposit ticket destroyed. She flounced out in a decisive way, as much as to say: 'They can't cheat me, if I am a woman.'"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE MISTAKE SHE MADE.

She Did Her Best to Entertain a Bored Guest.

At a party the hostess said to a guest: "I want you to entertain Mr. Blank a little; he looks bored to death. I will introduce him, and you must try to amuse him. You know his strong point is butter, on which he has written a book."

The lady-guest graciously undertook the task of entertaining the man, inwardly wondering that he should be so interested in butter—of which she knew very little—when his face indicated a mind given to much profound thinking.

However, with butter in view, she began on the weather, gradually got to the country, then on to a farm, from that to cows, and at last to butter. The man looked more bored than ever, the magic word "butter" producing not the slightest effect, and he left her somewhat abruptly, and soon withdrew from the house.

"I did my best," she explained to the hostess; "I went through agonies to prove that I was deeply interested in butter, but it was all in vain."

"Butter!" exclaimed the hostess. "What possessed you to talk to that man, of all men, on butter? I told you he had just written a book on Buddha, and I knew how deeply you two were interested in the same subject."

And they said in chorus: "Gracious!"—Tit-Bits.

B. & O. Improvements Completed.

The improvements on the Main Line of the Baltimore and Ohio, west of, and between Martinsburg, W. Va., and North Mountain, have been completed November 1st. They cover a distance of nearly four miles, starting three miles west of Martinsburg, and extending some distance west of Myers Hole, which is near the North Mountain station. At Myers Hole the line was changed, taking out some very objectionable curvature, and the roadbed raised nearly fifteen feet, eliminating two grades of 42 feet per mile which came together at Myers Hole and substituting therefor an almost level track. This point on the road has always been a dangerous one, and many freight wrecks have occurred there. Apart from doing away with the dangerous feature of two sharp down grades coming together, as was the case in this instance, the saving in operation of the road by the change will be very large, as it enables the tons per train to be greatly increased and reduces the liability of accident to the minimum. At Tablers the road-bed has been lowered about 13 feet, and the same at Tabbs, besides taking out objectionable curvature and reducing the rate of grades at these points from 42 feet per mile to 10 feet per mile, thus increasing the cars that can be hauled per train. Though these improvements have cost quite a sum of money, the expenditure is fully justified by the great saving in operation.

What It Was.

Papa—Alice, I thought I heard a loud smack in the hall last night.

Alice—Yes, Mr. Upsley made that noise with his lips when I told him you had cleared $50,000 in a wheat deal.—Cleveland Leader.

THE TURN OF LIFE

Is the most important period in a woman's existence. Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. Those hot flashes are just so many calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The Vegetable Compound is an invigorating strengthener of the female organism. It builds up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass that grand change triumphantly.

It does not seem necessary for us to prove the honesty of our statements, but it is a pleasure to publish such grateful words as the following:

"I have been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time during the change of life and it has been a saviour of life unto me. I can cheerfully recommend your medicine to all women, and I know it will give permanent relief. I would be glad to relate my experience to any sufferer."—MRS. DELLA WATSON, 524 West 5th St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Farmer Jimpson's Thanksgiving

AIN'T no use talkin', you couldn't make
Ol' Jimpson look at the bright side o' things;
'Twan't in the man; his head 'u'd shake
F'm side to side an' 'e 'd have his flings:

"Me skimpin' an' savin' and what do I git?
'Sprise me ef we ain't in the po' house yit!"

He 'uz always sneerin' an' snarlin' like,
Be blest ef I knowed what alled the man;
Ef wunst in aw'ile he'd make a strike
He'd growl at even his payin'est plan:
" 'Tain't me that's gittin' a drea'ful lot—
Lord knows I sweated fur what I got."

One year w'en the craps was pow'ful big,
An' the cribs wuz crackin' with piled up co'n,
I met 'im drivin' his shacklin' rig
A-lookin 'ez if 'is sand wuz gone—
"Fine Thanksgivin' weather," I sez; sez he:
"Won't be no thankin' this year by me!"

"They won't?" sez I—an' the way he growled!
"You bet they won't!" an, he cracked his whup,
An' up the road he sorter scowled:
"Be durned ef I've got w'at I ain't dug up;
'N' lost that fine bay mare," sez 'e,
" 'N' co'n is a drug fur ez I kin see.

"Fact is, I've had it pretty hard all roun',
'N' I'm kinder sore on the whole blame thing;
I've felt so mean, yere, drivin' to town
Jes' lookin' 'a-back, that y' know, by jing,
I'm re'lly glad, ez I'm sittin here,
There's nothin' to be thankful fur this year!"

Sue's Thanksgiving

FOR DAYS the Deanes had been making ready for the corn-roast. The boys had chosen the tallest, slightest saplings, and trimmed and cut them until they were like exaggerated fishing rods, with sharply-pointed ends. All the brush and small logs had been gathered and drawn on the stone drag to the high pasture, and piled on the summit of its grassy swell, where the hills and valleys could be seen sinking and rising far and wide, the endless ridges of the Green mountains sweeping away to the east and the blue Adirondacks closing the western view. It was the finest farm in northern Vermont, old Mr. Deane had always declared; and the high pasture had been for generations a favorite place for coasting parties and corn-roasts. It was more popular than ever now, since Sue Deane was the handsomest girl in the county, and counted her swains by the dozen.

"I don't know how Sue's ever goin' to settle down," said her mother, plaintively; "for there's no one man will humor her the way they all do now. And then, Sue's so masterful; she's as sweet-tempered as you please, but she always has her own way in the end."

"Sue's obedient enough, as far as I see," replied Mr. Deane.

"Well, father, she is to you, and always has been; but, dear me! with everybody else she does what she pleases. I will say she's generally right; but that's just it—she's got as much sense, and more, than most of her beaux, and she ain't likely to find a husband she can't rule. And that's poison to a woman like Sue; she needs to be managed herself. There's just one I'd choose for her, and that's Tom Kellogg. But then, my land! he's not the kind to stand bein' played with, and Sue's not the kind to give up her ways for anybody, so there ain't much hope of it."

"Tom's a good fellow," said Mr. Deane. " 'Tain't every boy could work through college 'nd law school, 'nd get into practice in a city, as he has in Burlington. And Sue and he, knowin' each other from children, ef they don't understand each other by now they never will. I think it'll likely be a match."

Mrs. Deane shook her head. Accustomed to be ruled by her daughter's will, she had little faith in any man's combating its caprices successfully. In the main she was right. That very day Sue was planning in her coquettish mind how to tease Tom Kellogg at the coming corn-roast. Sue treated other admirers as she chose; but she felt Tom was different, and liked him all the better for not being sure whether she could trifle with him or not. On this occasion, being especially tender to him in her thoughts, she was prepared to be especially baffling in behavior; for, deep in her woman's heart, she knew that all the delaying, all the coquetting in the world were not going to keep her lover from speaking before his short vacation was over and he went back to the city; and meanwhile there was the sweetness of an understanding no less strong because it was yet unspoken.

Soft and clear the September evening drew on. The whole neighborhood was invited to the roast. They came in buggies, in carryalls, in hay wagons; and, one group after another, they climbed the dewy steeps of the hill pasture. But Tom Kellogg did not come, and Sue's brown eyes sparkled with impatience and a touch of anger at so unexpected a turn of the tables. Finally, when the big bonfire had been lighted, and everyone was gathering about it, Tom's buggy drove up to the foot of the hill, and he helped out of it a very young and very pretty girl—Miss Eleanor Cabell, the city boarder at his aunt's. Poor Tom! it was not his fault, and Sue might have known it; but the amantis irae is proverbially unreasonable. The facts were that Miss Cabell was young, charming, ignorantly enthusiastic, had never seen a corn-roast, and thought she was conferring a great favor upon Tom by accompanying him, not dreaming that his aunt had begged him to invite her. Entirely ignorant of his affair with Sue, she claimed him, sweetly and unconsciously, for her own.

"Oh, how beautiful!" she cried, as they climbed the slope, and saw the great bonfire flaming up on the summit. "Do take me close to it, Mr. Kellogg!" and she chattered away to him, with little shrieks of admiration, as the wide streaks of flame shot high into the air and flared upon the summer wind. The one huge pine tree, stretching its wide branches upon the summit, was so near the blazing pile of logs and brush that one big limb caught a waft of the flame, and the needles snapped with crackling explosions. "Oh, will it be quite safe?" cried Eleanor, and clung for an instant to her escort's arm. Sue, passing near, felt a swift desire to strangle her on the spot.

But that was only the beginning, for Miss Cabell was either appealing to Tom or ordering him around for the next two hours. First, she must have a choice ear of corn selected for her out of the big basket, heaped up to overflowing with the green, tasseled sheaths. Then, with her own white hands, he must show her how to impale it upon the sharpened end of the long, lithe sapling, and she would insist upon fixing one for him, too. Then the right place must be chosen, where she could lower the corn, at the end of the swaying rod, into the heart of the glowing fire, now sunken to an irregular circle of white-hot embers. This necessitated getting so near to the bonfire that the heat reddened her pretty cheeks, and Tom's big handkerchief had to be called into play. Holding it before her face with one hand, and peeping round the edge of it, with many appeals as to whether she was holding the corn right, and was it done, and was he sure the sapling wouldn't catch fire and burn her up, Miss Eleanor Cabell was certainly a bewitching spectacle—one of those charming, helpless, winsome little women whom all men enjoy. How was Sue to know that Tom wasn't enjoying it? When he managed to cross to her side for a moment, he found her absolutely stony to him and flirting desperately with Will Adams; and he was soon almost as angry as she was.

The merriment grew and heightened as the evening went on. The smoking, blackened, sizzling ears of corn were withdrawn from the fire, sprinkled with salt, and, hot and tender beyond description, were eaten, amid a general chatter and fun. More and yet more were stripped from their silken sheaths, toasted and consumed; and, in the dying embers, apples were cozily roasted as a dessert. The great ring of fire died into a dim glow, and then into a mere twinkle of light here and there among the ashes; the stars came out over the hills, and the wind ceased, leaving a balmy clearness in the far spaces of the night. It was time for going home, so the revelers joined hands, and ended the corn-roast by dancing in a ring about the fire, and trampling out the last embers, keeping time to their flying feet by an old-fashioned chorus as they swung round and round. Miss Cabell was charmed with this; she danced like a fairy, and laughed like a child as she tripped in the swaying circle. Everyone admired her, and thought Tom Kellogg in luck. Sue heard the comment everywhere; she was irritated beyond feminine endurance; and when, as the ring broke, and the groups scattered again, to wend their way down the hill in the starlit softness of the night, Tom at last found his opportunity to speak with her, she was in her most exasperating mood:

"I AM GOING AWAY DAY AFTER TO-MORROW, SUE."

"I am going away day after to-morrow, Sue. Can I see you to-morrow?"

"Will Adams is going to drive me over to Fair Haven to-morrow. I shall stop at Aunt Sylvia's, and I won't be back again until Monday," she said, stiffly.

"Sue," said Tom, shortly, all his innate masterfulness coming to the surface; "if you don't see me before I go, you'll not probably see me again!"

This was dangerous. Sue knew he was right, and that she ought to give him a chance to explain; but she was not the stuff of which patient Grizels are made. And just at this critical moment, a sweet voice said, out of the darkness at his elbow:

"Oh, Mr. Kellogg, isn't it a pity it's all over, and we have to go home! Miss Deane, it has been so delightful; we have enjoyed it so much!"

It was Miss Cabell, radiant and unsuspecting. Her "we" was the finishing touch. Sue's face hardened into determination.

"You must get Mr. Kellogg to show you other things of interest in our country life," she said, sweetly; "he has a little while before he goes back, and will be at your service, I am sure. Good-by, Mr. Kellogg; I hope you will have a pleasant winter in the city."

"Good-by," said Tom, holding out his hand. Sue turned away, ignoring it, and began talking and laughing with Will Adams, who was hanging about, waiting to take her down the hill, and whom she knew Tom particularly disliked. And that was the end of the corn-roast.

It was Thanksgiving day. The family gathering had taken place at the Wilcox homestead this year, for Mrs. Deane and Mrs. Wilcox were sisters, and alternated the festival. Mr. Deane, this time, however, was ill in bed, and his wife stayed to nurse him. Sue came over with the Alcotts, who were cousins and lived a mile or so beyond the Deane farm. The day had been eminently successful; the dinner was a triumph of Mrs. Wilcox's skill; the pies were flaky, the turkey savory, the cranberry a chef d'oeuvre of jellied richness, the cake bewildering in variety and lightness. Outside, a whirling snowstorm had raged all day, but with a dozen merry guests, and the hearty Wilcoxes to boot, there had been no lack of gayety and fun in the old homestead. It stood just outside the village, and now and then, during the afternoon, a neighbor went by in his sleigh, and waved his hand to the windows. Tom Kellogg passed, in the cutter, with the colt; he was only at home for a day or two, and Sue saw him with a great throb of her heart, and a realization, for the hundredth time since their quarrel, of how much she loved him and how foolish she had been. Sue was a just, clear-headed little woman, in spite of her coquetry; she recognized that Tom was in the right, and that he was taking the only dignified stand possible. He had gone back to the city without making any effort to see her, and she knew, as well as if he had told her, that he would not change his attitude until she made some sign. Yet she knew, also, that he loved her as much as ever, and was no more liable to change, in that steadfast affection, than in the quiet determination that controlled it. Tom had turned the tables on her and gained the mastery. She vowed she would not yield; but she felt her day of coquetry was over, whether she chose or not.

Through all Thanksgiving day each had been thinking of the other. At church, during the long and weighty discourse, which sent the younger members to sleep even upon the hard seats of the high-backed pews, Tom was contemplating the side view of his sweetheart's pretty head, with a mingled desire to shake her and kiss her, as one might a naughty but bewitching child. When he drove the cutter in the afternoon, it was not chance that took him by the Wilcox place. He longed to be within those hospitable walls, to join in the games that he knew were going on, with the chance, perhaps, for a moment to hold that nymph-like figure in his arms, or get one good look into those willful, dancing eyes. It would have been easy enough to go in; but Tom was a Spartan, and crushed down such weak desires. And Sue looked out, and hoped against hope that he would come in, and was gayer than ever in all the games, and sang as lightly as a bird in the songs that were started when Cousin Abby Alcott sat down to the melodeon, and was very wretched underneath—and, altogether, it was anything but a thankful Thanksgiving to both of them.

Fate, however, often mocks us gently before offering us a favor. Cousin Reuben Alcott, an elderly man, and cautious as to his chronic enemy, the rheumatism, began to worry over the continued storm. Finally he disappeared, and held a long consultation with Mr. Wilcox; and as Tom Kellogg came by for the second time on his road home the two hailed him, and brought him in, covered with snowflakes, his eyes bright and his cheeks flushed with the cold. Sue felt her cheeks flush, too, with irrepressible joy; but she assumed entire carelessness.

"I was jest a-sayin' thet 'twas too stormy fer me'n Abby to drive home to-night, Sue; so we'll stay over till to-morrer," announced Cousin Reuben. "Tom Kellogg, here, 'll take you home, fer it's on his road, 'nd I guess you won't mind swappin' us old folks fer a young beau."

Cousin Reuben cackled at his own joke, and the rest joined in. Sue and Tom laughed, too, but hardly with effusion. There is nothing more serious than a love affair to those concerned. It seemed to both of them that the next hour or so would never be over. The games were all done by this time, but singing was still in order, and the unlimited consumption of nuts, apples and cider, before the gathering finally broke up. The storm gradually ceased howling and sank away to a calm, so that when the good-bys had all been said, and the various teams were being harnessed, the sky was almost clear, and only a few drifting clouds obscured the stars.

Tom was so afraid that Cousin Reuben might reconsider that he brought the colt and cutter up before the rest of the teams were ready. The colt was prancing and eager; Sue, well wrapped in shawls and hood, was tucked in hurriedly; Tom jumped in, and they were off. Sue gave a little sigh of relief in the depths of her hood, for she had been afraid of Cousin Reuben, too. And yet, now that she was safely beside her lover, her old tormenting spirit rose within her, and she resolved she would not make a sign, after all.

The colt forged ahead through the feathery, piled-up snow. On each side the world stretched glittering and cold under the frosty stars. The keen air brought the blood to the cheeks, and stirred every pulse of life to the rhythm of the dancing bells on the harness. Tom sat upright as a statue, looking neither to the right nor the left. Sue waited two minutes for him to speak—five—ten. They would be at home in half an hour. He expected her to begin, and she never could—and she must—and it was very unkind of him—and he was right—and oh, she couldn't! Having arrived at this point, two big tears rolled down her cheeks, and she said, in a very trembling voice:

"Tom!"

Tom, who had felt his resolution slipping away from him momently, and whose heart was one ache of tenderness toward the willful little bundle of shawls at his side, turned rapturously, with a jerk. The colt felt the rein slacken, seized his opportunity, shied wildly at a fallen branch whose twisted blackness stood threateningly out upon the fresh snow—and, in his swaying rush, turned the cutter over, and threw both of the occupants into the nearest snowdrift. Then he trotted peaceably down the road toward home.

To be shot headforemost into a snowbank is confusing. Exactly what happened, Sue never knew; but the first thing she found herself doing, when she came to her clear senses, was holding on very tight to Tom, and asking him, tenderly and incoherently, if he was hurt. And Tom was laughing. "I'd be willing to have every bone in my body broken, Sue, to know that you care so much!" he whispered, and caught her so close in his strong arms that she was quite reassured as to his safety.

Above them the last cloud had drifted out of the sky. The broad, starlit azure arched over their heads with a friendly clearness and calm. Faintly, yet drawing nearer, came the chiming bells of another sleigh, far down the road. And, sitting in the snowdrift, the lovers kissed each other, and never even knew that it was cold.—Priscilla Leonard, in N. Y. Independent.

GENUINE THANKFULNESS.

One of the Rarest of Human Characteristics.

It ought to be a time of rejoicing for everybody, but it is one only to him who sees that he has so much to be thankful for, and in no particular is manhood so helplessly blind as in this. We carry a long line and a heavy plummet to measure the depth of other people's blessings, and none at all to measure our own. If only we had had the other man's or the other woman's chances, the friends, the influence, the money, the education, whatever they had that we did not, then we, too, would have been successful, happy, and, yes, thankful as the best. But we see what they had that we had not, and, "having eyes we see not" what we had that never came to them.

Genuine thankfulness is one of the rarest of human characteristics. Somebody defines gratitude as "a lively sense of favors to come," and it is true that the average mind is so bent on getting something not yet its own that it has little time to estimate what it has.

And this hunger to get more, and lack of appreciation of what is already bestowed, is one of the elements of weakness that affects our entire domestic, social and national life. In all our holidays we are in danger of substituting words for the things they ought to mean, or cultivating a national insincerity that mistakes a great dinner eaten with one's relatives for a family reunion, that does not discriminate between a display of bunting and a display of patriotism, that keeps Christmas with no quickening heart throb of good will to men.

This new creeping tide of indifference to the highest and tenderest impulses of humanity could easily be stayed if those of us who have drifted away from the natural, old-fashioned expression of our sympathy with the dear old times and friends would return like children to things we used to love. Is it rather a bore, young man, to take the train and go way up into the country to spend Sunday on the old farm? Are holidays rare, and are you going to have "a good time" in the city with "the other fellows?" Think for a moment of the eyes of your mother watching the white stretch of road. She will believe you, and be sorry enough if you do not come, for she will never dream that anything but "business" kept you away. There's a regiment of lads who feel just as you do, who would rather stay away and have a bit of "fun." Suppose they all went home this year, and by the fireside, while they see the mother with her own aged, wrinkled hands preparing the things she thinks they like the best, see if the old heart of thankfulness does not come back to them.

Be very sure that thanks for home and mother will be the beginning of that enlargement of heart and brain that will make one keep true thanksgiving for the peace, prosperity and progress that mean good not to the individual only, but to the nation and the race.—Washington Home Magazine.

AN AMBITIOUS GIRL.

From the New Era, Greenburg, Ind.

This paper recently received information that the ten year old daughter of Mr. M. Rybolt, of Hartsville, Ind., had been cured of a severe illness. The case seemed more than an ordinary one, and consequently a special representative was sent to investigate.

The Rybolts are well-to-do farmers living about two miles southwest of Hartsville. When the reporter called Mr. and Mrs. Rybolt and their daughter in question, Louise, were at home, also the other three children. Louise is the oldest. She had been going to school for four years, and was formerly in very good health, but for the past year or more she had been ill.

A year ago the present winter it was noticed that she was breaking down in health. For a time the cause could not be ascertained, but it was finally decided that it was from over-study. It has always been the ambition of Louise to educate herself as soon as possible, for she was anxious to graduate from the common branches early, and to enter a college of music, which her parents promised she could do as soon as she should finish the common branches.

How many children by diligent study to achieve their ambitions are injuring their health. It was so in this case. The child studied hard all day and often far into the night, and had won the respect and admiration of her teacher and of all the school by her aptness, and rapid learning.

For some time Louise experienced an indisposition which she would not make known to her parents, for fear they would have her remain from school. Her headache soon became unendurable, and was noticed by her teacher. She had by this time grown pale and weak.

One day she became suddenly sick at school, and was taken home.

For several weeks she suffered from a fever, and the physicians could not rally her. A neighbor urged them to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which they finally did with splendid results. Louise began getting better at once, and by the time she had consumed ten boxes of the pills she was cured.

"What you have written is true," said Mrs. Rybolt. "I don't think Louise would have recovered had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She is in perfect health to-day, and able to re-enter school.

"We are using these pills in our family when we need medicine, and find that they do more good than doctors' medicines, and they are not nearly so expensive. I would be glad to recommend them to any one who is sick, and can especially recommend them in any case similar to Louise's."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. These pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N.Y.

TAKING CARE OF HIMSELF.

Jack Was Making Money in Ways of His Own Choosing.

"Why don't you give that son of yours a chance?" asked one business veteran of another. "He must inherit some of your superior business qualities and the time will come when you must have some one to look after your affairs. He can't manage them without the necessary training."

"Don't you suppose that I have canvassed the whole situation? I have let that boy handle a small fortune, and the results have been so unsatisfactory that I have given him formal notice to look out for himself."

"But he seems to have plenty of money."

"That's another thing I don't like. I have cut off his allowance, yet he lives well and never enters a complaint. Last spring I thought I would have to put up the office blinds for want of ready cash. My collaterals were not available and creditors were pushing me. The boy walked into the office one afternoon when I was in the throes of despair, said: 'Things lookin' blue, governor?' laid down a certified check for $20,000 and walked out. I owe him that yet, but am holding it back till I can see that he needs it. When I gave him money to buy wheat and told him how the market was liable to go, he ignored my advice and bought millions of eggs; right in the midst of hot weather, mind you. On learning where they were stored I notified the health department and requested some of those in the vicinity to bring proceedings when the nuisance asserted itself. I learned incidentally afterward that he had a patent process for preserving eggs and cleared up a big pot of money. Wheat hadn't gone the way I predicted, but it was his business to do as I told him. Recently he made $15,000 at some shooting game. I don't know just what it was, but one of his friends said that Jack had taken a long shot at a horse and won. I hope the rascal had to pay for the horse."—Detroit Free Press.

FRIGHTENED AWAY.

The First Man He Met in Alaska Scared Him Off.

"No," said a man who was sitting on a box in front of a grocery store. "I can't say as I know very much about Alaska."

His companions looked at him in astonishment. It was the first time he had ever admitted not knowing much about anything.

"I reckon, then, you're not thinking about going to dig for gold," said one bystander.

"No."

"Mebbe, though, as the stories of sudden wealth keep pourin' in, you'll change your mind," said another.

"It won't be possible. I've been there."

"And come back without getting rich?"

"Yes. I didn't much more than cross the boundary line before I turned around and struck for home."

"Scared?"

"That's the answer."

"What of? Polar bears?"

"No."

"Supplies give out?"

"No. I had plenty of food. What changed my plan was seeing a man digging a hole. I had these ideas about gold being found any and everywhere, and I went up thinking to get some points about mining. I asked him in an offhand way whether he had struck any pay dirt yet, and he turned around and glared at me and said: 'Young feller, what do you think I'm doin' this for?' I told him I thought he was digging for gold. He glared at me again and said: 'Gold nothing! I'm doing this for fun. I've been living here for four years and there's one thing that my curiosity has never been satisfied about. I'm going to dig this hole good and deep so as to allow plenty of room, and then find out just how far down this climate will make the mercury go.' "—Washington Star.

Key to the Klondike.

The Pioneer Alaska Railway is the Northern Pacific, and to that company belongs the credit, in connection with the Pacific Coast Steamship Co., of having inaugurated the sale of through tickets to points in Alaska. The Northern Pacific was the first railway to issue a map of Alaska showing the inland passage from Puget Sound to Sitka, Juneau and Chilkat.

Those intending to go to Alaska early next spring, after the snows on the Dyea and Skaguay passes are packed down and the lakes frozen, or at a later date, either via this route or via St. Michaels and the mouth of the Yukon, should remember that the Northern Pacific is the pioneer Alaska line; runs steam heated trains with dining cars, Pullman Standard and Tourist Sleepers from St. Paul to Tacoma, Seattle and Portland; passengers having the option of going via Helena or Butte City (the latter the greatest silver mining camp in the world); also via Lake Pend d'Oreille, Idaho, or through the famous Coeur d'Alene country.

We have issued an illustrated folder, replete with Alaska and Klondike information up to date. Send Chas. S. Fee, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn., two cents in postage and he will forward you this map.

"No; that's a fellow in the next room," he said, with a sudden outburst of loquacity.—N. Y. World.

A Big Regular Army.

The mightiest host of this sort is the army of invalids whose bowels, livers and stomachs have been regulated by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A regular habit of body is brought about through using the Bitters, not by violently agitating and griping the intestines, but by reinforcing their energy and causing a flow of the bile into its proper channel. Malaria, la grippe, dyspepsia, and a tendency to inactivity of the kidneys, are conquered by the Bitters.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

For Croup,

asthma, bronchitis, or whooping cough, there is no remedy so sure and safe as Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose its healing influence is manifest. The sufferer who has been kept awake by the cough falls into a refreshing sleep, and awakes strong and refreshed. Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is acknowledged to be a specific for all pulmonary complaints. Physicians praise and prescribe it.

This standard remedy for coughs, colds, and all diseases of the throat and lungs, is now put up in half size bottles at half price, 50c.

"One of my children had croup. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breath. Having a part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given the child's breathing grew easier, and in a short time it was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved its life."

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, NOV. 19, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Good, heavy overcoatings at Brandser's.

—George Horsch has purchased 200 front feet of land on Bridge St., West, and is preparing to build a residence thereon.

—The Hamline medical students from Delano, are expected home to assist in dissecting Thanksgiving turkey next Thursday.

—If you want a fashionable suit call on John Brandser. His brother Hans who has learned the latest in New York is to be home tomorrow.

—The long Minnesota winters can't be spent more pleasantly and profitably than by reading good literature. Look over our clubbing offer and bring on your money.

—Ice has begun to form along the banks of the river. A few more degreess of cold and skating will be in order. Keep off until the ice is strong enough to hold.

—If you want to keep your friends in the East, South, or in any other direction posted on the fine weather we are having, subscribe for the GAZETTE for them.

—The traveling man for the new St. Paul packing house was in town this week and astonished some of our dealers by offering them goods in the meat line at away down figures.

—If you have a boy with a love for scientific things send us $3 50 and get the GAZETTE and the Scientific American, weekly one year, and make him a Christmas present he will appreciate.

—Read "From California" by Hon. B. F. Christlieb, in another column. Also "Free Culture for Wood Pulp," by J. O. Barrett, Secretary of the Minnesota State Forrestry Association, in this paper.

—If you want a local paper and wish to make a friend a Christmas gift that will come to them and remind them of you once a month for a year send us $1.75 and get the GAZETTE and Demorest's Magazine.

—Hiram Dyer, Delano's retired butcher, says it will not be two years until our local meat dealers will be obliged to buy all their meats from the Cities. All kinds of stock is now being picked up by city dealers, and our local men can't keep up with the procession and make anything.

—In another column appears a letter from California, by Hon. B. F. Christlieb. He writes that he is feeling better since he went to Monrovia, which place he thinks agrees with him much better than Los Angeles. His letter is quite interesting; describing his journey. He thinks Minnesota wrs blessed in the abundance of rain fall last season, beyond even her near neighbors.

—Last Friday evening poor whiskey fired the brain of one of our business men until he called upon one of his neighboring business men and fired several shots into the floor, and in another place shot so near to the bar tender as to, so we are told, sear his whiskers and considerably frighten him. Poor whiskey is poor stuff for anyone; and especially so for a man on whom it has such an effect. Probably bartenders will be careful in the future, how they contribute to the furnishing of such fracases; especially if they themselves are to come so close to being the subject for a funeral.

—Schnaps, scraps, and snaps are becoming altogether too frequent in our village. Things are being run too loosely. People from other places tell us it is terrible. A young man lately returned from Washington says that Delano beats Seattle, for toughness. This is not pleasant to say about our beautiful village; but it is much more unpleasant, and disagreeable, and dishonorable to our village and our village authorities to have it be so. Some steps should be taken to prevent so much law breaking. If the contracts made to sell no liquors to minors, old drunkars, and people under the influence of drink were enforced much better order would prevail. As things are going it wont be long before the town will be aroused by some terrible murder, or other crime, and the people will rise in their righteous indignation, and abolish forever the licensing of the sale of intoxicants from our midst.

—The Mayor's mounment on R. R. Ave. has again been veiled for winter. This watering trough is quite handy during the season when people could almost as easily go to the river for water; but when it gets to be time for the river to freeze over the monument is covered, and people are obliged to patronize some other place for nearly six months. If the monument was not warranted to run all winter it would not be quite so bad. But just why it is necessary to shut off a non-freezable watering fountain as soon as it would become the most useful is a mystery to many. In justice to the ex-Mayor who was so instrumental in having the fountain placed at the particular where it is, we would say, we understand he agreed to pay all damages accruing from allowing the water to flow during the first winter: but that his offer was not accepted. If the concern is non-freezable, it should run all winter; and in that case is a monument to the stupidity of those in control.

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—A dime social at Mrs. Shaw's, Thanksgiving night, Nov. 25.

—Thanksgiving services will be held at the M. E. church at 10:30, the 25th.

—Plowing, for this season is finished up on account of frozen ground.

-The stock of M. E. Manning's restaurant was sold at assignee's sale Wednesday.

—The G. N. Ry. have plank on the ground for re-flooring the high bridge east of town.

—The Epworth League sociable held at the City Hall Saturday night, was quite an enjoyable occassion.

—The Delano Furniture Co. handled several very nice lounges and couches this week. People must be getting more leisure to need them.

—Councilman Horsch is having some grading done about his lumber yard. It will require considerable filling to get his outfit above high tide.

Cyrus C. Jenks, of Litchfield, aged 89 yeaas: died Friday Nov. 12. Mr. Jenks was an early settler at Rockford, and took part in opening up Wright County to civilization.

—Our Village council has made a move in the right direction. Saloons are to be closed at 11 o'clock at night; and councilman Nick Frank has been put under bonds to keep the peace.

—The weather has arrived that makes horses tied out in the streets too long, without blankets, shiver. The marshal should be authorized to place all such in a barn and have them cared for.

—Horse shoer.s picnic is now beginning. The frozen ground makes the horse with tender feet hunt for the softest road. Delano has three shops so no one need have his horses bare for want of a shoer.

—A few men in this neighborhood seem to think it economy to haul the biggest loads they can pile onto their wagons. It is hard on the horses, wagons, and occasionally on the tempers of the men.

—There has been several trains loaded with gravel, through town this week. We understand they are filling in bridges; preparing for winter and next spring's high water. It was hoped when they made their appearance here that the grade was to be made lighter getting out of town; so that trains would not have to back up and run through town at 30 miles an hour rate, the village ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding.

—Reports from Cincinnatti say: A panic was caused in St. Xavier school. A stove was overturned, causing fire. A cry of fire was heard and some of frightened children jumped from windows; while others were thrown down by the maddened efforts of stronger ones to escape. Four were severely injured. What would the pupils in Delano school do in case a fire alarm was given? Would it not be much pleasanter and safer to climb down fire escapes than to jump out of the windows?

Personal.

Jim Sherry is assisting F. A Cramer, in his meat market.

Alva G. Datlin is speneing the winter in the Wisconsin pineries.

Mr. Baker, of Winona, is assisting John Brandser, in his shop.

Hans Brandser, lately returned from Norway, is expected home tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Haven and Mrs. Michels, of Montrose were in town to-day.

Mrs. C. W. Kerrick is among the sick. She has been a sufferer for a couple of weeks.

Miss Irene Cheeley, of Brooklyn Center, is visiting Delano on business and pleasure.

Mrs. C. Gast, of Wayzata, was up this week helping to care for her sister Mrs. Kerrick.

Leonard Reider and his cousin, who have been harvesting, near Herman, have returned home.

Mrs. Maggie Ryan, (nee Blake), formerly of Delano, and her son are visiting at William Dunn's.

Miss Jesse Gray who was at Minneapolis, sick, last week, is again at her post in the school room.

J. P. Bernick, who has been in Montana, has returned home. And Frank Metz is back from Dakota.

S. J. Cooper's five year old boy who was injured by the falling of the oil tank door is about again.

Mrs. Joseph Kubon, of Minneapolis, came up Wednesday to help take care of her mother Mrs. John Otto.

Mort Malsed was around Monday, with a box of cigars under his arm. We don't smoke. Mort says he is house-keeping in Watertown.

Miss Eva Shrader, who has been visiting her brothers here and at Watertown, started on her journey home, to Buffalo, N. Y., Monday evening. She will visit on the way, in Michigan.

Dr. Hall, a professor in the Medical Department of Hamline University, was up in consultation with Dr. Shrader on the case of Mrs. Kerrick. We understand the prognosis was favorable.

C. G. Roosen, William Ziebarth, I. Gutzwiller, Frank Scherer, Wash Rader and Pat Greear devoted a part of the week to attending, as wittnesses for the defense, the Howard case, in Minneapolis. But they were not placed on the stand.

"SASS."

She isn't versed in latin and she isn't versed in Greek;
She cannot sing a little bit nor make the organ speak;
She can not trim a bonnet, write a sonnet, paint on glass—
But you ought to see her peel the peach and make it into "sass."

She can not play lawn tennis and she can not swim a stroke;
Her talk is not suggestive of the latest shady joke;
She isn't up on verses, nor rehearses them, alas!
But you ought to see her pluck the plum and make it into "sass!"

She is reticent on knowledge of the newest fashion fad;
Her spelling it is faulty and her grammar somewhat bad;
She's no devotee of Kniepping, bare-foot creeping in the grass—
But you ought to see her grapple the crab-apple into "sass!"

BORN.

HERMAN.—On Saturday, Nov. 13, to Mr. and Mrs. Gotlieb F. Herman, a son.

SOME DO NOT.

"To meet upon the level
Is an easy thing to say,
But when it comes to practice,
Do we do it every day?
Do we meet him on the level,
If the brother chance to be
Just a little out at elbow
Or baggy at the knee?"

Rev. Charles Thayer formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church here, preached at Buffalo last Sunday.

Judge Tarbox will hold a special term of court at St. Michaels, Nov. 27th for the purpose of naturalizing citizens.—Buffalo Standard.

The Republican editors of Wright County continue to pull hair. Are they doing it to attract attention and sell papers. It looks bad, boys. Stop it, at once.

Joseph Shaffer, of Howard Lake, was arrested last Saturday on a charge of Arson, in having set fire to his wife's house. He was bound over to appear at District Court, in December.

The Hennepin County Commissioners have rejected the bid of Brown & Sproul to repair the Dayton bridge as exhorbitant. They ask the Wright County board to advertise for new bids

Rev. Vallentyne, at the M. E. church, last Sunday morning, preached an excellent sermon to the young folks. During the services twenty persons were received into the membership of the church.—Buffalo Journal.

Garrard Dougherty came to town Tuesday with 23 hogs, nearly all spring pigs, which averaged 253 pounds.—Howard Lake Herald. Mr. Daugherty has for several years been reconed among Wright county's most successful hog raisers.

The Standard's illustration, the ox and tiger yoked together, probably was inspired by the thought of Bosses Platt and Croker, of New York pulling together. The West don't want a New York man on the Presidential ticket this campaign.

We would like to examine the anatomy of County Commissioner Johnson, and then we might be able to state whether he has any backbone or not, (see the vote on the Town of Woodland bill) -Waverly Tribune. Does brother Schmidt intend this for a challenge?

Mrs. Anna Powell, of Woodland, will have a suit against the Great Northern R. R. at the December term, as administratrix of the estate of Edward Powell for $5,000. Her son Edward was run over by a train while crossing a track to board another train as brakeman, near St. Paul, last September. F. H. Latham has charge of the case for Mrs. Powell.

COKATO, Minn, Nov. 12.—Arthur Osterberg, a boy of 15 years, was out hunting and in climing over a fence the gun was accidently discharged, shattering his right hand so that it has to be amputated at the wrist.

"What to Eat" for December.

"How to Live a Hundred Years" forms the title of a short but interesting article in the December number of What To Eat.

What Shakespeare has to say about kissing for dysepsia is told by Ira Gale-Tompkins in a capital way, while James Courtney Challis supplements the article by a very funny poem entitled "The Bridger Cure." all fittingly illustrated.

The cover is beautiful, and the centerpage is a patriotic gem that all old soldiers and their friends should see and preserve.

WHAT TO EAT offers $10 to the person filling out the following blank lines so as to make the best four lines of poetry, and $1 each to the ten next best. The only conditions are that you fill out the lines and send ten cents for sample copy of magazine.

I saw a man come down the street,
And he was full of——
The day was bright, the air was sweet,
And——

Other words may be used in the second and fourth lines if preferred.

THANKSGIVING SONG.

[Missouri Democrat]

The hills of Alaska are filled with gold.
Thanks to the Dingley bill;
The Lord put it there in the days of old,
On account of thd Dingley bill.
And the pioneer has found it out—
With the help of the Dingley bill—
Result of high tariff, without a doubt—
How grand is the Dingley bill!

All Europe is short on wheat this year—
Thanks to the Dingley bill—
They'll have to buy their breadstuffs here
On account of the Dingley bill.
High tariff has made a famine there,
Blessed be the Dingley bill.
And the more they starve the better we'll fare,
Hurrah for the Dingley bill!

The rain poured down and saved our corn,
All hail to the Dingley bill,
Otherwise we'd have been forlorn,
Without any Dingley bill.
And the sun came out and dried the rain,
Thanks to the Dingley bill;
Next year 'twill do the same again,
Due to the Dingley bill.

The melons grew on the melon vine,
Thanks to the Dingley bill;
The juice of the grape made sweep grape wine,
On account of the Dingley bill;
The pigs grow fat on the corn and feed,
Due to the Dingley bill.
If it wasn't for taxes, they wouldn't breed;
How potent the Dingley bill!

Oh! the sun shines bright in the old Southwest,
On account of the Dingley bill;
Our apples and peaches are all the best,
Produced by the Dingley bill.
The hens lay eggs, and the cows they calve,
Caused by the Dingley bill,
The people are grateful for what they have,
Thanks to the Dingley bill.

WHAT TO EAT for December, the Minneapolis monthly magazine is up to date in every way.

THE boom edition, on the eighth anniversary of Washington statehood, of the Tacoma Daily Ledger was a good one and shows Tacoma to be a city up to the times.

THE Minneapolis Times says John R. Howard took the jury that acquitted him down to Barge's and gave them "dry dreams." That's what Howard claimed on the trial that he had before.

WE received last week the Christmas number of McCall's magazine, the Queen of Fashion, New York City. It is nicely gotten up and filled with pretty things ladies like. Fifty cents a year.

THE COUNTY LINE, of Eden Valley, bearing the motto "Independent in all things; neutral in none," was received last week. It is a bright paper and evidently tries to live up to its principles.

A MINNEAPOLIS jury returned a verdict of guilty in the case of Alderman Durnham, who was charged with offering to accept a bribe from Halverson, Richards & Co. A motion for a new trial is to be made.

IF you want your boy to be posted on scientific subjects make him a Christmas present of the Scientific American, weekly, $3.00. Send us $3.50 for one year in advance for both the BUFFALO GAZETTE and the Scientific American.

BEET sugar manufacturers are said to be making every effort to prevent the annexation of Hawaii, or the renewing of the treaty. They want to furnish the people of this country with their beet sugar instead of having them use the pure cane article.

MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN has been appointed guardian of Miss Evangeline Cassio y Cisneros, who has declared her intentions of becoming a citizen of the United States. Perhaps her adopted brother John A. Jr. can still further distinguish himself by rescueing the father of his new sister from the prison in Cuba where he is confined.

LONDON had the biggest fire last Friday that it has seen since 1666. $25,000,000 burned. Nearly a hundred ware houses destroyed. Church of St. Giles badly damaged. It is said the price of ostrich feathers rose 30 per cent, on account of the large number burned, while insurance stock, of such companies as were involved in loss, fell considerably.

IN their efforts to make voters believe the country is still saved, some of the editors have figured out that even if New York and Kentucky did go Democratic this fall, and had their vote been that way at the presidential election McKinley would have had 225 votes to 222 for Bryan in the electoral college. That's getting it down pretty fine only 3 majority, and the most of the United States to hear from next time.

THE St. Peter Herald announces the death of Thomas Pettijohn, one of the old settlers of Traverse de Sioux, having located there in 1853. He was a member of Company D, 9th Minn. Vol's., was captured at Guntown, in 1864, was an inmate of Andersonville prison for awhile. He has been totally blind for several years. He died in Indiana where he has spent his winters for a few years past. He was a man beloved by his acquaintances generally. He was nearly 73 years old.

Whose Voice Was It?

Saturday's Minneapolis Times contains an article "Whose Voice Was It?" stating that Judge Johnson called before him Charles Hitchcock, who claims to have overheard a conversation, through a ventilator, between an attorney and a juror in a case, in which there was an offer to bribe. As the young man could not positively swear to the voice nothing is likely to be done. It seems a too common occurrence in Hennepin county, as well as in Wright and perhaps other counties, for these stories to circulate. If the reports are not true the originators should be found and punished. If they are true, someway ought to be found whereby they can be obviated even though the jury, or all parties connected in the suit have to be kept in solitary confinement between sessions of the trial and until a verdict is rendered.

Lookout for Hog Cholera.

The hog cholera seems to be doing quite effective work in the country northwest of this city. Thos. and Pat. Hughes, M. Lockensgaard, J. Adrian Johnson and William Pell have lost heavily, and Peter Wilson reports that 14 of his last spring pigs, weighing about 160 pounds each, are numbered with the dead.—St. Peter Herald.

The above mentioned cases are less than 50 miles south of us. We used to be personally acquainted with at least three of the hog owners; they are some of Nicollet County's prosperous farmers. The disease seems to be headed this way. Look out that you do not allow visitors, hog buyers or others who have been where hogs are sick to go among your herd. And if your neighbor's hogs are sick, don't let your curiosity get the better of your judgment and rush over to have a look at them and bring home to your own animals the dreaded hog cholera.

Morris Goes to Washington.

The Wright County Times contains an article purporting to be from Page Morris, giving his intention to do something when he gets back to Washington. Some things it would probably be as well for the country if he did not do. Others are all right.

Mr. French says the Congressman is for establishing postal savings banks.
A bankruptcy law.
Cuban belligerency.
Hawaiian treaty.
Federal building at St. Cloud.
Indian school at Red Lake reservation
Re-establishing of mail route between Monticello and Buffalo, and Rockford and Delano.

His appointments, he thinks, have been as satisfactory to the people as it was possible to make them.

He claims prosperity has arrived and the lumber men are full of hope and will have very large camps. While wages are from 25 to 100 per cent greater than last year.

Postal savings banks run outside of politics might be good things for some people. But, when they are to be used, as they are bound to be in this country, to influence voters, they are sure to result in more harm than good.

Bankruptcy laws, enabling "business men" to do big business for a short time; until they make all the debts possible, then shut up shop, pay a few cents on the dollar and begin over, are surely detrimental to the best interests of honest people. The sooner that kind of "business men" get out of the road the sooner the country will get on a solid footing.

Cuban belligerency is better than nothing. But it looks to the average American as if it is about time to suppress such doings as are going on in Cuba, or suppress the publication of such lies as are being published, as soon as possible.

Hawaii should remain independent. There seems to be a much larger population of other people than Americans, on the island. Still, if it is the will of the majority of the bonafide residents on the island to be annexed to the United States, it seems as if we could take them under our wing.

Putting up federal buildings in all the towns over the country don't meet our approval. We can't see any use in expending money in buildings as monuments to Congressmen, unless the business of the government demands such buildings. Why should St. Cloud have a federal building more than Delano should have one? We haven't heard any great outcry for one there.

Schools are in order. If there is a sufficient number of children that have no other means of obtaining an education, to make a school at Red Lake, lets build one sufficient for the needs of the inhabitants of that reservation.

Mr. Morris is reported as having said; "The currency question will doubtless come up, but it does not matter what the house may do in this connection, for it would probably be killed by the Senate." This may be so, but, it is nevertheless, the duty of Congressmen to make the best laws they can where they think laws are needed; they should do their whole duty, and, if the Senate don't like their bills, and kills them, they stand all right with their constituents. They should not be frightened so soon. Possibly the Senate might surprise them by passing their financial bill.

Everybody seems to think some kind of legislation needed on the money question and the Congress that want do something because they are afraid the Senate won't let it, is in nearly as bad a fix as the government that wants bimetallism and can't have it because England's rulers object.

As for prosperity in the lumber camps it sounds good; to hear that lumbermen are getting good wages, and making a few dollars apiece more than they did last year is good enough for them. But when the farmer comes to build granaries, barns, and other structures and has to pay $2 a thousand more for lumber than his friends across the Canadian line, he don't enjoy it quite so much. Lumbermen are destined, as the trees are cut down, to grow less numerous, each year; while as the land is cleared tillers of the soil become more numerous, and competition in that line more sharp. Destroying the pineries also allows the water to run off more rapidly and irrigation will become a part of the farmers expense and care.

Deer and other game now so plenty, will in the near future, follow the buffalo of the prairie, and be known as among extinct animals. While Canada can, after our pine is gone sell us lumber at her own prices. It looks as if the men who manage the lumber business, at present were reaping their rewards at the expense of the rest of the people and of generations yet to come.

The re-establishing of the mail routes from Delano to Reckford and from Buffalo to Monticello we believe should be done. In fact we consider it a big blunder on the part of some body that they were discontinued. If Page Morris will aid in re-establishing these routes he will have the support of most people in those neighborhoods, on one point at least.

Contracting the Currency.

All the so-called gold notes, bonds and mortgages taken by the gold bugs since the demonetization of silver, except United States bonds, are payable in greenbacks, as well as gold; greenbacks being a legal tender in payment of all such obligations. And this is the reason, no doubt, why there is such an effort, on the part of the gold combine, to destroy our greenback money. Is it possible that the masses can be fooled into the belief that it would be good for them to increase the bonded indebtedness of the nation $560,000,000 and destroy their greenback money, as is now proposed by the Hannacrat gold combine?—Waseca Herald.

Condition and Theory.

When Congress assembles on the 6th of December it will be confronted with this condition;

A deficiency in the revenues.

President McKinley's Administration has been and still is making up the deficit from the left over proceeds of President Cleveland's bond sales.

The Dingley deficiency since the 1st of August is $32,546,078. It was over $5,000,000 for the first half of this month.

The theory of the Dingley bill was that by increasing the duties it would stop the deficit. The theory of the McKinley bill, drawn on the same lines, was that it would stop the surplus. Experience under both laws has proved that the original McKinley theory was right. A tariff for robbery is also a tariff for deficiency.

Will President McKinley recommend, will Mr. Dingley propose, a real revenue measure at the coming session? —Thrice-a-week World.

A Few Forcible Facts.

Litchfield Saturday Review: Nels L. Nelson, a prominent Swede Grove farmer, lies at the Le Roy hospital in this city in a critical condition, the result of having imbibed too freely while in this city last Saturday.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 18. Julius Eggert shot and killed his father, Joachin Eggert, and then shot himself in the temple. The elder Eggert kept a saloon and Julius acted as bartender.

C. J. G. D'Albani the man supposed to have jumped from the St. Paul high bridge Monday, was another victim of the flowing bowl. At least the Dispatch says of him when he was last seen: "He was undrr the influence of liquor."

Minneota Mascot: Last night, about six o'clock, T. G. Loxdal, committed suicide at G. S. Sigurdson's house in this village. For some days he had been drinking heavily and yesterday afternoon was known to be under the influence of liquor.

Minneapolis Times: A. W. Eaton, a barber, died suddenly last night just after retireing at nine o'clock at his boarding place, 127 Tyler street S. E. The coroner viewed the remains. A bottle of whiskey was found in Eaton's pocket. The body was removed to the county morgue. Eaton was about 35 years of age and had no known relatives.

Minneapolis Tribune: Frank Mitchell and William Bolinski, two boys of Northeast Minneapolis, about 18 years of age, were arrested last night on the charge of drunkeness. Officers Hiller and Ging took them into custody at Fourth avenue northeast and Marshall street. They were very much intoxicated. The matter will probably be brought to the mayor's attention, as it is desired to learn where the minors procured their liquor.

Finance By a Farmer.

INDEPENDENCE, Minn.

Mr. Editor: How is Greater New York, and Mark Hanna, the Pugilist? Did he expect a Waterloo? If so he was very much disappointed.

The elections of 1897 are all over, and we enter upon the campaign of 1898, which will be a hard fought one.

We have heard it said that money is power, but in Mark Hanna's case it may have failed. Our millionairs may dress in costly apparel, and support a fine livery, flaunt their perfumery in the nostrils of the hod carrier, and when they come to die may be laid away in costly robes, and have an elaborate casket. But all their ill gotten gain will not buy for them a passport through the pearly gates into the eternal city. I would rather muster in the ranks with the honest voter, than be the money lord that Mark Hanna is, without hope in this life or that which is to come.

We have passed guard mount and soon all the political batallions will be on dress parade and ready for inspection for 1898. Germany is a standing army ready to do battle; and the United States is a political field of corruption.

"The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib, but—my people doth not consider." We read in the book of books, the time is coming when men will not endure sound doctrine. Yes they are heaping together their riches for the last days.

When Moses had command of the armies of Israel during his march through the wilderness unto the borders of Cannan, he had golden calf worshippers, and they made for him much trouble.

"When they had made them a molten calf and said: This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt." And pray, what are the goldites saying today? Is it not in substance the very same words as the children of Israel used more than 3,000 years ago: "We prefer the golden calf to the true God." If a single gold standard is a saving ordinance to this country, then only a part of the people of this country will be saved (that is financially.)

That foreign monetary commission that went abroad under pay and on a Tom Fool's errand, has got back with no laurels on their brows; just as we said it would do. It was not intended from the first that they would do anything only draw their little stipend, at the expense of the people.

It seems strange that people can't see, if we have only one kind of money as a legal tender (gold) that all the big fish will eat up the little ones. There is nothing to hinder. And they will have a bigger breakfast than that fish did that swallowed Jonah. Give us a singlegold standard and the banks control of the currency, and the common people had just as well flip pennies for what is left.

Make all money a legal tender and then the people are safe. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Give the poor of the country a chance. The rich will pull through if the poor man can. But, Mr. Editor, it seems useless to enlarge upon this subject, for the people are given over to their idols and nothing this side the Klondike will satisfy them. Some say the government should go out of the banking business. She has never been in the banking business, but the Constitution of the United States says Congress shall have power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, etc. Now if Congress shall not have power to say what our monetary system shall be, who shall have the power? They (Congress) are expected to legislate for us in all cases whatsaever. Some may say one vessel is to honor and another to dishonor, and that the servant shall not be above his master, etc. but we are all made out of the same kind of clay, whether he be Jew or Gentile, and I believe if there should be any discrimination it should be in favor of those who carry the freight. They should not be compelled to sidetrack more than half of the time any way. When battles are to be fought, and heavy marches are to be made, the poor man is called upon to show his patriotism, and love of country. The bond holders and money lords said to the poor man, during the rebellion, you fellows do the fighting and we will pay the freight. But it seems the poor man done the fighting and paid the freight to, while the other fellow took passage in a palace car. Equal rights to all and special privileges to none, is what we want. The few million bushels of wheat that was raised in this country with other farm produce may tide the people over for awhile, but it can bring no wave of prosperity; the condition of our finance is too serious and our real estate is hardly good for collateral any more.

Uncle Sam Out of the Banking Business.

When he wants any money he must call on the central bank or some of its branches all under control of a few money sharks and accept their terms.

St. Peter Journal: The name of Thos. J. McDermott is mentioned as a possible candidate for mayor of St. Paul at the next election.

Sherburne County Times: The recent session of the district court at Elk River, according to the estimates of one of the Commissioners, cost Sherburne county nearly $1000. Rather a high priced luxury.

Dispatch: While Senator Carter is looking after Montana's silver with his anti-small-bill proposition, what are our Senators and representatives doing? One of them should frame a bill immediately prohibiting the use of rye or corn meal for makin bread in loaves weighing less than ten pounds. It would create a greater demand for wheat, you know, and people really ought not to eat rye bread and corn bread.

Brainerd Journal: Foot ball is not necessarily as rough a game as it sometimes seems to be. A game of foot ball was played at St. Cloud last Saturday, during which nobody was killed and only one player was seriously injured. When the excitement of the moment doesn't run too high among the players a game of foot ball is not much worse than a prize fight.

Oregon Agriculturist: More wormy apples have recently been condemned at Tacoma. Apple growers and shippers must realize the fact that wormy apples will not be admitted to the markets of British Columbia and of Tacoma and Seattle, Washington. There is no telling how soon they may be shut out of other cities also. It seems probable that the time is not distant when infested fruit will not be marketable anywhere.

Thrice-a-week World: A Democratic member of the Ohio Legislature says he will not enter into any combination to defeat Hanna. He thinks that "Hanna in the Senate would do more to bring about Democratic success in 1900 than any other man the Republicans of Ohio could send to represent them in that body." It is rather hard on Ohio and on the Senate to purchase party advantage at such a cost, but there is no doubt that Hanna in the Senate as a big and shining example of latter day Republicanism would be worth more to the Democrats in 1900 than a hundred ordinary stump speakers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—A special to the Herald from Buenos Ayres says: Several cargoes of American cereals which recently arrived here could not be sold, and will be taked to Europe. The steamship Saardinian Prince, which arrived here last week with a cargo of wheat, will sail without unloading it. This refusal of American cereals is due to the fact that Argentina's crops are more than sufficient for home use. Millers refuse to receive foreign grain.—Minneapolis Tribune.

While the yellow fever epidemic might have been far more deadly, the prostration of business in some points of the south was almost complete.

Statistics show that since the Cuban famine began in September last 15,000 human beings have died of starvation and no other cause in the distressed island.

An expert says that getting shot does not hurt any more than having a tooth pulled. The dissemination of this knowledge will not lessen the rush to get out of the way when bullets are flying around.

The old world has suffered much this year from famine. It has had wide prevalence in India and China, and portions of Ireland have felt the pangs of dearth. And now the inhabitants of a north Russian province are dying of starvation.

Bismarck is breaking physically, and Gladstone is far from well. Great men are not exempt from the ordinary ills of humanity, and in octogenarians the springs of corporeity have necessarily become corroded by rust. Perpetual motion is an unrealizable dream.

It would be a dreadful thing if Great Britain and France should go to war, but there is a possibility, by no means remote, that they may do so. The two nations have long been contending for supremacy in Africa, and at last a clash of interests appears to be imminent.

Consul Deuster, at Crefeld, Germany, reports to the state department of a discovery made there which it is said will revolutionize the methods of illumination. It is an incandescent jet. A single jet of ordinary size can emit a light of much more than 1,000 candle power, and fine print can be read at a distance of 100 feet.

Mrs. Hannah Gould's band of 60 women to sail from New York soon for Dawson City is composed, according to their chaperon, of "widows and bachelor maidens." It is extremely probable that in a very short time after their arrival on the Klondike such designations will cease to be applicable to any of these female argonauts.

The periodical meteoric shower failed to materialize and we shall have to wait two years more for the grand demonstration that the Leonides vouchsafe once in a generation. Let the stars shoot all they want to. So long as there is no shooting on the surface of the earth we can bear with equanimity any amount of aerial gunnery.

A mob of white men in North Dakota recently lynched two Indians and a half-breed who were charged with murder, and now it has been discovered that the half-breed was innocent of any participation in the crime. Great is the civilization of the white man! Is it not strange that the Indian does not embrace it more readily?

The government experts are not able to find much promise in Alaska for agricultural operations. The mining and timber resources are enormous, and the experiments with reindeer show that these animals can be used illimitably and are perfectly at home in the climate, thus providing meat, leather and transportation facilities. The fishing industry is a strong feature of Alaska also, and these are good enough features to draw a large population.

The custom that has become so popular among bandits in Chicago of holding up men in saloons is evidence that they have been impressed by this progressive and labor-saving age. It is much easier and more satisfactory in every way to hold up six or seven men in a saloon than it is to take the same number one at a time on the street. And, besides, they are likely to have more money in the saloon than they will have when they come out of it.

Miss Grace G. Niles, of the Orange (N. J.) training school for nurses, claims that she has been refused a diploma because she writes poetry. If it is only because she writes it we are prepared to sympathize with her, but before wasting any tears we would like to have some assurance that she doesn't read it aloud. It is difficult to imagine anything more fiendish or horrible than a poetess in the guise of a nurse trying her influence on a helpless invalid.

John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, was recently interviewed by a reporter on a subject of which he is well qualified to speak. He was asked if it pays to advertise when times are hard. "When the times are hard and people are not buying," replied Mr. Wanamaker, "is the very time that advertising should be the heaviest. When times are good they come of their own accord. But I believe in advertising all the time. I have tried all kinds of advertising and have spent a great deal of money in posters, but I gave that up long ago, and think newspaper advertising is by far the best."

An aerolite fell upon the earth near Binghamton, N. Y., Sunday morning; at least it is called an aerolite; but some learned professors who have examined it find curious characters in a piece of metal imbedded in it which they believe to be a message from the red planet, Mars. If that is so it will be better to call together a synod of scientists and have them decipher it. If the Martians have fired us a message we want to know what it is and then means may be adopted to fire back an answer. There is no use saying that it can't be done, for "can't" is an expression unworthy of the age.

Rev. George Reader, who recently married a couple in the lions' cage at the Boston zoo, has been expelled from the theological school of the Boston university on account of his connection with the sensational performance. The faculty of the school regarded his action as not in accordance with the "quiet, dignified and Christian deportment" required by the rules of the institution. It should be stated as an extenuating circumstance that the reverend gentleman did not enter the cage himself, but performed the ceremony from outside of the bars. Thus he showed discretion at least.

SHOULD HAVE MORE MEN.

Gen. Miles Urges an Enlargement of the Army.

His Recommendations to Secretary Alger—Latter's Annual Report—Seacoast Defenses—Military Protection for Alaska.

Washington, Nov. 22.—In his first annual report, Secretary Alger makes many recommendations for the betterment of the administration of the war department, based upon the conclusions of his subordinate officers. He asks favorable consideration for the proposition to add two regiments to the artillery branch, pointing to the valuable fortifications now being erected, which, he says, should not be manned by a corporal guard.

Wants a Larger Army.

An army of 35,000 men will satisfy Gen. Nelson A. Miles, but a standing force of 70,000 will not more than satisfy him. That is the burden of one of the most strenuous of the recommendations of the major general commanding transmitted to the president in the report of Secretary Alger. To Gen. Miles' general recommendation that the army enlistment be increased Secretary Alger adds no word of approval, but to the specific appeal for two additional regiments of artillery he gives an emphatic second. Gen. Miles' general recommendation touching the number of enlisted men is as follows:

"In my opinion it would be wise and judicious for congress to establish a standard limiting the recruiting of the army for all future time, unless the conditions of the country should be other than what can now be anticipated. The nation is developing in most unusual and extraordinary proportions in wealth and population, and as the army is one of the pillars of the republic it is proper that it should grow as the nation grows, commensurate with the needs and requirements of the latter; and I therefore recommend that a standard be fixed and authorized by which the strength of the army should be regulated in time of peace in proportion to the population and wealth of the nation, and that the maximum of enlisted men be limited to one soldier to every 1,000 population, and the minimum of one soldier to every 2,000 population, the number actually in service within this limit to be determined by the president according to the necessities and requirements of the government."

For Seacoast Defenses.

Seacoast defenses is a constantly recurring subject of discussion in the report of the secretary and the communications of heads of departments. Gen. Miles urges that the general plan of defense adopted by the government be pursued steadily and the secretary of war sounds the same note more than once. The former recommends the appropriation of $15,318,500 for the seacoast work of the year under the engineer, ordnance and quartermaster departments, and his superior sanctions the recommendation.

Brig. Gen. John M. Wilson, chief of engineers, goes into details on the subject of coast defenses. Since August 18, 1890, congress has appropriated $9,762,333 for the construction of modern gun and mortar batteries for coast defense. Up to the present time there have been contracted for 24 12-inch guns, 82 ten-inch, 33 eight-inch and 16 rapid-fire guns and 232 12-inch mortars. The numbers of each type now mounted and ready for service are, respectively, 10, 18, 5, 0, 73. These numbers it is expected to increase by the end of the calendar year to 19, 60, 31, 9 and 168, respectively.

Protection for Alaska.

He says of Alaska that as many as 100,000 people will be gathered there next year, and a military force should be sent to the territory and large emergency powers should be granted to the president to repress lawlessness. Probably the creation of additional military reservations, like that of St. Michaels, may be the best means to meet the problem. A boat for the patrol of the Yukon is also asked for, as well as increased pay for the enlisted men serving in Alaska.

Some Recommendations.

Secretary Alger recommends the revival of the grade of lieutenant general, saying that all the great nations give their officers much higher ranks than does the United States.

He indorses the recommendation of the superintendent of the military academy that the number of students at West Point be increased by allowing each senator to nominate a cadet. As an alternative, he suggests that the president be authorized to appoint ten cadets at large each year.

Favorable comment is made upon the work of the military colleges of the country, but it is suggested that the law be amended so as to authorize details of army officers only to such colleges as have at least 150 pupils actually present.

Attention is called to the need of a proper system of criminal jurisdiction over military reservations and of a hall of records for the storage of official papers. The estimate for army transportation is increased by $100,000 to provide means for moving heavy ordnance. To provide for the new posts needed on the seacoast an estimate of $2,000,000 is submitted.

Estimates.

The estimates for the next fiscal year aggregate $96,258,445, as against $62,832,417, the amount of the appropriations for the current year. The principal items of increase are in rivers and harbors, where the estimate is $48,728,160, as against the appropriation of $23,278,023; fortifications and sea coast defenses, $13,378,571, as against $8,517,141; the military parks, posts and cemeteries, $2,558,639, against $889,867.

Secretary Alger transmits without reduction the estimate of the chief of engineers for the next fiscal year, amounting to $48,728,160, more than double the appropriations for the current year. He says these are largely in excess of what they should be at a time when the demands upon the treasury are as great as now, therefore he recommends a large reduction. In justice to the chief of engineers, Secretary Alger says that these estimates were made by his own direction, that the facts might be placed before congress, showing what the expenditures would be were all the requirements of the river and harbor laws complied with, and he cites the fact that the outstanding continuous contracts for river and harbor work will require an expenditure of over $17,000,000 for the next fiscal year. The secretary indorses the project for the construction of the ship canal connecting Lakes Union and Washington with Puget Sound, but states that active operations cannot be commenced for some time, as the right of way has not yet been acquired.

Secretary Alger especially commends for patriotism, generosity and zeal Col. Buffington and Capt. Crozier, the inventors of the disappearing gun carriage, who generously donated the invention to the government.

The report closes with the renewal of the recommendation that provision be made for the erection in Washington of a statue to Gen. Grant.

ALL WERE KILLED.

Four Southerners Engage in a Desperate Brawl.

Mandeville, La., Nov. 22.—Bayou Lacombe, a small settlement 11 miles east of here, has been the scene of a terrible tragedy. News has just been received here of a desperate fight between Arthur and Edward Jolie on one side and Laurance and Edward Cousin on the other, which resulted in the killing of all the parties concerned. Shotguns and pistols were the weapons used. The cause of the difficulty is attributed to an old family feud.

Masso Is President.

Havana, Nov. 20, via Key West, Fla., Nov. 22.—The new government of the republic of Cuba has been constituted by the election of a president, vice president, and secretaries of war, finances, foreign relations and interior. Bartolome Masso is president. The election was held at Guaymarillo, Puerto Principe, November 4, and representatives of all six states were present. The election was orderly, and Masso triumphed by a large majority. Gen. Calixto Garcia, Salvador Cisneros Betancourt and Domingo Mendez Capote also received votes for the presidency.

Spain Tries a New Tack in Her Cuban Campaign.

Havana, Nov. 23.—Gen. Pando, as already cabled to the press, started by train from this city Saturday last in order, according to the official announcement, to take charge of the campaign against the insurgents. He was accompanied by his full staff and was escorted by a company of artillery. But it is stated on very good authority that Gen. Pando has been commissioned by Marshal Blanco, the captain-general, to enter into communication with the insurgent leaders with the view of arranging for peace.

This statement is based on accurate knowledge of all the facts in the case. Gen. Pando did not leave this city until he had taken steps calculated to further the object which Marshal Blanco has in view. Gen. Pando, after a consultation with the captain-general, first brought about the release from confinement of Damien Caballero, who has been imprisoned on the Isle of Pines for some time past, for, it is alleged, acting as a spy for the insurgents and bringing about a disaster for the Spanish troops at Cacao, province of Santiago de Cuba. Gen. Pando furnished Caballero, who is the godfather of Rabi, looked upon as being the backbone of the insurgent movement in the province of Santiago de Cuba, with a considerable sum of money and caused him to be landed at Manzanillo, province of Santiago de Cuba, where a good horse was placed at his disposal. Gen. Pando's peace emissary was also furnished official documents empowering him to act in behalf of the Spanish commander, and from Manzanillo Caballero made his way secretly to the Jiguani hills, where Gen. Rabi has his headquarters. Gen. Pando instructed Caballero to offer Gen. Rabi a high rank in the Spanish army and a large sum of money, to be distributed among the other insurgent leaders of that part of Cuba, and, in addition, a large amount of money for himself, in the event of his success in arranging terms for peace. Besides this Caballero was instructed to inform the insurgent leaders that the Spanish authorities undertook to honestly establish the new autonomist regime if the leaders of the insurgents would accept the propositions made them.

In Memory of a Dead Senator.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 22.—The memorial exercises in commemoration of the life and services of the late Senator Isham G. Harris, twice postponed on account of yellow fever, were held Sunday night at the Auditorium. Many distinguished men were present. The large building, which has a seating capacity of 6,000, was packed and hundreds of people were turned away. Senator Bate presided. Addresses eulogistic of the dead senator were made by Senator Bate, of Tennessee; Senator Turple, of Indiana; Congressman John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi; Gov. R. L. Taylor and Gen. George W. Gordon, of Memphis.

Secretary Wilson's Offer.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The secretary of agriculture purposes issuing a series of farmers' bulletins on tobacco and has issued a circular soliciting contributions from experts on the methods of cultivation, on the export tobaccos of Kentucky and Tennessee and on the marketing of tobacco. He promises to reward those whose contributions are accepted at the rate of $15 per 1,000 words, but suggests that no one essay should contain more than 10,000 words. The papers are to be submitted to the secretary not later than March 31, 1898.

Tragedy in Texas.

St. Louis, Nov. 20.—A special to the Republic from Waco, Tex., says: J. W. Harris, editor of the Waco Times-Herald, morning paper, and W. A. Harris, his brother, on one side and Judge G. B. Gerald, a prominent citizen, fought a duel to the death on the street Friday night at five o'clock. W. A. Harris was shot dead, J. W. Harris wounded fatally, his body being paralyzed, and Gerald shot in the side and may die. The trouble was the outcome of the mobbing of W. C. Brann, publisher of the Iconoclast.

A Serious Outbreak.

Vienna, Nov. 22.—The hostility between the Christian socialists and the social democrats, which exists in all parts of Austria and frequently leads to sharp collisions between the rival partisans, has resulted in serious rioting at Gratz, the capital city of Styria and the seat of wool manufactures. The police and military were summoned, but were stoned by the rioters. They then charged the mob with fixed bayonets, killing one person and wounding many.

To Bring Sultan to Terms.

London, Nov. 22.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily News says: "I am able to assert on the best authority that the powers are discussing the advisability of a naval demonstration in the Dardanelles or a blockade of Constantinople if the sultan does not yield to the demands of the powers with respect to autonomy for the island of Crete, especially in the matter of withdrawing the Turkish troops."

Banks to Consolidate.

New York, Nov. 20.—Arrangements have practically been concluded for the consolidation of the United States national bank of this city with the Western national bank. The exact terms of the consolidation have not been ascertained, but the United States bank will go into voluntary liquidation and the Western national bank will absorb as much of its business, deposits, loans, etc., as can be transferred.

Sentenced to Death.

City of Mexico, Nov. 23.—The great trial of Arroyo's murderers is over, terminating Monday evening with the sentence of death pronounced on ten of the police officials and policemen concerned in the butchery of the hapless wretch whose audacious attempt on the president caused so profound a sensation here. Public opinion sustains the verdict.

Coal Is Scarce.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 20.—The scarcity of coal in the Mahoning valley has been growing more serious the past week, until it has begun to affect the industries. The Finished Steel company was the first to yield to the pressure and was compelled to close down its plant Friday.

Set Free.

Havana, Nov. 22.—All the English prisoners held in the island have already been released, and all the American and French prisoners will be set at liberty in a few days.

MISTAKE IN DELIVERY.

Customer Lost Because of the Merchant's Versatility.

Queer things happen in suburban towns, where the residents have a way of utilizing means at hand utterly regardless of the consequences. Mrs. Stimpson, a notable housewife who lives in one of these terrestrial paradises, recently replenished her stock of household furniture at the only department store in the place and ordered the purchases sent home that afternoon when she would be there to receive them.

She was in a particularly happy frame of mind as she sat at her front window watching for their arrival, remarking with satisfaction the vacant places the new furniture would adorn, when an undertaker's wagon drove up and stopped in front of her door and a solemn looking driver in rusty black descended from the front seat and rang her bell. She did not lose a moment in raising the window and calling to him in a frightened voice:

"Go away! You've stopped at the wrong house! There isn't any body here!"

"I don't want a body, ma'am, I've got some things I was told to leave here," called the man.

"Take them back!" she commanded, "I tell you I won't have them! You ought to be ashamed to stop here! What do you suppose the neighbors will think?"

"Well, ma'am," said the man, as he climbed on his wagon again, "if you don't want your new furniture, all right, but I've got it inside."

"And I wouldn't take it as a gift," said the distressed woman; "the idea of bringing my goods in an undertaker's wagon."

"We hadn't another vehicle in the barn and you said you wanted it right off," responded the man as he drove away.

But the man of many callings who had utilized the last conveyance in his establishment lost the sale of the furniture and the good will of a customer who did not appreciate such mortuary enterprise.—Chicago Times-Herald.

FRENCH MENUS.

They Are a Thing of the Past, and English Is Now Used.

A gentleman who had noted the tendency upon the part of the restaurateurs of late to have their menu entirely in English, asked one of them what brought about the change from the old way, when French was the popular form for every menu in first-class establishments. He said:

"A change of time and a change of taste. There was a time when restaurants could charge very big prices. It was in good times, and people didn't care much what they paid so that the service was up to the very best. Then we put the bill of fare in French as a gentle deception. Few could read French, and when they ordered pommes de terre they were under the impression they were getting a French dish when, in fact, they were getting plain everyday murphies with the jackets on.

"I remember many funny cases. At one time I had a couple of young people at a table and at the close of the meal they ordered cafe au lait, just because it brought up the close of the menu. When they were served with coffee and cream they were surprised, and the waiter said the girl said to her beau: 'Well, I know enough French now to know that kaf aw layit is coffee. It won't take me long to learn French, Willie, if you keep coming here.'

"Another thing. In the old days the French was a gentle deception. A man who ordered pommes de terre, say, was willing to pay a quarter for them, but he would have kicked like a mule to be called upon to pay that much for potatoes. People are eating roast beef and beefsteak now, and French dishes don't go. I guess the nation is getting more and more to have pride in America and all things that are American."—Cincinnati Commercial Telegraph.

WOMEN DO NOT TELL THE WHOLE TRUTH.

Modest Women Evade Certain Questions When Asked by a Male Physician, but Write Freely to Mrs. Pinkham.

An eminent physician says that "Women are not truthful, they will lie to their physicians." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex.

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked, even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women.

This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham. To this good woman they can and do give every symptom, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients through her correspondence than the physician who personally questions them. Perfect confidence and candor are at once established between Mrs. Pinkham and her patients.

Years ago women had no such recourse. Nowadays a modest woman asks help of a woman who understands women. If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

And the fact that this great boon which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters which are received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in:

"I was a sufferer from female weakness for about a year and a half. I have tried doctors and patent medicines, but nothing helped me. I underwent the horrors of local treatment, but received no benefit. My ailment was pronounced ulceration of the womb. I suffered from intense pains in the womb and ovaries, and the backache was dreadful. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form. Finally I grew so weak I had to keep my bed. The pains were so hard as to almost cause spasms. When I could endure the pain no longer I was given morphine. My memory grew short, and I gave up all hope of ever getting well. Thus I dragged along. At last I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her answer came promptly. I read carefully her letter, and concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I felt much better; but after using six bottles I was cured. My friends think my cure almost miraculous. Her noble work is surely a blessing to broken-down women."—GRACE B. THE NEW MAN ADVISED.

Little man, little man, do the very best you can,
Gauge the measure of your pleasure on the truly pleasant plan,
That puts safety valves on joy, for a bright high-pressure boy,
By providing for the impulse which might mix in cheap alloy.

Little lad, little lad, be as cheerful and as glad,
As becomes a jolly urchin much too merry to be mad;
In your wildest gibes and jokes, well consider other folks.
You can be both kind and happy without wearing evil's yokes.

The best kind of little boys cultivate true equipoise,
And forget not other people 'mid their maniest pranks or noise;
They are anxious to be right, sunny, sensible, polite,
Not to riot and be ruffians who prefer to swear and fight.

They have eyes both frank and true, they are faithful and true blue,
And in courtesy's best coin give every playmate honest due:
They can halloo, sing and play, in the very liveliest way,
And no hoodlum stuffed with rudeness is as happy as are they.

Little fellows may be wise, honest hearts and honest eyes,
With a pure soul clear as crystal all unstained by filthy lies;
Be a boy of manly mind, truthful, useful, careful, kind,
Then your life will be worth living, as you cannot fail to find.

I. EDGAR JONES.

Genius in the Oil Region.

DICK WARNER'S WAY OF HANDLING NITROGLYCERIN.

"YOU would have been pleased more times than I can tell if you had only known Dick Warner," said a talkative man from the oil region. "Dick was a chap worth knowing. Indeed, he was. Devil Dick, we used to call him, and I don't know but what it was a fitting name for him. Devil Dick. He was a nitroglycerin handler in the early days of that sudden and capricious explosive agent, so useful to the oil operator, but so capable of mixing up and changing the aspect of things generally when it gets going at the wrong time and place. Dick's way of handling nitroglycerin was so disingenuous that when Dick had a load of the stuff to deliver to a well everybody else at and about that well took to the woods. Unless it might be Dan Sutton. Dan was a chum of Dick's, and had as calm and unruffled a manner in handling nitroglycerin as Dick himself. Why, I've seen Dan and Dick play catch with nitroglycerin, they were unloading Dick tossing can after can to Dan, and Dan catching it, just as if they were unloading brick, although the missing of a can by Dan would mean that in less than a second you couldn't find so much as a toenail of either. But Devil Dick was the better worth knowing of the two. He was original. He had genius. He was great.

"For instance, Dan Sutton would never have thought of doing such a thing as Dick did once down at Roen's camp. Dan might have been willing to do it, but he never could have thought it up. A driller named Peterson got a regular Dutch rolling skate on one day, and was blowing around about what things he could do, when who should come along but Devil Dick with a load of glycerin. The load wasn't for any well around the camp, but Dick stopped to listen to the drunken driller. Pretty soon he got off his wagon and says to the driller:

"'Pete,' he says, 'I'll bet you $20 you can't hit a can of glycerin with a stone at 20 paces once out of ten times, and I'll hold the can.'

"That was enough to make everybody around there prick up his ears, and when Peterson said he'd take the bet and Dick stepped to the wagon to get the can, we all made tracks for high ground. By the time we got to a safe place and stopped to look back Dick had paced off the distance and stood there holding the can of glycerin at arm's length, and the driller was getting ready to make the throws. Five throws were wild. The sixth one struck Dick's arm not three inches from the can. That jarred the can out of Dick's hand, but he caught it before it reached the ground, or the throwing match would have ended there and then, with the total separation of Dick and the driller from all further toil and tribulation. The last four throws were all close to the can, the last one actually grazed it. Dick won his bet, got his money, put his can back in the wagon and drove on his way.

"That was genius, wasn't it? And look what it did. When Peterson got sober and came to think over what he had done, he signed the pledge, and never touched another drop of liquor. He is living, rich and respected. He never would have been either if it hadn't been for Devil Dick Warner. Lots of men profit by other men's genius just that way. Lot's of 'em.

"In those days the woods all through the oil region, and the oil region ran pretty much all to woods, were alive with wild animals of all kinds, and it was no uncommon sight to see a bear, or a panther, or a lynx or some other savage beast prowling around the camps or the isolated oil towns. The lynx, especially, seemed to have a liking for oil-well men, and one particularly big and savage one had its eyes on Devil Dick almost every day when he was carting nitroglycerin over the lonely Corker Run road, and was watching its chance to get away with him. One day Dick was on his way to a well with a load of torpedoes, and he picked me up on the way. I was going to Jones' new drilling. On a stretch of the road through Conway's woods, I discovered a big Canadian lynx stealing along through the branches of the trees at one side of the road and keeping only a few feet behind us.

"'Great Aaron, Dick,' said I, pulling Dick's sleeve. 'Look at that.'

"'I seen it this mile or more,' said Dick. 'It's hankerin' after me, and I only hope it'll keep on after us till we git to Keery's opening. I'm achin' for it to do that. Then I'll surprise it.'

"Keery's opening was a gap in the woods, and a ravine 20 feet deep, a mile or so further on. The lynx kept right on, and when we got to the opening the animal was still with us.

"'Now,' said Dick, 'see me scatter him!'

The lynx had crouched down only a few feet from the edge of the nearest wall of the ravine. Before I had any idea of how Dick intended to scatter him, he grabbed up a can of nitroglycerin and hurled it with all his might at the animal, which was not more than 20 feet away. The can struck the side of the lynx with a dull thump, and the yielding flesh and fur did not offer resistance enough to explode it. The force of the blow keeled the lynx over on its back, and the can began to roll slowly down a gradual decline that led from where the lynx lay to the edge of the ravine wall. I am not ashamed to say that I stood somewhat aghast at this display of genius on the part of Devil Dick, for I knew that the instant the can rolled over the wall and dropped on the rocks at the bottom the explosion that had been averted by the lynx's body would surely follow, and that the man I had an important engagement with at Jones' new driller that day would look for me in vain.

"Quick as I could do it, and it must have been pretty quick, I jumped from the wagon, tore like mad up the ravine, and stood beneath where the torpedo would roll over the edge of the ravine, with my hands raised to catch it as it came down, and prevent it from striking the rocks. A scraggy bush of some kind grew on the edges of the rocks at the top of the wall, and just as I got to my post in the ravine the can of nitroglycerin had rolled to the edge and struck against the main stem of the bush. The can struck it a little out of the center, and the heavier end dipped down until it hung over the wall two inches, and in that position the can stopped. It seemed as if a breath of wind moving the bush must dislodge it.

"All this had taken but very few seconds. The instant I saw the can lodge against the bush I started back for Dick's wagon as fast as I could go, for I give you my word I was afraid the torpedo would drop before we got away from there and scatter Dick and me as well as the lynx, and I wanted to hurry Dick up. When I got to the wagon, though, there stood Dick with another can of glycerin raised, ready to hurl after the first one. He lowered it, though, and looked around at me with disgust and disappointment on his face, and, merciful me, how he was swearing!

"'The infernal varmint has give me the slip and took to the woods!' he hollered. 'Lord! How I'd like to bust one o' these shells on his carcass!'

"Dick put the can back and we drove on, Dick swearing till I had a notion to get out and walk. Before I had made up my mind fully a roar and a rumble came following us down the road, and a shower of rock thumped and pattered on all sides of us. We hadn't got away half a minute too soon. The torpedo had lost its hold on the bush and dropped to the bottom of the ravine.

"'It's too thunderin' bad!' Devil Dick ripped out before the rocks were done falling. 'How that'd a-scattered that infernal varmint of a lynx if it had only struck right.'

"That was Dick—Devil Dick Warner. Genius? I should say so! And to think that after handling nitroglycerin in his whole-souled and off-hand manner for ten years and more he should die of a carbuncle. Poor Devil Dick! You should have enjoyed knowing him, I'm sure you would."—N. Y. Sun.

SHARP EYES ASTONISHED.

Even an Expert on the Chase for Bargains May Be Fooled.

Ralph Bernal, a famous connoisseur, was once in the Colnaghi establishment and Dominic Colnaghi was looking over a portfolio of old prints. There was a good copy of Hogarth's "Midnight Modern Conversation."

"What do you want for that?" asked Bernal.

"Three guineas," was the reply.

"I'll take it," said the connoisseur.

"Send it to you, Mr. Bernal?"

"No, I will carry it home myself."

At a glance the purchaser had read that "Modern" had been spelled "Moddern," and the additional "d" made all the difference. It was the rarest of the Hogarth impressions and for this proof the British museum had to pay £81.

Dealers got frightened when Bernal entered their shops. The wife of a well-known print seller was tending shop when Bernal entered. As he came in he noticed that she was hastily putting away something in an out-of-the-way drawer. The instincts of the collector were instantly awakened.

"What have you there, Mrs. Town?" he asked. "Let me see it."

"Oh, no, sir; it is nothing you would care about," she replied.

"Come, come," said Bernal, "I know it is something good."

Whereupon the bashful lady displayed to the eager eyes of the virtuoso a pair of her husband's old socks, which she had been assiduously darning when their inquisitive client entered.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Painless Falls.

"It wasn't the fall I minded," said Pat, describing his sensation in falling from a scaffold. "Begorra, I could have gone on travelin' that way forever. It was the stop at the end that inconvenienced me."

This seems to be the experience of many who have been precipitated from a height. While falling they were conscious of no pain, no terror, though perfectly aware of what was transpiring.

Mr. Whymper, who has perhaps had more bad falls than any living man, says that he once fell and rebounded from rock to rock in the Alps and felt absolutely no pain, though he heard himself strike. As in drowning, the whole previous life seems to flash through the mind, and this gives way by delightful stages to dreamless unconsciousness.

Among the ancient Norsemen an old warrior who had had the misfortune not to fall in battle usually threw himself from the top of a cliff to gain admittance to Valhalla. The pleasant experience of those who had fallen and escaped alive may have had something to do with the practice and belief.—Detroit Free Press.

Suicidally-Minded Animals.

Herring and other fishes have sought death by rushing ashore in myriads, regiments of ants by deliberately walking into streams, swarms of rats by migrating in the face of their deadly foes and even butterflies by flying in immense clouds straight out to sea. It would be interesting to learn the causes of this apparent wholesale and deliberate self-destruction.—Chicago Chronicle.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Lost for Five Days.

James Allen, who carries the United States mail from Walker to Graceland, reached the latter place after having been lost for five days. He was a sorry looking sight, with his clothing torn to shreds, his feet almost bare and cut and bruised. On Friday morning, Nov. 8, Mr. Allen attempted to come overland from Walker on a new wagon route he had been told of, the steamer on which he has carried the mail all summer having been forced to stop running on account of the ice in the lake and river. He was not acquainted with the country and got turned around and bewildered. He tramped around the country, which is entirely unsettled, for five days and four nights, without a bite to eat, with the exception of a piece of bread which he found on a trail he was following. The bread was mildewed and gnawed by animals, but seemed to sustain life in the weary and well-nigh discouraged traveler.

An Epidemic.

An epidemic of verminus bronchitis is reported among the cattle in Mower county. This is the first time that the disease has broken out in the state, although some isolated cases of it have made their first appearance in the past, but were not officially reported to the health authorities.

The state bacteriologist, Dr. Westbrook, and his assistants, have been investigating it. Drs. Reynolds, Brimball and Wilson recently visited a large farm near Taopi where the disease was prevalent and found that 23 cows had already died and about 75 more were affected. In several cases the worms were not found in the throats of the diseased animals, and the department is conducting experiments to see whether these worms are really the cause of the trouble, as has been generally supposed.

A Possible Clue.

Another clue to the identity of the dead woman whose body was found on the hillside near Lambert's lake a week ago, came to light, when a woman giving the name of Mrs. Nellie Hartley, of 12 Sixth street south, Minneapolis, called at the undertaking rooms and partly identified the clothing found on the corpse. She also claimed to recognice the tooth in the lower jaw containing the amalgam filling. She thought the dead woman was a friend of hers named Seidenbender, who is said to have disappeared during the early part of last summer.

Held up.

One of the boldest hold-ups or highway robberies occurred just east of Faribault, upon the person of a farmer named Chris Clementson, who was on his way to the city, from his farm in the town of Wheeling. He met a man who asked him for a ride to town, and he accommodated him with it. In going over a cross road, the farmer's passenger got the better of him, and robbed him of all his money, $395. It is thought chloroform was used, as the robber put his hand over the farmer's mouth, and having the advantage of him, kept it there until he was unconscious.

Board Indicted.

The 1896 board of county commissioners for St. Louis County has been arraigned on five indictments, charging them with auditing and allowing false bills against the county. The different indictments were for different bills, but the charge is the same in each. Briefly, the indictments charge that on Sept. 21, 1896, the commissioners allowed certain bills against the St. Louis County Agricultural society as proper charges against the county.

Burned to Death.

A crew of section men set fire to some grass along their road in the bottom just outside of New Ulm and left it. Some little children living immediately above these swamps, on what is called Dayton's Bluff, saw the fire and ran down and played with it. The clothing of a 3-year-old son of August Kelz became ignited, and before any one could come to his relief, he was so badly burned that he lived but a few hours.

News in Brief.

Nils Hilo, a rich batchelor living near Morris, was attacked by robbers, brutally beaten and robbed of $7.

The postoffice at Sanborn was broken into, the safe blown open and about $100 in currency belonging to the postoffice and Poss & Gleason, in whose hardware store the office is located, was stolen.

Mrs. Bridget May, an old lady, was thrown out of a wagon at Winona, and her neck was broken.

The city council has passed a resolution ordering the Milwaukee & St. Paul to remove all tracks, sheds, etc., for a distance of five blocks before Nov. 30 and annulled and revoked any license or privilege given to the company heretofore at Red Wing.

H. S. Crippen, in business at St. Paul, in a fit of insanity at his home near Rosemount, Sunday evening, fired the house, terrorized his family and attempted to kill himself by cutting two ugly gashes in his throat with a razor. Each act of the insane man proved futile, and he was removed to the Rochester asylum.

Nils Hanson Helgedalen, a farmer living three miles south of Ulen, while on his way to the Feith mill in driving over a railroad crossing, fell out of the wagon with his head striking the frozen ground was instantly killed.

Major C. B. Sears will soon call for bids for the construction of the south pier of the Duluth canal. As it will be when widened and permanently completed in accordance with the magnificent plans made by him, this pier will be a structure beside which the present timber pier will be a pigmy. It will be 1,700 feet long and will cost about $175,000.

John de Loney, 18 years old, while hunting in the woods near White Bear, toward Little Canada, found the trunk of a woman. The body was headless and the hands and one foot were cut off.

LONDON LIGHTED UP.

Flames Destroy Valuable Property Covering Many Acres.

London, Nov. 20.—One of the most disastrous fires in London's history since the great fire of 1666 broke out in a large block of buildings lying eastward of Aldersgate street and between that thoroughfare and Red Cross street just after one o'clock Friday afternoon. The flames were fanned by a strong wind and were fed by highly inflammable stocks of Christmas fancy goods and flimsy dress materials of all descriptions that filled every floor of the six-story buildings in the old street. Consequently the conflagration gained headway with surprising rapidity and was soon far beyond the possibility of being checked by the few engines which were early on the spot. For four hours and a half the flames had their own way, and it was only after more than a hundred engines had worked an hour that the chief of the fire brigade sent out the signal that the fire was under control. At midnight the fire was still the scene of great excitement. Fifty engines were playing upon the ruins, wagons were hurrying up coal and tons of water were pouring into the fiery debris.

Hamsell street was the scene of the outbreak of the fire, which was due to an explosion in connection with a gas engine on the premises of Walter Brown & Co., mantel manufacturers at No. 30 on that thoroughfare.

It is impossible to accurately estimate the damage done, but the direct loss will probably be below $10,000,000. The Evening Standard in its financial article says it is believed that the bulk of the fire losses will fall upon American fire insurance companies.

About 300 firms are seeking for new offices. The estimates of the amount of damage done range from $10,000,000 to $60,000,000, but according to the best opinion the loss is about $10,000,000.

All the historic treasures of Cripple Gate church were removed, including the records of Oliver Cromwell's marriage, Milton's burial and the deaths from the plague in 1665.

The district ravaged by the fire is bounded by Aldersgate street, Red Cross, Maidenhead court and Bradford avenue, and includes the Intermediate streets, Jewin, Hamsell, Well and Edmund, and Jewin crescent. The ravaged district also includes part of Australian avenue, Paul's alley, Cripple Gate churchyard, Wood street square, Monkwell street, Nicholl square and Fore street.

Aldersgate street leads into Goswell road, and from the latter runs Old street, "the oldest way in or about London, and probably older than London itself, forming the road from the eastern to the western counties." John Milton went to live in Jewin street, off Aldersgate street, in 1651, and here he married his third wife. The church of St. Giles, Cripplegate, was built about the year 1100, close to the ancient city gate of that name where cripples were permitted to congregate to ask for alms of travelers. The church having suffered from fire in 1545, was then partly rebuilt. In it Oliver Cromwell, then only 21 years old, was married to Elizabeth Bouchier, August 20, 1620. In this church are the tombs of John Milton and his father and also the tomb of Fox, who wrote the "Book of Martyrs." In the southwest corner of St. Giles churchyard are the remains of a bastion of the old Roman wall which once surrounded the city. The funeral services of Daniel Defoe, author of "Robinson Crusoe," were held in St. Giles' church. The stained-glass window injured by fire was erected to the memory of Milton by the late George W. Childs, of Philadelphia. This venerable church is approached by an archway in Red Cross street, through which the fire swept.

The Sealing Question.

Washington, Nov. 23. — One of the most important features of the Behring sea negotiations, not heretofore disclosed, is that in the event that Great Britain and Canada consent to a suspension of pelagic sealing for one year the United States at the same time will agree to a suspension of all killing of seals for one year on the Pribylof islands, constituting the American seal possessions in Behring sea. As the islands are a part of United States territory, no question has ever arisen as to the right of the United States to do as it chose as to the seals while on land and within three miles of the shore, the three miles being part of the islands according to international law.

Didn't Believe in Banks.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Margaret Keegan, living at 512 West Fifteenth street, had a strong belief that banks were instituted for the sole purpose of swindling people out of their money, and desiring to retain all her funds in a safe place she selected a barrel and placed the barrel in a closet in her home. The amount in the barrel consisted of $8,000 in notes and silver. Saturday during the absence of all the members of the Keegan household thieves entered the house and stole every cent of the money. There is no clew to the robbers.

Is Mrs. Logan's Ward.

Washington, Nov. 20.—An order was issued by the orphans' court Friday making Mrs. John A. Logan guardian for Miss Evangelina Cossio y Cisneros. The proceedings in court were very brief, but the senorita's appearance created much interest. The application for guardianship set out that Miss Cisneros has declared her intention to become a citizen of the United States, so far as the law allows, and that she intends to enter an institution of learning in this city and to hereafter remain a resident of Washington.

Tammany Gives to the Poor.

New York, Nov. 20.—The executive committee of Tammany hall met Friday and arranged for the annual organization next month. After the transaction of this business Richard Croker made a speech in which he asked the committee to subscribe $20,000 for the starving people of Cuba and a like sum for the poor of this city. The suggestion was promptly acted upon, and the Cuban check was handed to Senor Tomas Estrada Palma.

Thirteen Million in Cash.

Washington, Nov. 23.—The treasury Monday received from the reorganization committee of the Union Pacific railway $13,645,250 in cash and turned over to the committee that amount in bonds which have been on deposit with the government in the sinking fund of the road.

Dives from Eads Bridge.

St. Louis, Nov. 23.—Paul J. Tuston, a professional high diver, rode out onto the Eads bridge and near the center span stripped himself of all but swimming trunks, and dived into the river below, a distance of 129 feet.

Wages Raised.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 23.—The Carbon Limestone company and other quarries about here, employing over 1,000 men, have increased the wages of employes from ten to twenty per cent.

Another Iliad.

The following story proves what hardly needs proving, that a man may handle books without being a scholar. It wasn't in the book stall of a department store; it was in a real bookstore; a bookstore, moreover, where you would expect to find salesmen who know books. A friend of mine went in the other day and asked for Pope's "Iliad." The salesman went away to look for it. Presently he returned with a book in his hand. A GREAT REMEDY.

Greatly Tested.

Greatly Recommended.

The loss of the hair is one of the most serious losses a woman can undergo. Beautiful hair gives many a woman a claim to beauty which would be utterly wanting if the locks were short and scanty. It is almost as serious a loss when the natural hue of the hair begins to fade, and the shining tresses of chestnut and auburn are changed to gray or to a faded shadow of their former brightness. Such a loss is no longer a necessity. There is one remedy which may well be called a great remedy by reason of its great success in stopping the falling of the hair, cleansing the scalp of dandruff, and restoring the lost color to gray or faded tresses. Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor is a standard and reliable preparation, in use in thousands of homes, and recommended by everyone who has tested it and experienced the remarkable results that follow its use. It makes hair grow. It restores the original color to hair that has turned gray or faded out. It stops hair from falling, cleanses the scalp of dandruff, and gives the hair a thickness and gloss that no other preparation can produce.

Mrs. Herzmann, of 356 East 68th St., New York City, writes:

"A little more than a year ago, my hair began turning gray and falling out, and although I tried ever so many things to prevent a continuance of these conditions, I obtained no satisfaction until I tried Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor. After using one bottle my hair was restored to its natural color, and ceased falling out."—Mrs. HERZMANN, 356 East 68th St., New York City.

"I have sold Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor for fifteen years, and I do not know of a case where it did not give entire satisfaction. I have been, and am now using it myself for dandruff and gray hair, and am thoroughly convinced that it is the best on the market. Nothing that I ever tried can touch it. It affords me great pleasure to recommend it to the public."—FRANK M. GROVE, Fayssdale, Ala.

(with a little soap) used to be the thing to clean house with. Now-a-days it's Pearline. Pearline is easier and quicker and better than elbow-grease. DELANO, FRIDAY, NOV. 26, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—DR. NIVEN, Dec. 10 and 11. 2t.

—Dr. Carter, Dentist, visits Delano this week on Friday and Saturday.

—Rev. J. L. Farber preached the Thanksgiving sermon at the M. E. church, yesterday.

—Rev. Ray, of Litchfield, held Episcopal services at the Presbyterian church Wednesday.

—Rumors are afloat that another creamery is to be started in Delano, soon. Competition is the life of trade.

—The Thanksgiving sociable at Mrs. T. M. Shaw's was quite a success considering the inclemency of the weather.

—Delano's streets at times remind one of Chicago, now-a-days. People have been obliged to suspend plowing and other farm work, so come to town more.

—C. J. Buckley received, this week, the sad intelligence of the death of his mother, in England. Mr. B. has the sympathy of his many friends in this sad bereavement.

—The scholars of the two primary rooms of the public school gave a Thanksgiving entertainment Wednesday, which was pronounced very fine by those attending. We lament our inability to be there.

—Dr. Ames had a small fire a few days ago. A blaze started around the stove pipe. Prompt aid subdued the flames and assisted in sitting the stove on the sidewalk.

--Mrs. Jaunich is building a house on Second street between Elm and Maple. Gus Kruger and Andrew Bockman are the carpenters. Charles Zimmer is putting up a barn in the same neighborhood.

—The Pope manufacturing Co., of Hartford, Conn., have sent us one of their handy desk memorandum calendar. If any of our readers wish one they can get it by sending five two cent postage stamps to that company. Calendar department.

—The Minneapolis Tribune says Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wilson, has learned that American hogs are too fat for foreign markets, and don't command over half the price in market as do those of other countries where they are not so much grease.

--Thanksgiving day, the great national holiday, was observed with true American spirit in Delano Large numbers of fowls, from Turkey to goose, served to appease the appetites of hungry and patriotic hordes. All are thankful for peace and plenty.

—The first real snow of the season covered the ground on Thanksgiving morning. Skating had just begun on the river, and young people were figuring on a fine time; but the "beautiful" would have to be swept off from the ice and that was entirely too much like work.

—From Annandale items in Maple Lake Messenger we take: "A. G. Sexton has been hunting in Pine county and came home last Friday. Mr. Sexton, who is an old time hunter, proved that his hands and eyes had not forgot their cunning, from the fact that with three shots he got two deer and a porcupine."

Mr. Sexton used to live in Delano and is well known as one of the early settlers at Greenwood.

Albert Kurtz is making one of his periodical visits to Delano friends this week.

Misses Gray and Kelly are spending their their Thanksgiving vacation at home.

Urbon Kornek who has been spending some time in Montana returned home Monday.

Jenner Chance, Guy Murphy and Floyd Roberts of Hamline U., were up Thanksgiving.

John Cunningham and son Emery, of Minneapolis, drove up yesterday, for a few days visit at the farm.

Friend Williams and charley coolen of Smith Lake, and Peter Peterson, of Waverly spent Thanksgiving at Delano.

Frank Speckle, Will Hellman and John Brenner with their ladies attended the dance at Howard Lake last night.

Miss Irene Cheeley, who is teaching near Brooklyn Center, visited Delano friends over Sunday, returning to her school Monday.

Mesdames L. M. Maxfield and William Gross spent Sunday in Minneapolis with their sister Mrs. Mrs. John Cameron who is very sick.

Frank Schaffer and George Barth came up from St. Thomas college to assist in carving the Thanksgiving turkeys according to latest rules and regulations.

Peter Jaunich took a trip to the cities on Tuesday, remaining in town Monday night so as to be here for the early train; the train was so late he could have walked in Tuesday morning just as well.

O. W. Crawford was a business visitor to the GAZETTE office Saturday. He is moving his family into Rockford village to be with his mother this winter. Mr. C. is an old settler and an old soldier and is not very old, either.

Hans Brandser returned home Sunday evening from the old country, and from New York where he stopped to perfect himself in cutting and fitting clothing according to the latest approved styles. He will be with John awhile.

Ignatius Knopp, son of Paul Knopp, of Woodland, was a caller Wednesday. He has just returned from Iowa where he has been farming. He says he has been over all the western states and that none are so good as Minnesota.

Dr. Soper, who in company with Rev. Nugent visited Baltimore, New York, and other cities in the east, returned home Monday. He says Rev. Nugent had about regained his equilibrium; and expected to sail, with his brother, in a few days, for Liverpool. Mrs. Soper, who was visiting in Minneapolis, came home with the Doctor.

The public will be curious to see the wonderful creation that will be able to run the gauntlet of both houses as at present constituted.

Waseca Herald: The bimetallists of this country who voted for Bryan are all as much in favor of gold as of silver. They favor the unlimited coinage of both gold and silver into coins of the same weight and ratio that we now have, and the man who says that we favor the "single silver standard" is either very much mistaken or given to chronic mendacity—and the truth is not in him.

Show us the "smart aleck" who, according to the Times made the "startling statement that the printer's and barber's trade was rather low and degrading." Or that any other trade is beneath the dignity of honest people, who desire to earn their own living." The probabilities are that the smart aleck never worked at a trade, and unless he changes his views never will earn his own living by the sweat of his face.

Ida Grove (Iowa) Era: About ten days ago Thos. Freeney killed a hog for his winter meat, but when he came to cut it up he found a number of long slender black worms in the meat. He sent Dr. Piper down to examine the meat and he pronounced it deadly poisonous. We understand that some of the meat was sent to the Iowa State college at Ames, where Dr. Piper's decision was verified. The hog was apparently perfectly healthy before it was killed.

Saint Cloud Times: The trial of J. R. Howard, assistant claim agent of the Great Northern, who is well known in this city and county, resulted in his acquittal on Thursday afternoon. The case was tried at Minneapolis. Howard was accused with having attempted to bribe a juror in Wright county, who was sitting on a case in which the Great Northern was being sued for damages. The case was closely contested on both sides. The state has certainly had every possible opportunity to make out its case, and Mr. Howard's acquittal is a matter of great gratification to his friends to whom such an outcome was confidently expected.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 13, 1897.

It is not surprising that Mr. McKinley should be worried about what to say in his annual message to Congress about the Dingley tariff, which was, according to its supporters, to be such a revenue producer that the receipts of the government were to speedily exceed its expenditures. The facts are unsatisfactory enough to worry him and every other supporter of the Dingley law. Since the first of July the Treasury deficit has been more than $13,000,000. The right thing for Mr. McKinley to do would be to come out like a man and say that the present tariff had failed to provide a sufficient revenue, and to ask congress to provide other means of raising revenue, either by amending the tariff law or by imposing additional taxation, but he will hardly dare to do that, as it would be an acknowledgement of error upon the part of himself and those who imposed the Dingley tariff upon the country. It is probable that he will wind up by sticking to the original Dingley tariff, that the tariff will, in time, produce revenue sufficient to meet the public expenditures, and let it go at that, trusting to time, circumstances and luck to furnish some way of getting himself and party out of the tariff hole.

Ex-Secretary Foster met the full expectations of his enemies, who have predicted from the beginning that he would make a mess of the sealing negotiations, so far as England was concerned. He has done that very thing, although he is charged with having made some questionable statements about reciprocity, and other things to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, in order to try to get that gentleman's consent to the negotiation of a treaty binding England, Canada, and the U. S. to a cessation of open sea sealing for a time. Sir Wilfrid declined to consent to such an agreement, unless he was given tariff and other concessions for Canada, which this administration would not dare to give, and now the whole business is off, and the killing of seals wherever found will go right along, by Canadians, although citizens of the U. S., Japan and of Russia are prohibited by Foster's recently negotiated treaty from doing the same thing. Mr. Foster is as mad as a wet hen because the public is on to the fizzle he has made after all the months he spent chasing all over the world, drawing a fancy salary and traveling expenses, and has issued a statement endeavoring to keep himself in his fat position by making it appear that the negotiations were not broken off, but merely suspended until the Canadian Government can do a little thinking.

According to a statement emanating from official circles, and evidently given out as a feeler, Mr. McKinley will not send the correspondence with Spain, concerning Cuba, to Congress until it is asked for, and may not do so then if he doesen't consider it advisable. All the summer and fall friends of the administration were saying, "Oh, it will be all right when Congress meets; then Mr. McKinley will make all the correspondence public and his course will be indorsed." What has brought about a change of mind? The most plausible cause is that Mr. McKinley believes that if the correspondence was made public while Congress was in session that it would bring about Congressional action in less than 48 hours, and that is just what he doesn't want. He desires to give Spain more time, and if he doesn't undergo another change of mind before his message goes to Congress he will tell Congress so.

The office seekers have a new grievance against Mr. McKinley. On the same day that it was stated that Mr. McKinley had arranged to give one hour every morning to a sculptor who had been engaged to make a bust of him it was officially announced that only those callers who were sent for would be seen by Mr. McKinley until he has finished work on his message to Congress. The office hunters want to know what urgency exists for the making of that bust, and why the hour a day to be devoted to sitting for the sculptor could not have been given to hearing what they had to say.

Hon. J. P. Newman, of Newport, Ky., who is visiting Washington, says of his State: "Kentucky is back into the democratic column to stay, and it will be many a year before the opposition will be able to get control again. There is no doubt in my mind of the election of a free silver democrat to succeed Senator Lindsay, but I will not undertake to predict who will be given that honor. Mr. Bryan's popularity in our State has not waned; in fact, I think he is stronger today than ever."

Representative Berry, of Ky., who was one of the party of Congressmen recently in Hawaii, is enthusiastic in his praise of the climate, soil, and products of the islands. Upon the subject of annexation he says: "If there was a certainty that the people of the islands could be secure in their right of self government, as now enjoyed under the Dole administration, I would be in favor of a policy of non-intervention by the United States; but the danger is that if we do not act some other country will, and this country could not tolerate the acquisition of Hawaii by any foreign power. These are the grounds upon which I favor annexation."

"What to Eat" for December.

"How to Live a Hundred Years" forms the title of a short but interesting article in the December number of What To Eat.

What Shakespeare has to say about kissing for dyspepsia is told by Ira Gale-Tompkins in a capital way, while James Courtney Challis supplements the article by a very funny poem entitled "The Bridger Cure," all fittingly illustrated.

The cover is beautiful, and the centerpage is a patriotic gem that all old soldiers and their friends should see and preserve.

WHAT TO EAT offers $10 to the person filling out the following blank lines so as to make the best four lines of poetry, and $1 each to the ten next best. The only conditions are that you fill out the lines and send ten cents for sample copy of magazine.

I saw a man come down the street,
And he was full of——
The day was bright, the air was sweet,
And——

Other words may be used in the second and fourth lines if preferred.

Still Hopes For Bimetallism.

(By Cable to the Tribune.)

PARIS, Nov. 21.—In the course of a speech yesterday in the chamber of deputies, during the debate on the subject of the agricultural crisis, M. Meline, the premier, expressed the hope that the day would yet come when bimetallism would triumph as a solution of the agricultural depression.

Disintigrating Republicans.

Bryan and Towne are predicting the disintigration of the Republican party in 1900. It strikes us, we have heard such predictions before.

Certainly they are not alone in their predictions. Unless the present administration fixes up the finances, there is bound to be a terrible turning out of office.

Drowned While Skating.

Carl Gustafson, a boy of 16 years, of Silver Creek, was drowned last evening while skating on Carlson's pond, a small sheet of water two miles east of Hasty. The body was recovered early this morning. It is pretty dangerous skating on lakes or deep ponds yet, as the weather has not been cold enough to freeze the water more than a half inch.—Wright County Times.

Too Many In a Bed.

To judge from the comments on each other made by the papers of Wright county one would think there were too many in the bed. And that's probably about the fact. There are enough papers in Wright county since the additions recently made in Buffalo and Annandale, to form a promising Wright county newspaper association, butit takes something besides numbers to make an editorial association.—Minneapolis Journal.--Wright County Times.

Go and Sin No More.

NEWPORT, KY, Nov. 16.—The case of Charles W. Shotwell, aged seventeen years, charged with housebreaking, was heard by the Grand Jury today. The boy had been in jail three months. He was in rags and almost barefooted when brought before the Grand Jury. He said his parents died years ago, and that he was without home or friends. Driven to desperation, he joined an older person in attempting to break into a house. The other person escaped.

Shotwell concealed nothing, and his story was corroberated. The jury rendered no indictment, but made up a purse for him, and also procured new clothing and started the lad out with promises of leading a better life.

Saloonkeepers Sentenced.

MOORHEAD, Minn., Nov. 19.—Judge Searle, in sentencing the eight saloonkeepers who pleaded guilty to indictments charging them with allowing gambling on their premises, warned the offenders that they would get the limit of the penalty in case they were convicted in his court again. The maximum penalty is a fine of $500 and six months' imprisonment, but these being first offenses, Judge Searle only imposed a fine of $100 and cost in each case, or imprisonment until paid, not exceeding ninety days. The men sentenced are Thomas Erdel, L. A. Kertson, John B. Ward, A. J. Rustad, Wolf Rutz, Henry Souszin, Thomas H. Murphy and Norman Young, all prominent saloonkeepers.—Pioneer Press.

THE President's mother has had a paralytical stroke and is expected to die. Her son is at her bed side.

DR. C. T. ALLEN, Professor of Anatomy in Hamline University Medical school, died Sunday night. He is said to have had grippe, and taken an overdose of morphine.

THE two Indians implicated in the Spicer murder, who escaped the mob in N. Dakota were liberated at Bismark, Dec. 1. The Indian agent came after them with a guard of 40 armed Indians to conduct them to the reservation.

IF the McKinley bill was made to "protect our infant industries" and to reduce the surplus and was successful why should we expect the Dingley bill while protecting syndicates, trusts, and greed and gain generally, to fail to produce a deficiency.

SOME protective tariff folks say that the Dingley bill has stopped making a deficiency in the treasury, lately. Why, was it not on account of the $13,000,000 first payment for the Union Pacific Railroad, sold a short time ago: rather than from tariff on imports that our treasury was recuperated.

JUDGES in Hennepin county seem to tire of the bench and resign before their terms of office expire. Why can this be? What's the matter with the old bench any way? It must be terrible hard some way or another; needs a new cushion maybe. Judge Jamison is the last to retire and W. A. Lancaster succeeds him by appointment of Gov. Clough.

Which Man Makes the Better Congressman.

C. A. Towne was elected to Congress on a bimetallic platform, written for himself. He says his party went back on bimetallism, and he went out of the party. He stands boldly up and proclaims to all the people that he honestly beleived when he wrote that platform, that he was right; he believes it yet, and believing bimetallism is best for the United States he insists that the country live up to it, whether other countries say we can or not.

Page Morris, now in Congress, says he fears the Senate would not pass any financial bill Congress might present to it, and sits quietly down to await the time when the Senate may consent to allow Congress to hatch up something that will not hurt the party, and will agree beforehand to pass. If Mr. Morris has any financial ideas of his own, why don't he, like his predecessor, make them known, and if he honestly believes them best for the country, do like Mr. Towne; try his best to have them passed. If Congress makes a good bill and the Senate refuses to pass it, that ought not to hurt Page or his party provided they are right.

A man that has ideas of his own and isn't afraid to say so at all times, is apt to do more good for a Congressional district and for the whole country than one who quietly waits until the party is prepared to pass measures for the party good regardless of the interests of others.

There will be a chance to vote for a Congressman next November. Think of it.

Condition and Theory.

When Congress assembles on the 6th of December it will be confronted with this condition;

A deficiency in the revenues.

President McKinley's Administration has been and still is making up the deficit from the left over proceeds of President Cleveland's bond sales.

The Dingley deficiency since the 1st of August is $32,546,078. It was over $5,000,000 for the first half of this month.

The theory of the Dingley bill was that by increasing the duties it would stop the deficit. The theory of the McKinley bill, drawn on the same lines, was that it would stop the surplus. Experience under both laws has proved that the original McKinley theory was right. A tariff for robbery is also a tariff for deficiency.

Will President McKinley recommend, will Mr. Dingley propose, a real revenue measure at the coming session? —Thrice-a-week World.

Differ on Protective Tariff.

The American Economist should, if it desires to impress people with its ideas on tariff be careful to have the eminent authorities cited by it coincide a little more closely. And especially should Mr. Dingley's speech at the annual dinner of the Home Market Club in Boston on the evening of Nov. 10, haye been less scattering. If he was not from the state of the lamented late Neal Dow, one would be led to believe that some imported goods bearing a high rate of tariff, were served at the Home Trade Club dinner; and that Mr. Dingley spoke after dinner.

We give, below, a few quotations from the American Economist. Read them and compare them with each other, and form your own conclusion:

The London "Times" warns British manufacturers that they will have to seek markets elsewhere, as the people of the United States have evidently determined to make their own goods hereafter. The warning is timely. Henceforth this is a Protective Tariff and home prosperity country.—Kansas City "Journal."

The object of Protection in America is not so much to raise prices, except where they are unreasonably low, as to keep the foreigner out of the market. The Tariff that builds up and preserves for American industry the prosperous American market, "the best market in the world," that is a Protective Tariff in the best sense of the world.—Hornellsville (N. Y.) "Times."

Mr. Dingley, author of the Dingley bill, says:

Indeed, I expect within two or three years to hear these same gentlemen who are now making such a clatter over the temporary inadequate revenue because of anticipatory importations, which they encouraged, indulging in complaints of the excessive revenue—just as they did in 1888-9.

If the people of the United States are going to manufacture everything they want at home, and keep all foreigners out of our markets, where does Mr. Dingley expect the surplus is to come from? Certainly not from the protective tariff.

Mr. Dingley in his published speech, accuses Mr. Bryan of admitting that "supply and demand, and not silver, make prices!" If he thinks supply and demand cuts no figure in prices, Mr. D. ought to take a trip to the gold regions of the Klondike.

Further, the author of the present tariff law says: "the common sense of the people concludes that the repeated coincidence between the Protective policy and prosperity, and between the overthrow of that policy and adversity, establishes the relation of cause and effect." Does then the gentleman think that the tariff alone is responsible, for everything good or bad? Would he have people believe that peace and plenty or their opposites depend entirely on the schedules of our tariff laws?

While the Protective tariff advocate, from Maine was summing up his powerful argument, some of the Home Market Club's dinner, subject to internal revenue only, may have attempted to mix with that paying import duty; resulting in the incompatible mixture with which the defense of the Dingley bill drew toward a close, as follows:

After all Mr. President, the essential thing about any Tariff is to so frame it that it will aid in opening up opportunities for all our people to use their labor and secure good wages; for when this is done our people will have the means to purchase so much more of imported articles not made here that ample revenue will be sure to come.

This last paragraph, to us, sounds very much as if the Dingley bill was trying to tickle too many folks. And, if it is constructed on the authors mixed plan, which it seems to be, it is as certain to be a failure, as was that other financial concern with which a few of our citizens under the spell of the persuasive eloquence of a slick tongued agent, and following the bell-weather of finance of Delano, were induced to make a permanent investment, and a trip to Minneapolis to aid the financeer in capturing the management of the corporation, which latter scheme also met with defeat. The plan being to buy shares, pay a percentage for loaning money, which you could borrow yourself at six percent, payable quarterly; and you to make 24 percent per annum on what stock you bought. We understand some of the stockholders were satisfied when they closed out business, with the size of the profits; the trouble being the same as that of Uncle Sam who is depending on the Dingley bill, and the other fellows getting a good share of everything but the deficiency.

Does the "Economist" expect anyone who did not partake of the dinner of the Home Market Club, in Boston, or who is not interested in getting rich by the undue advantage taken over others by Protection, or in some other manner hypnotized, to see how the new Protective Tariff law is to set all our people to work, at good wages, and they to spend their money for imported goods, and revenue enough to run our government and pile up a surplus as Mr. Dingley would have them. And all this while according to the "Economists" quotations "as the people of the United States have evidently determined to make their own goods hereafter." And, "The object of Protection in America is not so much to raise prices, except where they are unreasonably low, as to keep the foreigner out of the market."

Surely the Protective Tariff Doctors must hunt up less incompatible doses for their western friends or loose the last of them.

Congress Convenes.

Congress will convene next Monday, Dec. 6. Then will the country be on tiptoe of expectation to see what is going to be done. There are several very important questions before them. What will they do with the financial fix we are in? Everybody says something must be done. If they fail to do something, or do what don't suit the majority of the people, the next election is likely to swing the pendulum to the other side. Bryan and his followers will be asked to fix it up.

Then there is the bankruptcy bill. If the debtor is favored too much to suit the creditor; or if the creditor is given two much power over the poor debtors there is bound to be some bad kicking; and, like the financial bill, it is likely to result in lots of wind but no law passed.

The postal savings banks, in this country would place the power in the hands of wiley ward politicians to cry out to voters as they did at the last election 50ct dollars. People whose children had a few cents in the postal saving's bank would be told, "you must vote for "sound" money or your children can't get back what they put in the post office; they will haye to take fifty cents on the dollar." We don't believe in allowing politicians any more handles of that kind. If the children have any more money than they need they can manage some way to have it taken care of, as well as to put it in the post office and take it out when they see fit.

The temperance question seems more than ever to demand attention. It is known that intemperance is one of the greatest and most expensive evils our country has to deal with. It has had such a hold on the country that no party dared to interfere. But times are changing. People don't approve of even President McKinley's biz inaugural ball and wine supper, and the first president that has the manhood to absent himself from such scenes will thrill the chords of the popular heart of true Americans, as none has for a long time. Perhaps, in their desperation the Republicans may grasp at this straw and put in their platform a temperance plank, in order to divert the public mind from the financial situation, and the Dingley deficiency. If they do, the Democrats with Bryan at their head, will, of course, advocate temperance and then temperance people will be happy. And it is hardly likely that any effort to oppose the election of a man on that account would be made. Public opinion counts, and public opinion has come to the point where it wants its laws made by brains, and not manufactured by a few wire pullers getting legislators into a semi comatose state by the liberal use of potations they ought not to touch and then voting them like sheep. Americans want the saloon moved out of reach of all legislative bodies, and they want men willing to vote, and to work for what they think right on all questions.

People will watch the movements of this Congress as they have never watched a Congress before. They will form their own opinions of every bill presented. There is not likely to be any bill rushed through that the people don't know something about. Every Senator and Congressman must be on his good behavior. The Presidential campaign is already being arranged for. Every voter wants to know where he indiyidually is at, and he wants to know exactly what leaders to follow, and why he follows them. This fashion of leading people blindly about is about played out. They will read and know for themselves what they believe in and what they want, and they will return to Congress and the Senate men that can be relied on to work for the best interests of this great nation as well as for their own states.

Reed Getting Ready.

Thomas B. Reed will remove to New York and become leader to the disorganized republican hosts at the end of his present term in Congress. He believes this move will improve his prospects of becoming president.—Wabasha Democrat.

Mr. Reed ought to be politician enough not to become a citizen of New York if he wants to be president. People of no party want to take chances on running a New York man for that office in 1900.

Gremation.

For years past the question of cremation as a means of disposing of dead bodies has been before the people. Crematories have existed in different parts of the Union. But the expense and trouble connected with having the body of a friend disposed of in this way has been too great to meet with approval of many in our state. Now, that a crematory has been built in St. Paul, the question has come nearer home to us. Some would prefer being cremated and some would not. The question is open for debate, and it will probably be some time before everybody favors the plan.

From a sanatory point of view, under existing teachings that disease germs are baciili and can be burned, it would seem that the safest and surest way to rid the country of disease would be to burn such bodies as are dead from contagious diseases, like small pox, diphtheria, yellow fever, cholera and others.

The argument of some church people that the cemetery is a solemn place; that people love to go there and visit friend's graves is a beautiful one; but may be met with the argument that many people dread even to pass by a grave-yard especially at night for fear of ghosts. Doubtless the latter would prefer that all bodies were cremated.

Then there is the dreadful fear of ghouls resurrecting the remains for dissecting purposes or for reward offered by friends where wealth abounds, and which seems to haye induced the late John M. Pullman to have his remains cemented firmly in the ground among hugh stones. Such persons and their friends would doubtless feel, safer on this point if the remains were reduced to a few ashes to be sealed up in a nice urn; or maybe scattered to the four winds of heaven.

Whatever we may think, or failed to have thought before, the question now presents itself as a live question even though the subject must be dead before cremated or buried.

Contracting the Currency.

All the so-called gold notes, bonds and mortgages taken by the gold bugs since the demonetization of silyer, except United States bonds, are payable in greenbacks, as well as gold; greenbacks being a legal tender in payment of all such obligations. And this is the reason, no doubt, why there is such an effort, on the part of the gold combine, to destroy our greenback money. Is it possible that the masses can be fooled into the belief that it would be good for them to increase the bonded indebtedness of the nation $500,000,000 and destroy their greenback money, as is now proposed by the Hannacrat gold combine?—Waseca Herald.

Bryan Figures.

Mr. Bryan is said to have figured out the vote at last election in his state, Nebraska, as follows:

"In 1896 the fusion electors, representing the democrats, populists and silver republicans of Nebraska, received an average plurality of 13,060 over the republican electors, and a majority of 8,143 over all. This year the fusion candidate for supreme judge received a plurality of 13,819 oyer the republican candidate and a majority of 11,376 over all. This gain of 759 in plurality and 3,233 in majority was secured in spite of a decrease of about 30,000 of the total vote polled. The gold democrats polled less than half as many votes this year as last.

Liquor's Deeds.

From Oconomawac, Wis., comes the news that Earnest Cornell has confessed that he believes that it was he, while under the influence of liquor, that killed his two children and then tried to commit suicide, one week ago last Saturday.

Dr. Robert Collyer's Opinion of the "New Sayings of Christ.

Dr. Collyer condenses the whole matter into the axiom, What's true isn't new, and what's new is true. He says. He says: "The fragment of papyrus recently discoyered in the Lybian Desert is indeed a curious find. To me its greatest value lies in the marvelous, widespread interest it has called forth the world over, proving as this does the importance which the civilized world attaches to every word that has the slightest bearing on the life of Christ. As yet no facts have been adduced which furnish irrefutable proof of the authenticity of the Logia, or sayings, and in such a matter it seems to me it is possible to judge only 'by the large.' The sayings which are characteristic of the life and teachings of the man Christ may be fairly estimated to be His; while those that are not in harmony with His teachings and the creed by which He lived, it is safe to discard as of no more value than the Apocryphal Scriptures, of which we have a large volume. —From "Symposium on the Newly-Discovered Sayings of Jesus," in Demorest's Magazine for December.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 26, 1897.

Mr. McKinley's aid to Boss Hanna has made the election of the latter to the Senate an apparent certainty, but, unless some very shrewd students of things political are wrong, it has also made Mr. McKinley's renomination for the Presidency almost an impossibility. According to current gossip, Senator Foraker will lead a fight on Mr. McKinley in his own state, and the anti-Platt republicans in New York will use the "Citizen's Union" organization, which has been made permanent, to down Platt and prevent his carrying out the deal to give Mr. McKinley the solid vote of New York in the Republican National Convention of 1900. While these movements may not be directly in the interest of Czar Reed, as some say they are, he is likely to occupy the best position for being benefitted by them, if they succeed, as his friends are known to be at work in New England and elsewhere, to keep the following he had last year together, and to add to it. Platt and Hanna, in addition to the enemies he has made in the distribution of pie, will be a heavy load for Mr. McKinley to carry, and the chances will certainly be against his getting nominated again.

Democrats are inclined to poke fun at Senator Lindsay, of Ky., and to accuse him of having been asleep for a few months, owing to his having returned to Washington singing the same old Cleveland-Carlisle song about the only currency legislation needed being that which will retire the greenbacks. Most advocates of the retirement of the greenbacks propose some other sort of currency in their place, but Mr. Lindsay would have the greenbacks retired as fast as they are presented to the Treasury, and nothing issued in their places. In other words, he believes, or thinks that he believes that the people could prosper under a system of enforced contraction of the currency that is already less in volume than the country needs. However, there are not a sufficient number of sharers in that belief to cause any uneasiness.

Representative Gaines, of Tenn., has a letter written to him by Hon. W. J. Bryan in reply to an inquiry as to the truthfulness of a newspaper statement that Mr. Bryan had decided to retire from politics. The letter says: "The newspaper item is not true. I expect to remain in politics all my life. Whether I shall ever run for office again depends on circumstances." Mr. Gaines hasn't the slightest doubt that Mr. Bryan will head the democratic ticket in 1900 and be elected President.

Ex-Congressman Paul Sorg, of Ohio, who passed through Washington this week on his way to New York, is enthusiastic over the democratic outlook. He says the party is in a healthier condition than it has been for some time, and that there is a greater desire for harmony prevailing inside the party. He expressed the opinion that by 1900, all friction and feuds within the party will have vanished, and that in the national election of that year, the democratic party will triumph. Mr. Sorg declined to express any opinion for publication about the Hanna-Foraker scrap in Ohio, although it was inferred from his manner that he thought Hanna would win. That is the prevailing opinion among Ohio democrats in Washington. They also believe that Hanna's success will sound the death knell of Republican rule in Ohio.

Representative Hepburn, of Iowa, has let the Republican financial cat out of the bag and shown why the republicans would not dare, even if they controlled both branches of Congress, to put Secretary Gage's ideas into a statute, by saying naively, in a published interview: "Why if we should pass a law on those lines at this session of Congress, Iowa would not return a single Republican Congressman next fall and the republicans would loose a Senator from that state." Mr. Hepburn's confession may not have been politic from a republican point of view, but it is true, and there are four or five other states in which the republicans would fare no better than in Iowa. The administration has got to make a bluff at trying to get gold standard legislation from Congress, in order to keep campaign promises, but that is as far as it cares to go now under any circumstances.

B. K. Bruce, the negro ex-Senator, ex-Register of the Treasury, etc., who lives in Washington, but claims a residence in Mississippi for office holding purposes, evidently knew just what he was doing when he went to Ohio to take the stump for Boss Hanna, as Mr. McKinley has dropped a broad hint that Bruce was to be again appointed Register of the Treasury. As a professional office holder, Bruce is hard to beat.

Facts From A Farmer.

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 29, 1897.

MR. EDITOR, It would seem from all appearances that winter has come, and come to stay. We have hardly enough snow for good sleighing, yet a good many are improving thir opportunity. Some are going on sleighs and some on wheels.

Mr. Jane McNeal who has been sick for so long is improving and thought to be out of danger.

Cord wood has been in good demand during this cold weather.

W. H Kennedy has been retained as a juror on the Minneapolis murder trial.

Rev. Hamilton of, Rockford, preached at Armstrong A. C. church last Sunday. Hereafter he will preach every two weeks.

Mrs. Wm Bachelor, of Brooklyn Center, was buried at Lewis cemetery, Armstrong, last Saturday afternoon.

Maple Plain has been having lots of turkey shoots of late.

Earl Hoisington and wife expect to start for Dayton, Washington, soon. May go to the Klondike before returning.

Mr. Editor there is not much news in this neck of the woods this week.

Wonder why the Dingley bill does not keep off the cold weather. Those who father it and foster it as a sweet morsel under their tongue claim it does about everything except raise the dead to life.

Our Congress will soon be in session again. Then comes the tug of war.

Some people think the farmers struck it terribly rich this year because they got 80 cents a bushel for wheat (and many got only half or two thirds crop) 20 cents for oats, and 40 cents for potatoes etc. When the farmer contracted big debts years ago he got a good price for his produce but it has been coming down ever since and now he can not pay the principle; and many can not pay the interest, and with the good price the farmer is getting for his produce this fall. Under the Dingley bill, he pays more for lumber, more for sugar, more for boots and shoes, more for woolen goods, and many other things too numerous to mention. But the edict has gone out from headquarters that all the people should be taxed. But some little waspy, friskey politician of only a 22 caliber tells the people the foreigner pays all the freight and we get the goods delivered free.

Any one that believes the above will wake up sometime to find that he has only been dreaming.

Mr. Editor, most of the farmers have themselves fixed up for winter, and with plenty of provender, some wollen goods and a copy of the Dingley bill can keep warm.

Sweden is preparing a polar expedition for 1898. The annual arctic journey is becoming a national institution. Perhaps America set the fashion in going to the polls once a year.

In the old colonial times there were only 75 post offices in America. Ten years later there were 900 offices; in 1880, 42,000; in 1883, 67,000, and to-day about 70,000 have regular postmasters, receive and deliver mail matter, and employ 2,000,000 employes, men and women.

The papers are beginning to write up the survivors of the famous ride by Sheridan from Winchester to Cedar Creek. If these old vets equal in longevity the survivors of the charge of the 600 at Balaklava the American newspapers will be publishing Shenandoah valley reminiscences for half a century to come.

The Indian football players of the Carlisle (Pa.) school refused to contest in a match with West Point cadets. And so a picturesque performance was spoiled. Think of the historic suggestiveness of the descendants of the original red warriors engaged in a friendly yet determined struggle with Uncle Sam's future heroes!

The Canadian government is considering the question of making the starting of forest fires a criminal offense and providing a heavy penalty for violators of the law. Canadians are as much interested in forest protection as Americans, but the same laxity and carelessness have been displayed in the dominion as upon this side of the border.

An American consul in Argentine makes the prediction that the production of wool in that country has reached the maximum and that American wool growers have no reason to fear increasing competition. At the same time comes the report from Australia that the demand for American sheep in Australia for breeding purposes is constantly and rapidly growing.

The beet sugar factories in southern California have this year produced 30,000,000 pounds of sugar, and there is every prospect of this output being doubled next year. Such figures ought to remove all doubts as to the possibilities of the beet sugar industry in this country. With that industry once placed upon its feet, the United States should produce all the sugar needed for its own consumption, instead of continuing to import the great bulk of it.

The Belgian government, observing that advertisements are being placed on rocks and other public places, has notified the municipalities that "the nuisance must stop." Belgium is a thrifty land. More thrifty still is Switzerland. Yet when the St. Gothard rocks were covered with advertisements the government ordered them cleared off, saying: "We would as soon have them on the white cross of our flag." But here, in the United States—just look at some of the rocks up the Hudson river!

Edward Moran was killed on the elevated road because he was in a hurry, says the New York Herald. To catch a train and save a minute he rushed across the track—to his death. Moran was typical of the average American business man, who is always rushing pell-mell to his destination, and when he gets there usually finds that he has time on his hands. We are forever rushing and tearing to business—and taking things leisurely when we get there. This is the land of bolted breakfasts and gobbled lunches, the land of dyspepsia and all its attendant ills.

The oldest inhabitant of Hawaii, and probably the oldest human being in the world, who is in good health and has retained most of her faculties, is a native woman residing in Honolulu. Her name is Kepoolele Apau, and her age, from the most authentic reckoning, 124 years. She says that she remembers the digging of the well in Kau, and that she was a child at the time, similar to a child running about the house, a child of between six and seven years. This event occurred in 1781, and is described in Fornander's history. This would make her 122 years old, according to exact calculation.

Mexico has been stricken with the "greater" fever. Plans have been made whereby a European syndicate has agreed to furnish 1,000,000 colonists for the country of Diaz. If the agreement be fulfilled Mexico will certainly become "greater" in point of population, but it may be well doubted if such a machine-made increase will greatly benefit the country. Where will the million come from? It is reasonable to believe that they will be drawn largely from the pauper and criminal classes of Europe, and if this proves to be the case the Mexicans may have ample reason to regret their bargain.

That's a good story, the one about the bell being blown from a railroad engine in New Jersey. But it is incomplete. As a matter of fact the bell was found perched on the fence at a railroad crossing about a mile away, where it had gone to take the place of the gateman, who chanced to be asleep. And the same gust of wind that carried away the bell just took one whack at the engineer, whose hair was cut pompadour, and forced every individual hair back into his head, narrowly missing his brain and leaving him absolutely bald. There's nothing like telling the whole story while you are at it.

While a committee from the legislature of Georgia were on their way to inspect a convict camp they were held up by two men and compelled to give up what money they had about their persons.

The state department has been notified that the Peruvian authorities are threatening the interests of Victor McCord, the American engineer, who was arrested and confined in that country during a revolution, and in whose behalf our government has preferred a claim for indemnity.

In a railway collision at Warsaw, Russia, 11 persons were killed outright and 22 injured.

The German government has abandoned its intention of sending a warship to Port au Prince, Hayti, to enforce the demands for the payment of indemnity. The Gefton, instead, will be sent to reinforce the German fleet in Chinese waters. Baron von Bulow, the German minister for foreign affairs, gave the United States ambassador, A. D. White, a wholly satisfactory explanation of Germany's intention toward Hayti.

Secretary Gage said that in the annual estimates he would send to congress, he would name about $20,000,000 and not above $25,000,000 as the amount of the treasury deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898. The secretary said that he expected the receipts from customs to increase steadily and that in the spring months he anticipated quite large importations.

CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.

Troubles in the Reichsrath Cause Resignation of Cabinet.

Vienna, Nov. 29.—The members of the Austrian ministry on Sunday tendered their resignations to Emperor Francis Joseph, who accepted them, and intrusted Baron Gautsch, who holds the portfolio of public instruction of the retiring ministry, with the task of forming a new cabinet. Sunday morning Emperor Francis Joseph addressed an autograph letter to Count Badeni, decreeing the adjournment of the reichsrath until further notice. The cabinet decided to resign about two o'clock Sunday afternoon at a meeting of the council. Emperor Francis Joseph had previously received Count Badeni, Baron Banffy, the Hungarian prime minister, Count Welsersheim, the Austrian minister of national defense, and Baron Gautsch. It is asserted that the emperor at first declined to accept the resignation of the cabinet, but Count Badeni replied: "Your majesty, I cannot take the responsibility. Bloodshed will ensue if I remain in office." Thereupon the emperor reluctantly accepted the resignation.

[The recent disorderly scenes in the Austrian reichsrath which have resulted in the Badeni ministry tendering their resignation began when the reichsrath reopened September 23 last. Bitter feelings exist between the Germans of Austria and the Czechs and other Slavonian nationalities. A climax was reached when the Austrian government decided that the Czech language was in every way coordinate with the German in Bohemia and Moravia. The government was thereafter bitterly attacked by the German members of the reichsrath, and the latter sought to have the ministers indicted. The most violent and unprecedented scenes have taken place daily in the lower house, and sitting after sitting has been suspended in the attempt to maintain some degree of decorum, but the obstructionists, backed by strong popular support, provoked conditions equivalent to a revolt, and the Badeni government was forced to surrender. Count Badeni, who was called to form a cabinet in 1895, has had to deal with no fewer than nine distinct nationalities. When any concession is granted to any one of them the fierce wrath and indignation of the other eight are excited. Again the whole country is divided practically into two bitterly hostile camps. On one side are the anti-Semites and the clericals; on the other the Hebrews and their protectors, the German liberals. Count Badeni is a member of an Italian family that migrated into Poland in the sixteenth century and then obtained great possessions. After his graduation from the Cracow university he entered the service of the state. His rise in official life was rapid. Finally he retired from that career and entered the political world. He became a leader of the Galician landtag, and in 1888 he was appointed statthalter of Galicia. It was as statthalter that he won his reputation for statecraft.]

AWFUL LOSS OF LIFE.

Thousands Perish in the Philippine Islands—Work of a Typhoon.

San Francisco, Nov. 29.—The typhoon which swept over the Philippine islands on October 6 was the cause of one of the worst disasters that has been reported from the southern ocean in many years, if not in the history of that section of the world.

Several towns were swept and blown away. Fully 400 Europeans were drowned, and it is estimated that 6,000 natives perished. The hurricane struck the island at the Bay of Santa Paula, in the province of Samar. It devastated the entire southern portion of the island, and cut off communication with the rest of the world for two days. On the 12th the hurricane reached Leyte, and struck the capital of Tacloban with great fury. In less than one-half hour the town was a mass of ruins.

The wind blew with such fury that trees and dwellings were not only leveled to the ground, but were taken into the air and carried away. What the first attack of the hurricane spared was destroyed by successive blasts of almost equal fury. Then came a tidal wave that ran far inland like a solid wall of water. Everything in its way perished. Vessels were either engulfed or were carried on its crest to be left high and dry when the monster wave receded.

Canada's Answer.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 29.—The reply of the Canadian government to the proposition of the United States, that the Canadians should stop killing seals for a year, beginning January 1, indicates that it is not possible to comply with the proposal, as every British subject has the right to engage in pelagic sealing unless prohibited by imperial decree, which can only be issued by authority of the imperial parliament, and parliament will not meet until February. The Canadian reply suggests that the proposed joint commission be appointed and meet at once; when, upon conclusion of negotiations upon the half dozen questions at issue, including the sealing question, the necessary legislation could be secured from the British parliament and the suspension of pelagic sealing go into effect in the spring. It is authoritatively stated here that the United States first proposed to pay the Canadian government a lump sum of money to extinguish pelagic sealing, a proposal which Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused.

Slain by Her Husband.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. Pauline Merry from her home at No. 50 Hope street was solved Sunday afternoon by the confession of Thomas Hickey, who was arrested on suspicion. Hickey told a revolting story of how Christopher Merry choked and beat his wife a week ago last Friday. Then, finding it impossible to restore his wife to consciousness, Hickey says that Merry decided to "put her out of her misery" by beating out her brains with a poker. The horrible story told by Hickey was extorted from him after several hours in the "sweat box."

Killed by Cannibals.

Washington, Nov. 29.—A startling and horrible story of the killing of Lindsay G. Burke and a Mr. Mellin, two Washingtonians, and mutilation of their bodies by natives of the Congo Free State has just been received here in a letter. The men were members of a party who during November and December, 1894, and January, 1895, went from this city to enlist in the Belgian army for service in the Congo Free State. The information received is that Burke and a party of 50 natives were ambushed and killed by cannibals.

Kentucky's Vote.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 30.—The official count for Kentucky was made Monday. The totals for 1896 were: McKinley, 218,171; Bryan, 217,890; Palmer and Buckner, 5,114. The totals for this year are: Bailey (rep.), 168,678; Shackleford (dem.), 187,482; Hindman (nat. dem.), 9,835; Parker (pop.), 7,374; Wallace (pro.), 1,783.

THE AUTONOMY SCHEME.

Summary of Spanish Decrees Relating to Cuba and Porto Rico.

Madrid, Nov. 29.—The Official Gazette publishes the royal decree granting autonomy for Cuba and Porto Rico. An outline follows:

Article 1 explains the principles of the future government of the two islands.

Article 2 decrees that the government of each island shall be composed of an insular parliament, divided into two chambers, while a governor-general, representing the home government, will exercise in its name the supreme authority.

Article 3 declares that the faculty of making laws on colonial affairs rests with the insular chambers and the governor-general.

Article 4 directs that the insular representation shall be composed of two corporations, with equal powers, viz.: a chamber of representatives and a council of administration.

Article 5 provides that the council of administration shall consist of 25 members, of whom 18 shall be elected and 17 be nominated by the home government.

Article 6 provides that the members of the council of administration must be Spaniards, at least 25 years of age, who were born in the island or who have resided there continuously for four years. It specifies numerous officials such as senators, presidents of courts and of chambers of commerce and other bodies as eligible to election to the council.

Articles 7 to 14 inclusive deal with nominations and the conditions of election to councils.

Article 15 empowers the throne, or the governor-general, to convoke, suspend or dissolve the chambers, with an obligation to reassemble them within three months.

Articles 16 to 28 deal with the procedure of the chambers and grant immunity to members.

Article 29 empowers the insular parliament to receive the governor's oath and make effective the responsibility of the secretaries forming the governor's council. Secretaries may be impeached by the chambers, in which case they are to be judged by the council of administration.

Negotiations for treaties of commerce are to be made by the home government, with the assistance of the secretaries of the island.

Article 39 confers upon parliament the imposing of customs duties.

Article 40 deals with the commercial relations of the islands with the peninsula and provides that no import or export tax may differ to the prejudice of the productions of either island or the peninsula. A list will be formed of articles coming from Spain direct, which will be granted favorable treatment in regard to similar articles coming from abroad, and the same will be done for productions of the islands entering Spain, the differential duty in no case to exceed 35 per cent.

The remainder of the decree explains the governor-general's powers. He will exercise supreme command, be responsible for the preservation of order, have free power to nominate officials, and his secretaries; he will publish and execute the laws and decrees, international treaties and conventions, etc., and will have the power of pardoning, suspending constitutional guarantees and ordering a state of siege, should circumstances require it.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Spain's latest scheme for autonomy for Cuba is not well received in Washington. The publication made in the Official Gazette of Madrid, containing a summary of the royal decrees, has produced a most unfavorable impression here. Careful examination of the scheme discloses that a string is attached to every pretended concession to Cuba, and leads inevitably to the conclusion that the Spanish statesmen are at their old tricks of throwing dust into the eyes of the world in general, and of the people of the United States in particular. It is already apparent that Spain is not able to deceive anyone with these decrees. The Cubans say they will have none of such autonomy, which is at best a mere sham, leaving everything of importance subject to the control of Spain.

FOOTBALL.

Many Important Games Played on Thursday—The Scores.

Thanksgiving day, which practically ends the football season of the year, witnessed many important contests at various points. The scores in the leading games were as follows:

At Chicago—University of Chicago, 21; Michigan, 12; Bankers' Athletic club, 46; Knickerbocker Athletic club, of New York, 8; Chicago Athletic club, 52; New Jersey All-Star, 0.

At Evanston, Ill.—University of Wisconsin, 22; Northwestern university, 0.

At Philadelphia—University of Pennsylvania, 4; Cornell, 0.

At Lafayette, Ind.—Purdue, 6; Minnesota, 0.

At Denver, Col.—Denver Athletic, 8; University of Colorado, 0.

At Peoria, Ill.—University of Illinois, 6; Eureka college, 0.

At Kansas City, Mo.—University of Kansas, 16; University of Missouri, 0.

At San Francisco, Cal. — Stanford university, 28; University of California, 0.

At Council Bluffs, Ia. — Nebraska, 6; Iowa, 0.

St. Louis, Mo.—St. Louis Cycling club, 3; Pullmans of Chicago, 2.

At Detroit, Mich.—Detroit Athletic club, 42; Cleveland Athletic club, 0.

At Cincinnati, O. — Carlisle Indians, 10; University of Cincinnati, 0.

A Madison (Wis.) dispatch says that the news of Wisconsin's victory over Northwestern was received with great joy. It is planned to have a big celebration some night early next week, not only of the Evanston victory, but of Wisconsin's victory in the race for the western college championship. Michigan's defeat by Chicago leaving no possible question as to Wisconsin's right to the title.

Too Old to Work.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 30. — Richard Reddick (colored), who claims to have been born July 5, 1777, near Richmond, Va., applied to the department of charities for admission to the home, stating that he is now too old to work and cannot support himself. He was accompanied by his wife, who is 78 years old, and his daughter, who is also well up in years. The centenarian was assured that he would be taken care of.

Will Build Big Steel Plant.

East Liverpool, O., Nov. 30.—W. H. Bamfield, principal owner of the Irondale tin mill, has purchased a 20-acre tract of land in this city for a site for a big sheet mill and steel plant, which is to cost $250,000. The projectors of the new plant claim that the work on the buildings will commence soon after January 1, and that 400 men will be employed at first.

Annexation of Hawaii.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Senator Lodge, a member of the committee on foreign relations in the senate, was at the state department Monday. He said the first business of the senate would be to confirm the annexation of Hawaii, which would be done by ratifying the treaty or by legislation.

Fatally Hurt at Football.

Bath, N. Y., Nov. 30. — James W. Loveridge, who was injured in a football game at Hammondsport Thanksgiving afternoon, died here Sunday. His death is supposed to be due to a kick in the stomach received at the game. He was 19 years old.

Warmly Received.

Palma, Island of Majorca, Nov. 29.—Lieut. Gen. Weyler, of the Montserrat, arrived here Sunday morning and was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

MOCKRIDGE SAVED THE DAY.

His Transportation Feat More Attractive Than His Singing.

Whitney Mockridge, the noted tenor, was once taking a troupe of singers around the country giving concerts at the principal towns in the middle west and northwest. The troupe also included a violinist and a solo pianist. They eventually arrived at St. Louis, a town on the Mississippi river. From there they expected to take a train for Sedalia, a flourishing town in the interior. But to Mockridge's dismay, there was no train which would take him to Sedalia in time for his concert. The officers of the Missouri Pacific railroad were sorry, but it could not be helped. Mockridge telegraphed ahead to his agent to see if the concert could not be postponed. "Impossible," was the reply.

But the tenor was equal to the emergency. He groped down in his broadcloth and extracted a roll of large, potent bills, currency of the realm. These he waved in the countenances of the railroad people and demanded a locomotive, a special car for his troupe and a clear track as far as Sedalia. Money talked and he got the train and the right of way. He telegraphed to the anxious agent: "We are coming, Father Abraham, 10,000 strong. Meet us at the depot with band." The news spread through the town and a crowd gathered at the depot. The special train ate up the 178 miles between St. Louis and Sedalia as a hungry tramp eats a piece of huckleberry pie. The wheels only hit the high places. The crowd at the depot was madly enthusiastic when the train leaped into town, and there was a crowd at the concert. To hear the singing? Oh, no. To see the fellow who had saved the day, with Sedalia 178 miles away.—Chicago Chronicle.

BRIEF AND POINTED.

A Speaker Who Didn't Have Much to Say.

The pride of visitors to Washington who go to the senate chamber or house of representatives to see the congressman or senator from their district and hear him make a speech is often apparent at the national capitol.

One man had been observed as a frequent visitor in the gallery of the house. A friend took the seat beside him one day, and warm greetings were exchanged between the two.

"Have you seen him?" asked the newcomer.

"Yes," was the reply, "I've seen him."

"Have you had the luck to be here when he was talking?"

"I took care not to miss anything he might say. I've been here every day."

"I don't blame you. I only wish I had the time. The way he woke up those monopolies and ringsters out home was a caution, and then he was only nibbling at the questions of the day, just getting the flavor of the social situation previous to stepping in and biting out a chunk or two."

"That's the way I always looked at him."

"I suppose his voice has been ringing out in clarion tones."

"M' yes," was the doubtful rejoinder.

"What did he say?" exclaimed the questioner, eagerly. "I'll bet it was something brief and to the point."

"So far as I can judge I tried not to let any of his remarks get away from me, but I'm afraid that maybe I wasn't watchful enough. I've only heard him speak five times. Three of them he said 'aye' and the other two he said 'no.'"—Washington Star.

MAN WHO WORE A DAISY.

Girls Laughed Because It Was of Cloth, But They Repented.

They were giddy girls of the kittenish age, and, being out on a lark without chaperons, they spoke their thoughts aloud and made game of everyone and everything they saw, on the principle that all was fish that came to their nets.

One passenger on the elevated railroad particularly amused them, from the fact that although it was the month of bleak November he wore a white daisy in his buttonhole, a fine specimen of the ragged edge variety. It was conspicuous from its size, and the girls regarded it as a legitimate object of sport. Not being deaf nor blind, the man who wore the modest flower with the yellow heart grew embarrassed over the attention he received. At last one of the girls made a discovery.

"It isn't genuine," she suggested to the others, in a loud whisper.

"W-h-a-t?" they trilled in chorus.

"It's a base counterfeit."

"No! Never!"

"Yes, it's a cloth daisy."

By this time the man upon whom all eyes were focussed was ready to leave the car. Before he went he touched his hat to his tormentors.

"Yes," he said, pleasantly, "this is a cloth daisy. My little daughter, who is an invalid, made it and pinned it on. She asked me to wear it, and I had not the heart to refuse her. I hope I have your permission?"

A group of shamefaced girls sneaked out of the car at the next station.—Chicago Times-Herald.

TRYING ORDEALS FOR WOMEN.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Women May Avoid Painful Examinations.

To a modest, sensitive, high-strung young woman, especially an unmarried woman, there is no more trying or painful ordeal than the "examinations," which are now so common in hospitals and private practice.

An examination by speculum, or otherwise, is sometimes a positive necessity in certain stages of many diseases peculiar to women, so at least it is declared by the profession. This would not be the case if patients heeded their symptoms in time.

If a young girl's blood is watery, her skin pale and waxy looking, her lips colorless, bowels torpid, digestion poor, her ears and temples throb and she is subject to headache, begin at once to build up her system with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Do not allow her to undergo a physical examination.

Here is a letter from a young lady who requests that her name should not be used, but gives her initials and street number so that any inquiry addressed to her will be received. She says:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—It affords me great pleasure to be able to say a few words in regard to the merits of your Vegetable Compound. I was tempted to try it after seeing the effects of it upon my mother, and now I feel like a new person. I am a stenographer and was troubled with falling of the womb and female weakness in general. I continued to work until I was so weak I could no longer walk, and the last day I was forced to stop and rest.

"I was then so ill that I was compelled to stay in bed, and so nervous that I could not hold anything in my hands. The least noise or surprise would cause my heart to beat so loudly, and I would become so weak that I could hardly stand. I suffered for almost a year. It is different now. I can go about my work with pleasure, while before, work was a drudge.

"Trusting that my words of praise may help some other afflicted person, and be of benefit to womankind in general, I remain, Yours in gratitude, L. H., 444 S. East St., Indianapolis, Ind."

MY BOY'S WHISTLE.

You may talk of the pleasure that opera makes,
And the thrills so ecstatic it grandly awakes,
But there is no music to give me a joy
Like the light-hearted whistle of my bonnie boy.

It isn't a tune, but a jumble galore
Of all the notes in the musical score,
And while to another it's nothing but noise,
To me it conveys a heart's volume of joys.

Many times in the day I am straining my ear
At the door or the window that whistle to hear,
And when from the distance comes floating the sound,
I know that my boy on his homeway is bound.

It tells me he's well long before he's in sight;
It says he is happy with childhood's delight;
Then, as it grows louder and nearer, I see
My bonnie brave boy wave a welcome to me.

When he whistles while marching so gayly from school
I know he has missed neither lesson nor rule,
And when from his play he comes whistling along,
I am sure not a thing he has done that is wrong.

Whenever that blithe, merry whistle is still
I know that my darling is certainly ill,
And none but a mother's so joyful as when
His lips sweetly pucker to whistle again.

Some day when the cares of the world he must share,
When his heart is no longer as light as the air,
His happy-go-lucky shrill whistle no more
Will gladden my ears while I watch from the door.

But I pray that the time may be long until then,
And that when he marches through life with the men
He ever will give his dear mother the joy
She had when he whistled the tunes of a boy.

A POLICEMAN'S PLUCK.

THE popular supposition that a police officer is never, never on hand when he is wanted and that the sound of alarm is his signal of retreat received a severe shock when the story of Sergt. Howard's chase after the murderer Rohan was published a few days ago. The comic papers, with their clever illustrations, the dialogue-writing jokers and the others have taught some persons to look upon the policeman as the paunchy and pusillanimous tyrant of small boys and shrinker from contention. Which is wrong in a great many cases.

Sergt. Howard, with two loads in his revolver, crouching on one side of a garbage box, on the other side of which stooped an escaped murderer, with three weapons and unlimited ammunition, is not the first officer who has gone with open eyes into danger and has persisted against great peril for the sake of the law. Indeed, this was not the first case of the kind in which this particular policeman figured.

But the glory of his conduct in the Rohan case is enough without raking out of the past old stories of his courageous adventures. Other wearers of uniforms have performed similarly nervy feats and have made the silver star a sign of valor.

As, for instance, Tom Ormsby.

Ormsby was a patrolman in the days when the police department of the city of Omaha was first gladdened by the presence of a "wagon." Nowadays the patrol wagon has its own crew just the same as a railroad train—its conductor to convey the prisoner to the station with proper decorum—but at that time the necessity for a conductor was not known, and an arresting officer rode to the city jail with the culprit and helped the man at the desk to book the offender. Ormsby one night arrested some malefactor who was wanted for a rather serious offense elsewhere, a great giant of a man big enough to eat two or three ordinary policemen. The wagon being under way, the prisoner looked about him, and, seeing the manner of man with whom he was traveling—a rather small-sized individual, who seemed pitiably unable to help himself against the charge and thunder of such a big man as he—turned upon Orsmby, and in a moment that patrol wagon was the receptacle of a most magnificent fight. The noise of the onslaught startled the horses and caused them to swerve out of their course. The jerk threw Jim O'Brien, the driver, to the street, stunning him, and as the loosened reins flapped over the haunches of the horses, already nervous because of the unusual clamor behind them, they bolted furiously. Weaving across and zigzagging back along the wide street they thundered on, dragging the swaying wagon load of fight after them. One or two other policeman, seeing the runaway as it flashed under the gaslight and then flitted into the darkness beyond the corners, tried to stop the team, but before they could get to the center of the street the maddened horses were far away.

They were hastened on their fugitive course by the ever-increasing noise behind from which they were fleeing, but from which they seemed unable to withdraw. Fiercer, fiercer the battle between the two men raged in the narrow confines between the seats of the patrol wagon, the huge bulk of the aroused crook meeting the stanch grit and courage of Ormsby, the lesser man. Blows were battered upon the face of the struggling policeman, but still he clung on. The prisoner tried to throw him out of the whirling and swinging wagon, but the officer fought back and wrapped himself closer. With his own club Ormsby was beaten, and the gigantic prisoner centered every effort on reaching the policeman's revolver, his own having already been lost overboard. He caught a fleeting grasp upon it once—a grasp which was enough to send a ball flying at random through the air, scarring Ormsby's leg in its transit and increasing the fear of the horses by its discharge; but the policeman, recognizing his own inferiority in strength, with a jerk of his wrist threw the weapon out from him. It fell on the stone pavement, and another explosion added to the insanity of the horses.

They flew through the town and struck the country road which leads to the fort on the heights four miles away. The danger of a broad, clear midnight street was many times multiplied on the narrow dirt road cut by gullies and broken by ridges, but all the danger seemed insufficient to cool the ardor of the battling men in the blue wagon. Ormsby heard the hollow sound of their passage over wooden bridges, and felt the careening of the big vehicle as it crashed from side to side; momentarily he caught dizzy glimpses of night lamps in the outlying houses which shot past them as they progressed; he heard the yelping of the dogs, which, roused from contemplation of the moon, tailed behind the wagon, barking new frenzy into the unwearied horses. He heard the challenge of the sentry at the gate of the fort, and almost before the hail was uttered the wagon with its attendant clamor was inside the lines of the garrison, and was over a ditch and across a sidewalk and out into the parade ground, and, crashing against a tree, was shattered and overturned and loosed from the trappings of the horses, which, with a last bombardment of kicking at space, broke away and disappeared down Officers row, clanging and clattering as the singletrees and the attached fragments of the vehicle struck the flagstones.

Ormsby and his herculean prisoner were thrown out by indescribable twin somersaults, remaining strangely close together through it all. The officer of the guard came rushing, and found them gory and tattered where they had fallen, the big man unconscious from the concussion and Ormsby grinning weakly through blood as the lamplight fell on him.

"What's this?" said the military man, after the policeman had briefly told of the adventure. "You're handcuffed."

"Yes," said Ormsby. "You see, I was afraid he might get a gun to my head and make me let him go, and to be sure that he couldn't get away, no matter how he licked me, I snapped the irons on him and me when I saw he was doing me. But in the hurry I got his left hand locked to my right, and he kept right on putting up too much fight for me. Still, it didn't worry me much, for I knew that even if I was killed he couldn't get away. I threw the keys away with my gun."

The officer of the guard, who was a captain and who had been through nearly 30 years of fighting, looked admiringly at the little scrub of a policeman.

"Would you mind," ventured Ormsby,

"WHAT'S THIS!" SAID THE MILITARY MAN.

"letting me put this fellow in your guardhouse till our chief comes out to get us? I'll have to go with him on account of the cuffs."

"You won't as long as there's a blacksmith's tool in this post," said the military man. And although the hospital was convenient he insisted that Ormsby be carried to his own quarters for stitching, bandaging and tying up.—Chicago Record.

IN MEMORY OF TWO SLAVES.

Two Monuments Erected in the Wilds of the Kittatinny Mountains.

Nine miles northeast of Harrisburg, in the solitude of the Kittatinny range of mountains, stand two unique monuments. The spot is far from any human habitation, amid curiously shaped and massive bowlders, and on the very crest of the ridge. The wanderer who by chance strays into this region may well pause in astonishment before a roughly hewn rock upon which stand two carved headstones of white marble bearing the following inscriptions:

UNKNOWN.

Here in the solitude of God's Acre lies one whose life was filled with pathos and suffering and who had a tragic end. He took the North Star as a guide to liberty, yet in a fitful moment, for fear of betrayal, he took the deadly cup to save himself from bondage by his fellow men.

DOMINE DIRGE NOS.

GEORGE WASHINGTON,
Died April 8, 1863.

An honest colored man, who lived and died on this mountain. He is buried on the site of his former home. His virtues are related by all who knew him.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE.

Friend, pause and think of the Brotherhood of God. One may have a few more grains of pigment beneath his skin. Looking into the portals of eternity teaches us that the Brotherhood of Man is inspired by God's Word. There all prejudice of race vanishes away.

The story of the two monuments dates to the days of the underground railroad, when escaped slaves were pursued by their southern masters. In 1851 George Washington made his escape from a Virginia plantation and after months of adventure reached the spot where the monuments stand. Choosing to live in freedom here in the mountain fastnesses, he built for himself a rude hut and lived the life of a hermit for a period of 12 years. Gray and bent with years, he finally passed away to his reward, alone, as he had lived. After many days the body was found in a kneeling position under a giant pine overlooking the valley.

The elements of deeper tragedy enter into the story of the unknown. Four years after Washington had taken up his abode on the mountain the unknown, also a fugitive slave, reached the spot in safety and found shelter in the hermit's hut. For two years they lived together in peace and safety, but one day word reached the unknown that the agents of his former master were on his track and were but a few miles distant. Choosing death rather than a return to slavery or the betrayal of his friend's hiding place, the unknown stole away amid the rocks and there died by his own hand.

A few years ago the remains of the two slaves were buried side by side, close by their cabin, and a funeral service was held in the presence of a large number of people. The monuments were erected by the colored people of the state shortly afterward.—N. Y. Sun.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

The State Wins.

Secretary Bliss decided the case of the state of Minnesota vs. John Long, John Caldwell et al., involving large intersts in Minnesota, and of extreme significance as a precedent. The case came from the Duluth land district, and the decision of the general land office, which rejected the state claims to the land at issue, is largely modified.

The issue was the construction of the act of March 3, 1879, which allowed the state to select 24 sections out of any public lands, to be selected by the governor, within three years of the approval of the act. The general land office held the three year proviso to be mandatory; the secretary of the treasury now contrues it to be directory, permitting later selection on presentation of any reasonable excuse for delay.

They are Smart.

An odd result of the raising of the waters of Leech and other lakes, by the government dams, is that when the bordering meadow lands became submerged they did not long remain at the bottom, but rose to the new surface, and many large tracts go floating here and there, blown by the winds. The Indians, foreseeing the drowning of their hay lands, filed and were allowed claims for consequential damages. They were also prompt in discovering that the lands could not be kept down; and now they go right along and cut hay and stack it where cut, and haul away the crop when the ice becomes of safe thickness. Some of these floating islands carry thirty or forty large haystacks.

Event For Odd Fellows.

An important event in Odd Fellowship in northern Minnesota occurred at Crookston, when the Valley Encampment, which was originally established at Fisher, was removed to that city. The privilege of removal was granted upon consideration that a hundred new members be enrolled. This requirement has been complied with. The degree team of Sinar Encampment of Grand Forks were there to conduct the initations, and Grand Patriarch J. D. Two, and staff were present to install the officers of the new lodge. A banquet was served at the Hotel Crookston covers being laid for 400 guests.

Investigating.

Dr. F. W. Hine has been engaged by the Winona board of trade at an expense of $500 to make analyses of Winona county soil as to its adaptability for raising sugar beets, and to prepare an exhaustive report of the chances of success for a beet sugar factory if established there. The chances are considered good for the investment of German capital in a beet sugar factory if the report is favorable, as there is every reason to believe it will be.

They Were Married.

There was a wedding at Crookston, the ceremony being performed in the jail to meet the convenience of the groom, who is serving a sentence of fifteen months for illegal sale of liquor. The bride, a comely lady of 20, did not permit the awkward circumstances of her fiance's imprisonment to delay the ceremony beyond the appointed day.

Burned.

At New Ulm a little son of F. W. Hamerstein upset a lamp that exploded and set fire to his little sister, Irene, who was badly burned about the arms and the head. It is not sure that she will recover. When Mrs. Hamerstein rushed to the assistance of the child her clothing too ignited and burned her about the arms.

Found Copper.

A copper mine is said to have been discovered east of the city limits of Duluth, about six miles from the water pumping station. A number of pits have been sunk, and the copper bearing rock appears similar to the conglomerate of the Houghton county deposits, where are all the rich mines of Michigan.

FIRST WOMAN CITIZEN.

Her Sturdy Lads and Clever Lasses Become Prominent Citizens.

Known as the "Widow Ryan"—Was a Clever Business Woman—Short Sketch of Her Life and What Some of Her Children Accomplished.

From the News, Indianapolis, Ind.

Hundreds of thousands of men of foreign birth have taken out papers declaring their citizenship in Indiana since that State was admitted into the Union in 1816 without creating remark or comment. It was a different matter, however, when along in the forties the first woman of foreign birth applied for and received papers of citizenship after declaring in set form that she renounced all allegiance to every prince or potentate on earth.

This "first woman citizen" was an Irish widow who settled in southern Indiana with her progeny of sturdy lads and clever lasses upon a farm which she had bought. She had taken out naturalization papers in order to manage her property to better advantage, and for the further purpose of starting her family as true Americans with a full understanding of the advantages and responsibilities of American citizenship.

"The Widow Ryan" as she was known in Daviess County, Indiana, was a great woman with a clever business head and left behind her those who grew to be worthy men and worthy women, and who have left their impress upon the State.

One of these sons James B. Ryan became treasurer of the State of Indiana, and a son-in-law, M. L. Brett, also held that high and honorable position. Another son was the late Lieut. Col. Richard J. Ryan who was probably the most brilliant and gifted orator that Indiana ever produced, and who during the war for the Union served his country in the Thirty-fifth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, better known as "the Irish Regiment."

Another son is Thomas F. Ryan who is now 59 years old, and with a few intervals of absence has been a resident of Indianapolis for forty-two years. Mr. Ryan has been an active business man all his life and has seen more than one fortune come and go in the vicissitudes of trade and sudden panic.

In the early fifties smitten by the gold fever he went by way of the Isthmus of Panama to California, and he has always retained the free-hearted, open and trusting confidence that distinguished the gallant pioneers of the golden State. He has been all over the far west engaged in mining and trade operations in Oregon, Arizona and Montana. From May, 1885 until August, 1887 he was the government agent at the Seal Islands off the Alaska coast, a highly responsible position.

"For ten years or more," said Mr. Ryan in conversation with a group of gentlemen at the Indianapolis Board of Trade, "I have been extremely sensitive in my lower limbs, to weather changes. If my legs had been filled with quick silver I do not think they could have responded more quickly or more disagreeably to climatic conditions.

"During the past two years this infirmity became much worse, and I began to be alarmed, fearing paralysis. My legs were cold and recently from my knees down were without sensation. I could walk only short distances and would even then experience great weariness. I became more and more alarmed. I naturally thought of paralysis or locomotor ataxia. The prospect was not a pleasing one.

"I happened to meet my old friend Capt. C. F. Shepard, of this city. He was chanting the praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and gave me his experience, telling me that he had been brought by using them from a bed where he lay helpless, his physician having declared him a hopeless victim of locomotor ataxia, and was now as active as any man of his age, not even requiring the use of a cane. Upon his recommendation I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I found positive relief, after taking a few doses. The numbness in my limbs disappeared as if by magic and I can walk as far as I like at a good rapid gait and without weariness. This you may understand is a great boon to a man who has been of an active habit of life and who still likes to depend to a great extent upon his legs to get around in the world.

"The pills also drove the rheumatism out of my hip for I have not been bothered with it since I began their use. I think I shall have to join Captain Shepard in his praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. These pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A BAD COMPANION.

He Didn't Like to Correct a Lady, But He Had To.

The man with bronzed skin and longish hair was hanging upon every word that the charming young woman spoke. She was telling of an actress whom she greatly admired.

"I will never forget how she looked," the young woman said. "She was as beautiful as Juno."

The weather-beaten auditor moved uneasily, and then said: "I beg yer pardon, miss, but I ain't sure that I heard yer remark jest right."

"I said that she was as beautiful as Juno."

"It ain't fer me ter c'rect a lady," he began in apologetic tones.

"I am quite willing to be corrected when there is any reason for doubt," she replied, in a tone with traces of congealment through it. "But I do not perceive how this can be such a case."

"I don't persume to conterdict nobody," he replied. "I haven't no observations to make further than that there ain't no accountin' fur tastes."

"Have you ever seen this actress?"

"No, miss."

"Then I don't see how you are qualified to speak."

"Might I make so bold as to inquire whether you was ever as fur west as British Columbia?"

"Never."

"Then, miss, you can't re'lize that I'm standin' up fur the lady's good looks as much as you are. Ye can't believe half of what these here miners that come east tell ye. If ye ain't even been as fur as British Columbia, it stan's to reason that ye can't have no idea of what a lonesome, ramshackle, frizup lookin' place Juneau is."—Washington Star.

HE CONQUERED IT.

Awful Struggle with a Monster That Finally Yielded.

All was silence for a moment.

Then a loud, shrill shriek rent the startled air. There was the sound of a heavy body falling, a crashing of timbers, a noise as of sinful spirits wailing in despair. A chain creaked dismally and then parted with a dead, metallic snap. Staggering backward, he fell against the washstand. The bowl and pitcher fell in a confused mass of broken crockery upon the floor, while the water flooded the room.

Again he advanced to the attack, and the black-browed monster bent slightly forward and cast him full length upon the floor. Blood gushed from his wounds, but he leaped again to the attack. With loud curses he grappled with the demon. His garments were torn in a hundred places. One eye was black and blue! The other was blue and black! But still he kept up the fearful combat. At length, when nearly exhausted, with his life blood slowly oozing from a thousand wounds and his breath coming in short, painful gasps, he won! The dread monster lay wide open before him.

"There!" he said, as he wiped the drops of perspiration from his brow. "There! It's a cold day when I can't open a folding bed!"—N. Y. World.

SHE DID THE LEADING.

A Slight Mistake in the Wedding Notice.

The square-jawed woman with pinkish hair laid her umbrella on the editor's desk and took her seat on a pile of damp proofs.

"Did a man," she said, "a man with a grayish goatee and a sneakin' manner hand in a marriage notice this mornin' for publication?"

"He did," said the editor; "there it is, Samson Peters to Mrs. Huldah Hoskins. Is that right?"

"The names is all right. It says Mr. Peters led Mrs. Hoskins to the hymeneal altar, don't it?"

"It does."

"I thought so. I'm Mrs. Hoskins. That is, I was last night. I s'pose I'll have to be Mrs. Peters now. I want the style of that marriage notice changed."

"In what way?" asked the editor.

"I'll give you my reasons first. You see, I've got some money and own a farm and two cotton gins. Anybody can see I don't need a husband. That Samson Peters is triflin', lazy, and no account generally. He ain't got no family nor friends and ain't wuth shucks. He ain't no more fit to take care of hisself than a babe. He'll be a dead expense on my hands, fur he'll never pay fur his salt, and he owes mor'n eighty dollars that I'll have to pay. But I don't keer how no 'count a man gits, some woman or other's bound to try and git him. That sassy widow Albright's been on the trail for four months and one of the Simpson gals has been makin' eyes at him every Wednesday night at prayer meetin'. He's a mighty pore, humble kind of creeter to take in, but I knows my duty when it comes before me. You jest scratch out where it says Mr. Peters led Mrs. Hoskins to the hymeneal altar and say that Mrs. Huldah Hoskins annexed Samson Peters last night at nine o'clock p. m."—Detroit Free Press.

DOCTORS DON'T DENY IT.

The frank testimony of a famous physician.

When Dr. Ayer announced his Sarsaparilla to the world, he at once found the physicians his friends. Such a remedy was what they had looked for, and they were prompt to appreciate its merits and prescribe it. Perhaps no medicine—known as a patent medicine—is so generally administered and prescribed by physicians as Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla for blood diseases, and diseases of the skin that indicate a tainted condition of the blood. Experience has proved it to be a specific in such diseases, and sores of long standing, old ulcers, chronic rheumatism, and many other like forms of disease have yielded to the persevering use of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla after other medicines had utterly failed. The testimonials received from physicians to the value of this remedy would fill a volume. Here is one leaf signed by Rich'd H. Lawrence, M. D., Baltimore, Md.

"It affords me pleasure to bear testimony to the success which your preparation of Sarsaparilla has had in the treatment of cutaneous and other diseases arising from a vitiated condition of the blood. Were it necessary, I might give you the names of at least fifty individuals who have been cured of long-standing complaints simply by the administration of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One very remarkable instance was that of a quite old woman who had lived at Catonsville, near this city. She had been afflicted with the rheumatism for three years, and had taken as she had informed me, more than one hundred dollars' worth of medicine to obtain relief, yet without any beneficial result. I advised her to try a bottle of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla and told her that if it failed to do her good, I would refund the money. A short time afterward, I learned that it had cured her, and a neighbor of hers similarly afflicted was also entirely relieved of his complaint by its use. This is the universal result of the administration of your Sarsaparilla. It is without exception, the best blood purifier with which I am acquainted."

There is no other similar medicine can show a similar record. Others have imitated the remedy. They can't imitate the record. Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the friendship of the physician and the favor of the family, because it cures. It fulfills all promises made for it. It has healed thousands of people of the most malignant diseases that can mutilate mankind. Nothing has ever superceded it and nothing ever will until a medicine is made that can show a record of cures greater in number and equal in wonder to those wrought by Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Dr. Ayer's Curebook, a story of cures told by the cured, is sent free on request by the J. C. Ayer Company, Lowell, Mass. Write for it.

—Mrs. Elsie Horstedt, of Maple Plain, aged 65 years died Tuesday on the sidewalk in Minneapolis. With her son she had just arrived on the G. N. train at about 6 p. m., from home, to visit marrried children in Minneapolis. Heart failure was pronounced the cause.

—Since so many live hogs have been sold here this fall there seems to be a scarcity of dead ones. Before, where wagon loads of pork bound for the cities have been seen, now there are none. People prefer to get rid of butchering when they can get good prices for live animals.

—Mrs. Anna Hitz has, through a Chicago lawyer, been taking affidavits in Delano, preparitory to securing an inheritance. Should she again become possessed of a goodly share of this worlds goods it is hoped she will be more careful of it than reports say she was once before.

--The snow and cold weather the latter part of last week caused a good lively trade in foot and hand wear; overshoes and gloves were in demand, and the suffering civilian would gladly exchange his hoarded cents for something to keep him warm. This made prosperity for the merchants for the time being.

—Street Commissioner Philip Martin and his crew of snow sweepers were promptly on hand last Friday and got the crossings cleaned in good shape. It was a surprise to many to see how spry and industrious some of our property owners with big sidewalks were to get the snow off before Phil got around to them.

—Prosperity or competition has got poultry prices down to where ordinary everyday people can have a chicken for dinner occasionally without thinking somebody has made more than their share of profit on chicken, duck or turkey. Ten a pound dressed is tolerably cheap for chicken. But then is the farmer raising them any cheaper than before?

—People who have so much to say about high prices now, compared with those of one year ago, and claim that the Dingley bill made them higher now, and free trade made them low then should look over their files of last year's newspapers. One year ago, on Dec. 4, 1896, wheat was quoted at 73 cts a bushel, and eggs at 20 cents per dozen, right here in Delano.

—Some good Republicans don't believe in a tariff on lumber. It hurries up the cutting down of our forests; dries up our land, and when we build we have to pay about $2 per thousand feet for lumber more than if it was on the free list. Some say Dingley didn't have lumber on his bill. But he is from Maine, a lumber state. Why shouldn't he have tariff on a product of his own state if on any?

--Rev. Farber preached an interesting sermon to rather a small audience Sunday evening. It is certainly not very encouraging to people who are trying to keep up the only English speaking church that has a resident pastor, and not inspiring to the preacher to come before a small audience in a town the size of this, that ought to fill the church to overflowing at every service, to deliver his sermons to so many empty seats. Certainly our village don't wish to go with no native born, English speaking preacher here; or even in the neighborhood. Several secret societies flourish here. Both male and female lodges meet often. They have their place. But they do not, neither are they intended to take the place of church. A good church goer makes only a better man or woman, and this need not be detrimental to the welfare of societies. Society members tell us one of the requisits of admission is a belief in a Supreme Being. Then why not aid by your presence and your contributions in keeping up at least one regular Sunday service and keeping in our midst a preacher of the Gospel in our native tongue. Come out to church when you can and bring your family.

—Tuesday evening's service at the Presbyterian church at 7 p. m. on acount of change in R. R. schedule.

—Lost, a pair of gold bowed spectacles with a red case. Finder please return to and oblige Miss Vinne Chance.

—The death, of Louis Smith, of Independence, which we announced last week, occurred quite suddenly, at the Asylum where he had been a patient. From St. Peter papers, we learn that at the request of Superintendent Tomlinson a coroner's inquest was held; and the jury rendered a verdict that the man choked to death while trying to swallow a piece of meat; and exonerated his attendants from all blame.

Epworth League.

At a meeting of the Epworth League held Thursday evening, at the M. E. parsonage, Mrs. H. V. Wilder presiding in the absence of President Mrs. C. H. Green. T. J. Catlin was chosen Secretary and the following officers were elected for the next term:

President Dr. T. J. Catlin.
1st. Vice President, Mrs. M. B. Strickland.
2nd Vice President, Miss Mary C. Catlin.
3rd Vice President, Prof. C. S. Hawker.
4th Vice President, Mrs. H. V. Wilder.
Secretary, Mrs. C. H. Green.
Treasurer, Miss Hattie Gross.
Organist, Miss Mollie Maxfield.
Vice organist, Mrs. J. L. Farber.

It was moved that the first Sunday evening of each month be Consecration Sunday, and that dues of 5cts per capita be paid to the Treasurer at each Consecration Sunday. Carried.

Moved that the Secretary be instructed to send for the Epworth Herald for six months, for the use of the leaders of the League meetings. Carried.

Moved that we adopt the Constitution of the Epworth League. Carried.

Moved the League hold a business meeting on the first Thursday evening of each month. Carried.

Meeting adjourned.

Delano, Dec. 4th 1897.

MRS. F. E. WILDER, President. T. J. CATLIN, Secretary.

Personal.

Mrs. C. H. Green is numbered with the sick.

Miss Walker, of Rockford, spent the week with her aunt Mrs. H. C. Parslow.

Mrs. M. J. Stone and son went to Hastings last Friday in response to a summons to the sick-bed of her father.

Rev. J. L. Farber visited Cramer Swartout, of Montrose, Wednesday. We are sorry to hear that Mr. S. is quite sick.

Miss Grace Mowatt has been sick this week. Mr. Gunsior, a cousin of Mrs. Mowatt's has been having a run of pneumonia at their home.

Rev. McCornack, of Howard Lake, preached an interesting sermon at the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. He left an appointment for next Tuesday evening. All invited.

Mrs. Cora Wolfenden and son Fred Peters, of Sheldon, Iowa, are visiting Delano friends till after the holidays. We hear that Leo, in several studies is Fred's school markings. Good for Fred.

J. H. McGary, one of Independence's solid farmers, was a GAZETTE caller Tuesday. He has been to Minneapolis lately and has considerable to say about that million dollar pile of rocks and marble called the Court House.

County Cullings.

Our attention was called one day this week to "An Explanation" by William Redmond, in the Herald of Nov. 4, concerning the poisoning by aconite of H. A. Gilmer. He quite evidently wishes to exonerate himself from any blame in the matter. People who know most about aconite and its effects on the human system are most careful in administering it. It is a deadly poison and even when given in small doses the patient must be watched for bad effects from it. We are informed that this is Mr. Redmond's third case of narrowly escaping poisoning to death, patients to whom he administered aconite. Such practice should be stopped. People take aconite by half drop or drop doses, and repeat, for a short time, and not from 15 to 20 drops in an hour or two, or at two doses.

Dr. Catlin has got it again, and this time he broke out in two places in the Gazette. When you place illustrations in your paper, Doctor, don't turn them with their "faces towards the wall". —Eagle.

What ails the Old Bird now? Does she claim that Uncle Sam's face want be turned to the wall worse than it was in our cartoon, when he goes out of the banking business, and the bank of Jim Hill, Bill Merriam, and others gets started? Or does she refer to our illustration of the remains of Delano's contingent of Hamline University Medical Department's Thanksgiving dinner? If the latter, it could hardly be supposed that much that would face a frowning world, and especially a "gizzardless old gormand" would remain. So that when our cut came off of the base and left nothing to print, it came about as near representing facts as some of "Mother Grundy's sayings".

DIED.

BALL.—Rhoda, wife of S. S. Ball, on Friday, Dec. 3, in her 42nd year.

Funeral from the Presbyterian church on Saturday, at 2 P. M. Rev. Ray, of Litchfield, to conduct the services.

Among Our Exchanges.

Tribune: Vice President Hobart looks forward to a long session of Congress and a great deal of work. It is to be feared, however, that the work will be of the windmill variety.

The Minneapolis Times reports that Johon Steele, celebrated Thanksgiving day by drinking too much, and fell down stairs and hurt himself so he died. Mrs. Steele and two children were away to Annandale, on a visit to her father named Johnson.

Thrice-a-week World: The Dingley deficit up to the close of the third week in November was a trifle under $45,000,000. The increase in pensions will absorb nearly all the receipts from the Union Pacific sale, and then the Dingley deficit will resume its steady and majestic course.

St. Peter Herald: It is easier to convict a man for asking a bribe but didn't get it, than to convict the man who asks a bribe and gets it. In the latter case the bribe giver has reasons of his own for not testifying, and in the case of the former there is a great show of virtue and no chance of self crimination. Where George Daman seems to have made a mistake was in not getting what he went after.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1 30 for the two papers.

—Dr. Niven in Delano Dec. 10 and 11; Wayerly, Dec. 12 and 13; and at Howard Lake, Dec. 14 and 15.

Sealed Bids, Wood.

Sealed Bids for wood, for the Village of Delano, to be delivered at the power House, will be received as follows:

For 200 cords of 4 foot Dry Basswood, or wood equally as good, to be delivered at once.

For 250 cords 4 foot Green Basswood, or wood equally as good, to be delivered before the snow goes off in the spring.

Bids will be received for any amount from 5 cords to the full number of cords wanted.

Leave bids with the Village Recorder, on or before Monday, the 20th day of December, at which time they will be opened.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

L. M. MAXFIELD, Village Recorder.

DELANO, Dec. 3, 1897. 3t.

"What to Eat" for December.

"How to Live a Hundred Years" forms the title of a short but interesting article in the December number of What To Eat.

What Shakespeare has to say about kissing for dysepsia is told by Ira Gale-Tompkins in a capital way, while James Courtney Challis supplements the article by a very funny poem entitled "The Bridger Cure," all fittingly illustrated.

The cover is beautiful, and the centerpage is a patriotic gem that all old soldiers and their friends should see and preserve.

WHAT TO EAT offers $10 to the person filling out the following blank lines so as to make the best four lines of poetry, and $1 each to the ten next best. The only conditions are that you fill out the lines and send ten cents for sample copy of magazine.

I saw a man come down the street,
And he was full of——
The day was bright, the air was sweet,
And——

Other words may be used in the second and fourth lines if preferred.

10 cents a copy.

WON'T SLIP A COG.

In sailing o'er the sea of life, my brother, do not think
If you should leave the Progress craft 't'd go to wreck and sink.
Don't feel that you possess the earth with all that in it lies,
And hold a chatel mortgage on the planets in the skies.
You're but a tiny single drop of water in the sea
Of all the great and active tide of live humanity.
And you should always bear in mind, though lofty be your height,
This world will never slip a cog when you drop out of sight.
Though you be rich in gold and lands, and bear an honored name,
Though as a star you glitter in the firmament of fame,
Remember that the humblest man you scornfully pass by
Will stand your equal at the bar of justice up on high.
Though you may think yourself above the honest working man,
May look on him as dross while you're a nugget in the pan,
You scarcely will be missed when from the earth you take your flight—
The world will never slip a cog when you drop out of sight.
The proudest monarch on the earth must some day take his stand
As humble as the lowest slave the breezes ever fanned.
And when by hand of God the seals of that great book are riven
The man of toil may be a prince, the king shut out of heaven.
Then as you meet your fellow men don't for a moment think,
That in the endless chain of life you're an essential link,
And always keep this solid truth within your mem'ry bright:
The world will never slip a cog when you drop out of sight.

—Denver Post.

THE Governor of Georgia seems to have won the foot ball game in that state. He V-toed the bill to abolish the game.

WITH the greenbacks retired; the silver sold for Christmas presents, and the gold made into a statue of McKinley what are the people to do for money?

WE are much pleased with our "Lectures on International Law" by Cushman K. Davis, before the faculty and students of the University of Minnesota. It is a scholarly production.

DEMOCRATS believe in free trade and free silver. Republicans want neither. National Democrats are for free trade, gold standard, and all the offices they can get the Republicans to appoint them to.

IN reading C. K. Davis' lectures to the "U" students, one is not left so much in the dark as to where he is at on the various subjects mentioned as he is in reading President McKinley's message. It is much plainer.

J. ADAM BEDE might have been a candidate for Congress from the Sixth District with fair prospects of being elected. But since he has taken to the fence he would hardly be more than a candidate if nominated now.

IF you have the Klondike fever so bad that you are bound to take your departure from your loved home, prepare yourself thoroughly by reading H. P. Hall's write up in the "Klondyke Bulletin" issued by the General Passenger Department of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & St. S. Marie Ry.

KENNEDY'S Own comes out late this month, but contains a lot of good reading. The Editor was absent in attendance on his sick mother. Mrs. Mary A. Kennedy, who died Nov. 2' in the city of Canton, S. D. He promises to make up lost time on his magazine and get it out on the 1st of each month. He has our sympathies in the loss of his mother.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY recommends that Congress pass a law that all greenbacks having once been redeemed by the government remain in the treasury and be paid out only in exchange for gold. He might just as well have recommended that they be "retired" For those going to pay gold for greenbacks, or for any other money? What object would these be in doing so? Our money ought all to be money, equally good to be paid in or out by individuals or the government.

Mr. Mendenhall, of Duluth, has returned from the east and expects an immediate boom in Duluth real estate which he says is the cheapest it has been for years.

Minneapolis is to close her schools in March instead of May or June, because of a lack of money with which to run them.

President McKinley is contemplating the issuing of more bonds by the United States government, unless some other way can be figured out to raise the money for current expenses.

Underpaid District Judges.

Under the above heading Kennedy's Own laments the resignation from the District Judges bench of Judge's Russell and Jamison. It goes on to argue that $4,500 is a fair salary but when it has to be handed out on subscriptions, loans, and every other kind of contribution to those who have assisted in electing them to office, the salary is too small, and advises that the salary should be about $15,000 and the office for life on good behaviour.

We differ from Mr. Kennedy. A man who has no more capacity for saying no, than to rob his family of a living when his salary is $4,500 ought to resign. Or a law should be made that if people are about begging they should not beg all the judge's salary. Better send them to the poor committee.

Silver Has Gone Up.

Silver has gone up to 60 cents an ounce. This means that the Christmas boys are buying more teaspoons than diamond rings this year.—St. Paul Globe.

How strange! After having so conclusively established the "fact" that wheat and silver do not rise and fall together; by getting their prices as widely different as possible during this fall's campaign, to have them go to work, even before Mark Hanna is safely seated in his coveted seat, to get themselves together again. by wheat falling and silver rising! This of course will be construed by the goldites to be simply further evidence that they don't rise and fall at once. But when they have again struck their level what will be the argument? Supply and demand, according to the Globe, governs spoons.

Temperance Ruling.

From the Pioneer Press we clip: Slayton Gazette: H. Clay Evans, United States pension commissioner, has issued an order that henceforth clerks or employes of that department of the government must abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor, not only during office hours, but all the time. If this thing keeps on the fellow who indulges too freely in the flowing bowl will be crowded off the earth. Well, let him go. It is about time the world treated him as a nuisance."

If the Pension Commissioner should take a notion to rule, that no pensioner who spends his money for intoxicating liquors be allowed to draw any further pension, what a falling off in villages revenues from saloon licenses there would be in some places. How can Mr. H. Clay Evans or any other official be responsible for the correct running of his department of the Government while he has a lot of drunken clerks to deal with? This beats civil service all out.

President's Message.

On Monday, President McKinley sent his message to Congress. It is a lengthy, well written, and patriotic paper in some respects. But there are several things about it that will be criticised severely. He claims the extra session settled the tariff question. But virtually admits that it does not furnish sufficient revenue, and intimates that unless something is done, another issue of bonds will be forthcoming.

Unlike some of his party friends, he thinks the financial question should be discussed and something done to improve our plans.

He says: "The evil of the present system is found in the great cost to the government of maintaining the parity of our different forms of money, that is keeping all of them at par with gold." Exactly; why not let silver have its old place? He says: "Nobody is obliged to redeem in gold but the government." This may be good news to some who have been signing notes payable in gold.

Under the head of "International bimetallism" we would much rather have had a report from the Commission sent out by our own government than to have had the "resume" of the British government read to Congress, when everybody believes that government against bimetallism.

The President recommends giving Spain a chance. Just how long he wants them to fight the Cubans we don't know. It seems they have had a powerful long chance now.

He would like to have Hawaii annexed.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec 3, 1897.

Is it the business of Congress to legislate for the interests of the whole people, or only to do what Mr. McKinley thinks will be beneficial to him and and to the republican party? Such a question would seem to admit of but one answer. Yet, Mr. McKinley is seeking the aid of Czar Reed and Mr. Cannon, chairman of the House committee on Appropriations, to prevent the House legislating for the whole people. Because the Dingley tariff law has failed to provide the money needed to properly carry on the government, and because he does not dare to tell Congress so and ask for additional tariff legislation to furnish more revenue, Mr. McKinley wants to deprive the people who pay the heavy taxes called for by the Dingley tariff of privileges to which they are clearly entitled. If Reed enters the deal—Cannon has already done so—no public building bill, no matter how urgent the need, will be allowed to go through the House; no bill providing for the payment of any private claim against the government, no matter how just it is nor how much those to whom the money is due may be suffering, will be allowed to pass, and no river and harbor appropriation will be passed. Czar Reed may bite off more than he can chew, if he attempts to carry out those ideas. Neither he nor Mr. McKinley will be as strong at this sesion as they were at the extra session: their favors have mostly been distributed. It is well known that failure to get through a public building bill for his district has cost many Representatives their seats, and next year the Representatives will all be passed on by their constituents. There has been much talk which came to nothing about a revolt against Reed by the House, but in this case there is likely to be a sure enough revolt, if he isn't careful, and a successful one, too.

A scrapping match between two prominent W. Va. republicans, Mr. F. A. Scott, who is a member of the Republican National Committe, and who expects to become Commissioner of International Revenue about the first of January, and Judge Nathan Goff, who was once in the Cabinet and who has just declined a Cabinet and who has just declined a Cabinet port-folio, is indicated by the announced aspirations of both of them—a desire to succeed Senator Faulkner, whose term will expire March 3, 1899. W. Va. democrats laugh at the expectations of Messrs. Goff and Scott, and say that they have no doubt of a democratic majority in the next legislature. Meanwhile Goff and Scott are prepairing to fight each other. They were both in Washington this week and both saw Mr. McKinley. Having already more factional party fights than he know what to do with, Mr. McKinley tried to nip this one in the bud by asking Goff to become Attorney General when Mr. McKenna is nominated for the Supreme Court, but that gentleman declined and said that nothing but a seat in the Senate would tempt him to give up his present lifetime judicial position, but he may change his mind. Senator Elkins is at present posing as a friend of both Scott and Goff, but it is believed that it will be found when there is a show of hands that he is on the side of Scott.

Senator Mallory, of Florida, has pronounced views on Cuba which he doesn't hesitate in announcing. He said: "Spain's apparent willingness to grant autonomy is but a pretext of delay against positive action by our government. It ought not to deceive any one familiar with the record of Spain's oft-broken pledge to the people of that oppressed island. I do not know what action Congress will take, and I am not in the confidence of the administration. As far back as 1868 a U. S. Senator from my state advocated the independence of Cuba, and the arguments then made are absolutely applicable today. He gave a detailed account of the perfidity of the Spanish government, which would serve without modification at the present time. The autonomy farce has been tried before." Senator Mallory thinks there can be only one right settlement of the Cuban question, and that is the independence of the island, and he regards it as the duty of this country to aid in bringing it about, forcibly if necessary.

It looks now as though no attempt will be made to pass a bill providing for the retirement of the greenbacks, even in the House. The reason is republican opposition, which is outspoken, especially among Representatives from the west and middle west. The only way a bill providing for the retirement of the greenbacks could be put through the House would be to get it endorsed by a caucus of the republicans, and then it would not be certain as there would probably be enough republicans who would refuse to attend or be bound by the caucus, in addition to the solid vote of the democrats and populists, to defeat the bill.

After all Mr. President, the essential thing about any Tariff is to so frame it that it will aid in opening up opportunities for all our people to use their labor and secure good wages; for when this is done our people will have the means to purchase so much more of imported articles not made here that ample revenue will be sure to come.

—Mr Dingley.

Raw Calfskins Are Free

New York, Dec. 3.—The United States board of general appraisers today rendered a decision to the effect that under the Dingley tariff act, imported calfskins, raw, are not to be classified as uncured hides or cattle, which are subject to a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem, but are wholly exempt from duty and come under the head of the raw skins included in the free list.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Irrigation, Forces of Nature Redecing Rocks to Soil. Fruit Raising. Basking in the Sunshine.

Alluding again to the desert like region and grazing lands of the Rocky and Sierra Nevada mountains it may be stated that that condition of the country is owing to the limited fall of moisture and not to any lack of fertility of the soil, which fact is soon demonstrated by supplying the soil with an abundance of moisture and developing a thrifty growth of domestic vegetation. Irrigation soon makes the desert bloom. The great mountain masses contain a vast amount of water but whether sufficient to supply all of the desert plains through irrigation with the amount of water necessary for agricultural purposes, remains a problem to be solved.

In Arizona and in parts of California, the geological process of reducing parts of mountains and rocks into soil seems to be apparent and still in operation at the present time. In many of the canyons and mountain passes, several kidds of rocks ordinarily considered indestructible, as granite, lime stone, and other kinds, are penetrated with great cracks and fissures and are tumbling to pieces of their own weight, yielding to the forces of nature generally. In the wide passes and on the even like surfaces of the mountainous region alluded to in my last letter, large masses of rock may be seen going through this process of disintigration; from large fragments to the sizes of building stone, macadamizing, mossic and ballasting material and finally becoming pulverized into soil. This disintigrated rock material is found to be of much service in railroad and wagon road construction making permanent road beds, the finer portion serving as ballasting and for surfacing. In fact the soil, or rather the sub soil, in places makes a very good surfacing for wagon roads and streets in rural villages and outlying portions of cities. This surface becomes quite hard and smooth.

Perhaps your readers may recollect of my writing to the GAZETTE four years ago from this place, Monrovia, having then taken some notice of the fruit growing operations of this locality. I am enabled to note a little of the progress made in the raising of oranges and lemons. Near this place is a small village or hamlet known as Duarte but it is the head quarters of a considerable fruit raising district and the packing and shipping of the fruit is conducted at that place, being on the lines of two railways. The superior quality of the fruit has made the Duarte brand popular in the markets. Fruits are packed in both places Duarte and Monrovia. Four years ago I noticed oranges as being the only fruit packed at these places but now the raising and packing of lemons has become a considerable industry here as well as oranges. On picking the lemons from the trees they still retain the green color although sufficiently ripened for packing and shipping and consequently the fruit has to pass through a bleaching process before packing.

Also these four years have afforded me an opportunity for judging as to the time required for starting and developing an orange orchard. About march 1894 I noticed a certain party setting out an orchard of about 200 young trees from the nursery. Now, on investigation, I find that all those trees lived but are not of a uniform size. Some are six feet high with healthy branches laden with fruit, the apparent yield being near a half bushel to a tree. Other trees are about four feet in hight with some fruit, and several are quite small, having grown but little in the four years, some having a few oranges and others none at all. I was informed however that this orchard during part of the four years, was much neglected and for a time it seemed as if the trees would not survive the neglect, but good attention latterly has brought the trees to a thrifty condition, all of which show that an orange tree is of a hardy nature. In this case however the soil was not the most favorable, not being so fertile as some other lands in the vicinity.

We are having the usual California weather, warm, calm and clear, with all conditions favorable to basking in the sunshine, all of which your humble servant is enjoying to the best of his ability.

Difference of Opinions on Financial Questions.

MR. USEFUL:—I know the people want more money. The only way to get it is to make it of gold and silver.

MR. USELESS:—It is useless for Congress to pass a bill to remedy the finances; the Senate would probably kill it. It's useless for the United States to make gold and silver money; England wouldn't have it.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, 7 authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

FINGER marks can be removed from paint with powdered chalk sprinkled upon flannel cloth. Many people think it inadvisable to use soap on white or light paint, but use it on hard wood, being careful to wipe off the soap with a flannel rinsed out in the water and wiping dry with another cloth.

GREAT BRITAIN and Ireland have turned out 54,622,706 gallons of whisky in 1897, over 5,000,000 gallons more than in the previous year. Of this 32,126,238 gallons were consumed in the United Kingdom and 4,790,181 gallons exported. There are 193 distilleries at work in Scotland, 29 in Ireland, nine in England and one in Wales.

MRS. FANNIE M. MCKOON owns and manages one of the largest ranches in California. It covers 10,000 acres, about 15 miles from San Diego. Since her husband's death three years ago, Mrs. McKoon, although entirely without experience at that time, has operated it so well that it is now one of the most successful ranches in the country.

WALTER DARLINGTON, mayor of Concordia, Kan., is the largest cattle feeder in north central Kansas this fall and winter. He has 1,700 head in the vicinity of Big Bend, Phillips county, 500 head near Harlan, Smith county, and 400 head in the vicinity of Concordia, Cloudy county. He expects to feed over 100,000 bushels of corn this winter.

JUST as naval topedoes will fight our battles on the high seas, torpedoes will now be weapons of defense on land as well. Mr. G. W. Glinby, of Brooklyn, has produced an electric torpedo for use in battles on land. The torpedoes are long, cigar-shaped projectiles, mounted on rolling trucks. The machinery to propel them is operated by electricity, furnished by means of a wire connecting with the central station.

SNOW statues are the latest form of artistic freak and their creator is M. Pierre Roche, a French sculptor of repute. The statue is made of copper, and in the base is a reservoir of liquefied carbonic acid used to generate the cold, and the moisture which is abstracted from the atmosphere forms on the surface of the metal as a coating of snow in the course of a few moments, and is prevented from thawing by the freezing mixture.

AN old-time swindle seems to have been revived in a letter from a pretended officer in the Spanish army, now in a suppositious prison in Spain, who claims to have buried a large sum of money near Brazil, Ind. He will give one-third of the entire amount to any person who will remit to him by mail the trivial sum necessary to pay his beloved daughter's passage from Spain to the United states and the necessary expenses of unearthing the treasure. Who speaks first.

ON the approach of a thunder storm French peasants often make up a very smoky fire in the belief that safety from lightning is thus assured. By some this is deemed a superstition, but Schuster shows that the custom is based on reason, inasmuch as the smoke acts as a good conductor for carrying away the electricity slowly and safely. He points out that in 1,000 cases of damage by lightning 6.3 churches and 8.5 mills have been struck, whilst the number of factory chimneys has only been 0.3.

NEW YORK papers mention a rare case of personal integrity and business honor which has come to light in that city. In 1861 Mr. Amos F. Eno was a member of a firm which failed shortly after the war began. The stock was sold, the debts paid pro rata and releases were signed by the creditors. Now, after 35 years, Mr. Eno is paying off the balance of all claims, with four per cent. interest since 1861, amounting in the aggregate to about $500,000. Such cases as this tend to strengthen commercial integrity everywhere.

The French have a decidedly practical way of looking at new methods of locomotion. No sooner was the bicycle established than a large revenue-producing tax was imposed on it, and now it has been decided by the French authorities to impose a tax on motor cars, the tax apparently varying in different parts, according to the density of the population. In the large centers of population the tax will be a somewhat serious item, and in Paris it amounts to $12 on vehicles for two passengers, and $20 on larger vehicles.

THE signal corps of the United States army now operates about 802 miles of military telegraphs. The most notable advance of the year in its system has been the adoption of a combination telegraph and telephone apparatus which only weighs 16 pounds, and consequently can easily be carried by one soldier. With this apparatus one soldier can telegraph a message to another, while a telephonic conversation with another station can be simultaneously carried on, the distant operators only receiving the messages intended for each.

OUR national post office shows a deficit of between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000 this year, while the English government has a surplus of about $20,000,000 annually. The cause of deficit does not rest with letter postage. That has always paid its way and substantially supported the whole service. The discrepancy between receipts and expenditures arises from another source. The loss to the government by second-class mail matter is scarcely less than $40,000,000 a year, the established rate for this class being only one-fifteenth of the actual cost of transmission and handling.

THE power of the mayor of Greater New York is greater than that of some kings. The longer it is looked at the stronger it seems, the more it dazzles the mental vision and appeals to the imagination like an Arabian Night's entertainment. Within the mayor's direct appointment are 245 heads of departments, and these control a veritable army of employes, whose salaries amount to $33,000,000 per annum. Alexander, king of Servia, is dwarfed by this comparison. The salary list annually—in brief, the patronage at the mayor's disposal—is more than thrice the entire revenues of Servia.

ECKELS' REPORT MADE.

Interesting Information Concerning National Banks.

Comptroller of the Currency Tells of the Growth of the System, and Argues at Length in Favor of Bank Note Circulation.

Washington, Dec. 6.—The annual report of James H. Eckels, comptroller of the currency, for the year ended October 31, 1897, opens with a brief review of the history of the legislation which constitutes the present national bank act and invites the attention of congress to amendments to the law recommended in former reports without specifically repeating them.

On the subject of bank note circulation the comptroller says: "It is noticeable that in all the changes which have been wrought in the national currency act from its inception to the present time the feature subject to criticism, but which was intended should constitute the principal benefit to be conferred, has remained comparatively unchanged, namely, the note-issuing function. Whatever justification there was in the first instance for restricting the issuing of notes against the bonds of the government, deposited with the treasurer of the United States to 90 per cent. of the par value thereof, long since ceased. In the report of every comptroller of the currency during the past 20 years the wisdom of changing the existing law so that the banks, and through them the communities in which located, might have the additional benefit of an added loanable capital has been urged. Despite all this the law still remains without amendment. Not only should the bank act be amended in this particular, but congress should seriously consider such a change in the method of bank note issues as will enable the banks of the country to more adequately meet the demands of trade and commerce in all sections of the country. The business of banking, like every other form of investment, must be made attractive to capital. If it is placed upon a footing different from other undertakings, embarrassed through unnecessary restrictions and deprived of proper sources of profit, the result cannot be otherwise than that investable capital will seek other means of employment, and to such an extent deprive the people of the benefits of the agency most requisite to commercial activity.

"It is considered by every great commercial government except the United States to be the sole province of banks to issue the paper which circulates as currency. The belief in a bank note currency as being better and safer than a government paper currency prevailed unquestioned in this country until, under the apparent exigencies of the war, the government undertook to issue paper currency. Even under such circumstances the promise was always given, however, that it should be retired at the earliest practicable moment and the admission freely made that it was neither a wise measure nor a safe form of currency. Between the competition of the government note issues on the one hand and the unnecessary restrictions imposed by law upon the other, together with the increasing price of bonds required to be deposited as security, the note-issuing function of the banks has been permitted to become merely an incident to the conduct of the national banking associations of the country.

"It has been seriously suggested more than once that the bank note issues be done away with and all paper be issued by the government instead. The danger of such a course is not to be overestimated. The experience of every government has been that governmental currency paper is a source of weakness and danger. In the United States, where there has been the nearest approach to success, with the volume of the federal paper comparatively limited in amount, the credit of the government has been more than once put in jeopardy through it and the business interests of the country subjected to unnecessary loss and confusion.

"The argument that the government, better than the banks, can provide for the redemption of paper note issues will not stand the test of a careful analysis. The government has no means for caring for its demand liabilities except through borrowing and through the levying of taxes. Upon the other hand, the banks have assets which can be promptly converted into cash to meet their outstanding notes when presented. Their ability to command gold has always been beyond that of the government, for in each financial exigency which has confronted the government the banks have furnished to it the amounts necessary to maintain its solvency. It is impossible to believe that with a system of bank note issues based in part upon securities and in part upon bank assets the country cannot be provided with a sound, safe and elastic bank note issue, always commensurate with and responsive to the demands of trade.

The total number of national banks organized since the system was put into operation in 1863 is shown to have been 5,095. On October 31 last there were in active operation 3,617, having an authorized capital of $630,230,295. The total outstanding circulation of the banks then in operation was $229,150,880, of which $202,594,555 was secured by bonds of the United States and the balance by lawful money deposited with the treasurer of the United States. The total circulation outstanding of all national banks on October 31 last was $230,131,005, of which amount $1,558,809 was secured by bonds held for account of insolvent and liquidating banks and $26,205,325 by lawful money deposited for their account and by active banks reducing circulation. The net decrease in the amount of circulation secured by bonds during the year was $12,584,334 and the gross decrease in the total circulation was $4,851,292. During the year 44 banks were organized with an aggregate capital stock of $6,420,000. During the year 71 banks went into voluntary liquidation. There was paid to creditors of insolvent banks during the year $13,169,781 in dividends.

"The magnitude of this unequaled record," the report says, "will be more forcibly illustrated if considered in the light of what has been accomplished heretofore in the way of dividend payments to the creditors of insolvent institutions. In 1893 there was paid in dividends $3,433,646; in 1894, $5,124,577; in 1895, $3,380,552; in 1896, $2,451,958, and in 1897, $13,169,781, making a total of dividends paid within the five years from 1893 to 1897 of $27,560,515, or 36¾ per cent. of all the dividends that have ever been paid to creditors of insolvent national banks. From 1863 to 1897 there has been paid in dividends $75,935,925, and in the year embraced in this report $13,169,781, or 17 3 per cent. of all the dividends that have been paid during the period of 34 years of the existence of the system. Since October 31, the end of the report year, 17 additional dividends have been ordered, amounting in the aggregate to about $625,000."

The report contains the latest compiled statistics relative to the world's monetary systems and the stock of gold, silver and paper currency. A very interesting feature of this statement is the per capita amount of each kind of money in the countries named. The per capita averages in the principal countries of the world are as follows: United States, $23.70; United Kingdom, $20.65; France, $34.68; Germany, $18.95; Austria-Hungary, $9.33, and Russia, $8.95.

THE AUSTRIAN TROUBLES.

Decisive Measures Taken to Preserve the Peace in Prague.

Prague, Dec. 3.—As an indication of the gravity of the situation troops to the number of 10,000, equipped with ammunition and other paraphernalia as for a campaign, have been engaged in suppressing the riots here.

The Ambulance association has issued a report showing that within the last 24 hours four persons have been killed, 150 dangerously wounded and 500 more or less seriously injured. Twenty shops have been burned out.

It is not exactly martial law that has been proclaimed, but rather the institution of summary civil procedure, called standrecht, whereby a special tribunal of seven judges is empowered to impose capital and other severe sentences for offenses ordinarily punished mildly. There is no appeal against a death sentence by the tribunal, which must be put into execution within two hours by the military if the hangman is not available.

It is evident that the standrecht was not proclaimed here a moment too soon. Well-dressed men, it is said, rode on bicycles through the city and the suburbs making lists of the German places marked for attack, and the work of the rioters being done in accordance with these lists, and in many places simultaneously, prevention was almost impossible. Goldsmiths' and jewelers' showcases were emptied in a few minutes. Women carried baskets to take home the contents of grocery and provision stores, while furniture and other articles too heavy to carry were wantonly destroyed. If the troops had not used their swords and bayonets freely Prague might have been burned from end to end.

The Politik, declaring that the present agitation was started by persons to whom the fatherland and nationality are matters of indifference, appeals to all parties to restrain a movement "which might be fatal not only to the fatherland and to its chief city, but to the political aspirations of the Bohemian nation."

Prague, Dec. 4.—Although the streets of Prague are still patrolled by the military business is being gradually resumed. A military court has been established at the courthouse, and the local hangman, his assistants and a priest will remain there until further orders, in readiness to carry out death sentences, should such steps be necessary.

CRISPI ON THE RACK.

Deposed Italian Premier to Be Tried for Bank Scandals.

Rome, Dec. 3. — The chamber of deputies has appointed a commission of five to inquire into the charges against Signor Francesco Crispi, former premier, in connection with the Bank of Naples scandals and the alleged illegal traffic in decorations.

[Sig. Crispi, the most brilliant Italian statesman since the days of Cavour, is called upon to face, in his extreme old age, not accusations of political crimes, but ordinary felonies. He has already been subjected to the humiliation of magisterial examination in connection with charges of complicity in the gigantic frauds that wrecked the Bank of Naples, the Bank of Roma, the Bank of Sicily and other kindred institutions. The Crispi cabinet was driven from office as the result of these scandals. In each case the insolvency of the bank appeared to have been brought about through the blackmailing extortions to which it was subjected by leading politicians and government officials of the day. Most of this dishonesty took place during the administration of Crispi. Not even his most relentless enemy has ever accused him of plundering the banks to add to his private resources. On the contrary his countrymen for the most part accepted his assertion that the money extorted from these institutions was used by him for the secret service of the government and in electoral expenditures. Unfortunately for him, the judicial authorities who inquired into the circumstances that led to the failure of the banks discovered that among the most voracious of the plunderers was Signora Crispi, the veteran statesman's wife. It was stated at the time that from one bank alone something like 10,000,000 francs (about $2,000,000) found its way into her private banking account; and it was urged, and is still urged, that Sig. Crispi, not being a rich man, must have known of his wife's predatory demands, as in no other way could he have accounted for the large sums of money she expended upon her establishment while he was in power.]

Champion Billiard Player.

New York, Dec. 6.—The final game of the Madison Square billiard tournament was the most exciting and brilliant of the series. It was won by Slosson, which also makes him the winner of the tournament. Ives was defeated by only two points, Slosson running the game out from 440 in one of the finest exhibitions of billiard playing and coolness ever seen in a like contest. The final score was: Slosson, 500; Ives, 498. Ives had been ahead, and was making a run when he reached his 498th point. The 499th shot was easy, but, whether the champion was nervous or too confident matters not, he missed it. Slosson was in the 440th hole. He seemed not the least bit disconcerted. He picked up his cue without the least sign of excitement and began to click off the shots. Before he stopped he had run out the game and won the battle with Ives and the tournament. The highest run made during the night was 93, also made by Slosson. Had Ives won the game, he, Slosson and Schaefer would have been in a tie for first money. As it is, Slosson wins first place, Schaefer second, Ives third and Daly fourth.

Blanco's Latest Plan.

Madrid, Dec. 4. — The newspapers publish the following, which is much commented upon: Capt. Gen. Blanco has cabled the government that knowing that Gen. Correa, minister of war, is opposed to sending further reenforcements, he has studied the means of creating a volunteer corps of whites and negroes who would reply to the guerrilla tactics of the rebels by similar warfare, but he would need for this undertaking 4,000,000 pesetas monthly. He is convinced that by making such a pecuniary effort Cuba, except in the eastern part, would be pacified by June next, when the local government could finish the war.

To Succeed McKenna.

Washington, Dec. 4.—From sources the authority of which should not be doubted it is learned that the position of attorney-general, to succeed Mr. McKenna, who will be nominated to the United States supreme bench to succeed Justice Field, has been offered to Gov. Griggs, of New Jersey, and that he has consented to accept. It is understood that his appointment was urged by Vice President Hobart.

INTERNAL REVENUE REPORT.

The Commissioner's Annual Statement to Secretary Gage.

Washington, Dec. 4. — In his annual report to the secretary of the treasury, Mr. Forman, the commissioner of internal revenue, estimates that the receipts from all sources for the current fiscal year will aggregate at least $155,000,000, an increase over 1897 of about $8,300,000. The cost of the collection of the revenue during the last fiscal year was $3,848,469.

During the year 2,241 illicit stills were destroyed and 32 were removed; 829 persons were arrested, one killed and three were wounded. Of the stills seized and destroyed 228 were located in Alabama, 841 in Georgia, 463 in North Carolina, 190 in South Carolina, and 245 in the Sixth Virginia district. During the last ten years ten officers were killed and 16 were wounded by moonshiners. The commissioner recommends that the expense of storing spirits in general bonded warehouses be borne by the owners of the spirits, such charge to be levied by means of a stamp tax. This, he says, would greatly lessen the objection to the use of the warehouse by any class of spirits. The commissioner also recommends that existing laws be modified so as to authorize the commissioner to prescribe by regulations what statutory packages of tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes may contain, or authorize him to prohibit the packing in such packages of articles which appreciably increase the size and weight of the package under penalty of seizure and forfeiture.

RAPID TRANSIT.

Remarkable Time Made by Union Pacific Trains.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 6.—Celebrating its new birth, the Union Pacific has taken two more falls out of Father Time, and has set the pace for fast running that will likely stand in the west for some time. Saturday the fast mail was late in Wyoming. It covered 42 miles from Sidney to Julesburg in 38 minutes; 81 miles from Julesburg to North Platte in 71 minutes; 60 miles from North Platte to Lexington in 60 minutes; 35 miles from Lexington to Kearney in 33 minutes, and a final dash of 42 miles from Kearney to Grand Island in 36 minutes, or 70 miles an hour. The 261 miles from Sidney to Grand Island were made in 238 minutes, an average of 65.6 miles an hour. From Grand Island to Omaha the run was ordinary, the lost time having been made up. Sunday the Union Pacific brought a theatrical company on a special train from Julesburg to Council Bluffs, 294 miles, in 286 minutes. From this must be deducted five minutes for changing engines at Grand Island, four minutes' delay by a Missouri Pacific freight train on the crossing at Portal and the necessary slowing up through Omaha, a distance of five miles, and a slow run over the Missouri river bridge. The actual running time of the train was 275 minutes, an average of 63.6 miles an hour.

CHINA WILL NOT YIELD.

Emperor Will Forfeit His Crown Before Submitting to Germany.

London, Dec. 3. — A special from Shanghai announces that the emperor of China has declared that he would rathr forfeit his crown than agree to the conditions demanded by Germany as redress for the murder of two German missionaries, Nies and Hennle, and the destruction of German mission property in the province of Shantung.

Admiral Diedrich, the German commander at Kiao Chou bay, the dispatch further states, has proclaimed martial law in the district around Kiao Chou. China, the dispatch concludes, desires that her dispute with Germany be submitted to arbitrators appointed by Holland and Belgium.

Berlin, Dec. 3.—The National Zeitung referring to the dispatch of German reenforcements says the German first-class cruiser Deutschland is going to Kiao Chou bay and that she has the customary 100 marines on board among her crew, which numbers 608 men all told. But, the paper adds, the German naval authorities are considering the dispatch of more marines to China for use ashore.

Germany Enforces Her Demand.

Port au Prince, Hayti, Dec. 7.—The trouble between Germany and Hayti, as a result of the arrest and imprisonment of Herr Lueders, an alleged German subject, reached a crisis Monday. Two German cruisers entered this port during the morning, and an ultimatum from the German government was deliverd to the Haytian government, giving the latter eight hours in which to grant the demands of Germany for an indemnity to Herr Lueders. The members of the diplomatic corps here believe the government of the republic has decided to accept the conditions of Germany. The exact nature of Germany's demand on Hayti is as yet somewhat in doubt, but it is understood that the German government asks:

1. An indemnity of $20,000 (American) for Herr Lueders.

2. To promise that Herr Lueders may return to Hayti and there sojourn without danger of any kind.

3. A letter to the German government in which Hayti will express apology for the proceedings toward the German government in the whole transaction.

4. That the president of Hayti shall graciously receive the German, charge d'affaires at Port au Prince.

Indian Frauds.

St. Louis, Dec. 3. — As the result of a meeting held in this city Thursday by members of a committee of the Cherokee council, proceedings for impeachment will at once be brought against Chief Mayes, of that nation, and his council, for alleged fraud in the payment of $400,000 to the freedmen of the nation, by which it is said $126,000 was stolen. It is claimed that the meeting which resulted in the voting of an additional $400,000 to the freedmen after they had been awarded $903,254 by the courts was held in the office of Chief Mayes, with the knowledge of the council.

Are All in Want.

Havana, Dec. 4.—Senor Canalejas, the special commissioner of the Spanish government, has returned here from his visit to the province of Pinar del Rio. He says there are in the province 40,000 "concentrados" peasants gathered in from the country in the neighborhood of the towns for protection from the insurgents, or to prevent them from joining the enemy, and that they are all in want. Of this number 15,000 are orphans and the majority are children of tender years.

CONGRESS IN SESSION.

The National Legislature Gets Down to Business.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The hall of representatives presented an animated appearance long before the hour of noon arrived. The surrounding corridors were filled with jostling, moving crowds and before 11 o'clock the encircling galleries which overlooked the floor were black with people. The floral tributes for the members were numerous, and, in some instances, imposing.

As the hands of the clock pointed to 12 Speaker Reed, attired in a black cutaway coat and wearing a red tie, pushed through the green baize doors from the lobby and ascended the rostrum.

In the deep silence which followed the calling of the assemblage to order the prayer of the eminent divine, Charles A. Berry, of Weaverhampton, England, who delivered the invocation, was solemn and impressive.

The speaker then immediately directed the clerk to call the roll, and this consumed half an hour.

The roll call showed the presence of 301 members. There were five vacancies from death or resignation during the recess, and the credentials of the members-elect were read by the direction of the speaker, who then administered the oath of office to them. They were: F. M. Griffith (dem.), successor to the late Judge Holman in the Fourth Indiana district; H. S. Boutelle (rep.), of Chicago, who succeeded Edward D. Cooke, deceased; James Norton (dem.), of the Seventh South Carolina district, who succeeded John L. McLaurin, now a senator; George P. Lawrence (rep.), of the First Massachusetts district, who succeeded Ashley B. Wright, deceased, and J. N. Griggs (dem.), of the Third New York district, who succeeded Francis U. Wilson, who resigned to accept the position of postmaster at Brooklyn. The latter's credentials had not yet arrived, but the oath of office was administered to him by unanimous consent. On motion of Mr. Hopkins (rep., Ill.) the clerk was directed to notify the senate that the house was ready for business, and on motion of Mr. Dingley, the floor leader, a resolution was adopted for the appointment of a committee of three to join the committee of the senate to wait on the president and inform him that congress was ready to receive any communication he desired to make. The speaker selected Messrs. Dingley (Me.), Grosvenor (O.) and Bailey (Tex.) for this honor.

When the house reconvened at 1:40 p. m. the committee apointed to wait on the president came down the center aisle and Mr. Dingley reported that the committee had performed its mission.

Mr. Pruden, who had followed the committee into the hall, immediately presented the message to the president, which, by the direction of Speaker Reed, was read at the clerk's desk.

On motion of Mr. Dingley the message was referred to the committee of the whole and ordered printed. Mr. Lawrence (rep., Mass.) then officially announced the death of his predecessor, the late Representative Wright, and Mr. Allen (dem., Miss.) the death of Senator George. Out of respect to their memories the house then, at 3:05 p. m., adjourned until to-day.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The senate chamber at the opening of the session was a veritable conservatory. The floral display was unusually rich and beautiful and the odor of flowers was heavy in the hall. Precisely at 12 o'clock the gavel of Vice President Hobart fell and the senate was called to order. The invocation was delivered by Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain.

Seventy-seven senators responded to their names on the roll call. The venerable Senator Morrill, of Vermont, was first recognized by the vice president. He offered a resolution, which was passed in the usual form, that the secretary inform the house that the senate was in session and ready to proceed to business.

Senator Allison (Ia.) presented a resolution that a committee of two senators be appointed to join a like committee from the house to inform the president that congress was in session and prepared to receive any communication which he might desire to make to it. The resolution was passed and the vice president named Senators Allison and Gorman (Md.) as the senate committee.

At 1:30 the senate reconvened and the committee consisting of Senators Allison and Gorman reported through the former. The president's message was presented by Mr. Pruden, the president's assistant secretary, and was at 1:35 laid before the senate and read.

Senators gave the closest attention to the reading of the message, a majority of them following it from printed copies with which they had been supplied.

The reading of the message was concluded at 2:50. The document was ordered printed for the use of the senate.

Senator Walthall (Miss.) was recognized and announced the death of his colleague, Hon. James Z. George, of Mississippi. Senator Walthall presented the usual resolution of condolence with the family of the deceased senator. The resolution was adopted, and as a further mark of respect the senate adjourned.

Germans Capture Kiao-Chau.

London, Dec. 7.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Shanghai says a telegram has been received there from Chinan-Fu asserting that 200 German marines and sailors, with two machine guns, on Friday last, December 3, entered the city of Kiao-Chau, 18 miles from the bay, and took possession of the city walls and gates. They were not molested, the Chinese troops retreating as the Germans advanced.

Sequel to a Heavy Drunk.

Humboldt, Neb., Dec. 7. — Joseph Holechek, a farmer, quarreled with his wife Sunday night and shot and killed her. Holechek had been drinking heavily and returned home, when a quarrel ensued. His wife started to leave home and go to her brother's, when Holechek followed and shot her. A hired man with others who soon came to his assistance arrested the murderer.

Will Veto the Bill.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 7.—Gov. Atkinson, it is announced, will veto the anti-football bill recently passed by the legislature. There has been a revulsion of feeling all over the state, and it is the prevailing opinion that the bill practically obliterating the sport was passed too hastily.

A THORN IN HIS FLESH.

One Man Tells Honestly of His Political Experiences.

"I didn't have much luck in the legislature," sighed an aspiring young man who is now in the insurance business. "That old Skinley from the Hawbush district kept tripping me up every move I made. I wanted to go at him hammer and tongs, but he never appeared to know that there was such a member as I. He never used my name when speaking, never looked at me and never openly opposed any of my bills. But every time I bobbed up he knocked it to me. When I introduced my bill to do away with high hats in the theater, he offered one making it a misdemeanor for a woman of 15 years or upward to appear bareheaded in any place of public amusement. The only way of keeping even was by dropping both of these proposed measures.

"Having a large prohibition constituency, I offered a bill in which a penalty was fixed for selling or drinking any malt or spirituous liquors, except under certain restrictions which would make it impossible to maintain saloons. Old Skinley at once prepared and presented a measure making it a crime for any man, woman or child to have or to indulge a thirst for anything stronger than tea, coffee, water, milk or what are commonly known as soft drinks. I was laughed off the floor when I attempted to urge my bill.

"When I offered a bill forbidding any person to marry before he or she had attained the age of 21, Skinley was soon on deck with another bill prohibiting any young man or woman from falling in love without first procuring a license from the county clerk. That's the way the fellow squelched me at every turn. You can read my legislative record on a sheet of blank paper, and that's why I'm out of politics. But if Skinley ever comes up again just watch my smoke."—Detroit Free Press.

MADE HIM PROPOSE.

And It Was Not a Very Difficult Undertaking.

The diffident young man wanted to propose to his girl, but for the life of him he did not know how to go about it. He read books on the subject, and sought information from men who had experience; and while the theories were admirable, in every instance he found that the practice thereof was a different thing. He was walking with her one evening, thinking over these things, when her shoe became untied. She stuck out her pretty little foot with a smile, and looked down at it. He fell on his knees to tie the lace. Then he walked on with her. The shoe became untied again. The third time it happened he was ready as before.

"See if you can't tie a knot that won't come undone," she said, as he worked away at it.

He looked up at her tenderly.

"If I can't, I know a man who can," he said.

"Do you want him to tie it?" she asked, coquettishly.

"Yes," he replied.

She jerked her foot away. He smiled to himself.

"It's the parson," he said. And he rose to his feet and finished the proposal.—Tit-Bits.

New Route to California.

A striking confirmation of the truth of the saying: "It is an ill-wind that blows no one good" is found in the new routing of the "Sunset Limited." Heretofore it has started from New Orleans westward. This season, on account of the prevalence of yellow fever in some parts of the south, Chicago has been decided upon as the terminus, the route being over Chicago & Alton, Chicago to St. Louis; St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern, St. Louis to Texarkana; Texas & Pacific, Texarkana to El Paso; Southern Pacific Company, El Paso to California destination. The train runs twice a week, leaving Chicago 1:30 p. m. every Tuesday and Saturday, and St. Louis 10:20 p. m. same days. Eastbound the same trains leave San Francisco 5:30 p. m. Mondays and Thursdays, and Los Angeles 10:30 a. m. Tuesdays and Fridays.

"Sunset Limited" is a magnificent train, completely vestibuled and running through solid, comprising a library and smoking car for gentlemen with barbershop and bathroom; a combination ladies' parlor and compartment car, with well-stocked library, and ladies' maid in attendance; two of the finest sleeping-cars, and a dining-car, in which perfect meals are perfectly served. The dining-car service is a la carte—pay for what you order—and prices are reasonable.

A trip across the continent in this train could not but be a delight at any time, but during the winter months there will be special satisfaction in the certainty of a semi-tropical climate, picturesque and novel scenery, fast time, and no snow blockades. And best of all, no extra fare is charged for transportation on "Sunset Limited," only the regular Pullman rates prevailing for sleeping-car accommodations.

His Sinister Intention.

Oklahoma Landlord—If thar is a shootin' star or two along toward midnight don't git scared, Mr. Eastman. You won't be in no danger yourself.

Eastern Tourist—Certainly not! I have seen such sights before, but I was not aware that there was to be a meteoric display at this time.

A NECKLACE OF PEARLS

Is a beautiful possession. If a woman owns one, and if a single pearl drops off the string, she makes haste to find and restore it.

Good health is a more valuable possession than a necklace of the most beautiful pearls, yet one by one the jewels of health slip away, and women seem indifferent until it is almost too late, and they cannot be restored.

To die before you are really old is to suffer premature death, and that is a sin. It is a sin because it is the result of repeated violations of nature's laws.

Pain, lassitude and weariness, inability to sleep, dreadful dreams, starting violently from sleep, are all symptoms of nerve trouble.

You cannot have nerve trouble and keep your health. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the womb, the ovaries and the bladder are affected. They are not vital organs, hence they give out soonest.

Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, by building up the nerves and restoring woman's organism to its natural state, relieves all these troublesome uterine symptoms. In confirmation of this we, by permission, refer to the following women, all of whom speak from experience: MISS CELIA VAN HORN, 1912 Sharswood St., Philadelphia, Pa.; MISS GRACE COLLORD, 1434 Eastern Ave., Cincinnati, O.; MRS. NEWELL, 50 Ryerson St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; MRS. ISABEL OBERG, 220 Chestnut St., Woburn, Mass., MRS. A. H. COLE, New Rochelle, N. Y., and many others

For special symptoms Mrs. Pinkham has prepared a Sanative Wash, which will cure local troubles. Give these medicines a trial.

House-drudgery,

It's drudgery—an enemy to woman's health. Now, which is better—to use Pearline and stop the drudgery, or to wear yourself out and then try to get well? Pearline, more than any other one thing, makes housework what it should be. THE AFTERGLOW.

I had bethought me that the day was done,
For with dense ashes of November cloud
Nature, most provident, had banked her fires
That late had glowed upon the sunset hearth.
My page unfinished I must needs lay by,
So sudden had the dark from ambush leapt.
Thus will it be, I mused, when Life is o'er:
Sadly I mused, the too-swift falling night
Shall overtake the traveler unaware,
Shall blur and blot the uncompleted page
And dissolution and disaster blend.
When lo! The prisoned glory in the west
Sudden burst forth, a passionate, living flame,
As if it heard again: "Let there be light!"
Then the earth roused, as by a torch's glare
A sleeper wakes, and all the hills stood forth,
To see the prairie lands of Heaven on fire!
I clasped my hands, I cried: "The Afterglow!
The bright Day o'er the shoulder looking back!"
Then was my page illumined to the end;
And there I read: "The man that walks with God,
Death never overtakes." O blessed words!
Thus was Faith strengthened in the Afterglow.

KICKING IN SINNEMAHONE.

NOTHING LIKE THAT FEVER EITHER BEFORE OR SINCE.

"I WONDER if any of you on this side the mountain remember the strange ailment that visited us folks on the other side when I was a young man?" said the man from over Sinnemahoning way. "A strange ailment it was indeed. Sort of an uncontrollable derangement of the muscular tissues of the leg, the doctors called it, but it was known as the kicking fever of the Sinnemahone. I wonder if any of you remember it?"

"Natur'ly, it ain't likely that anybody does," said the man in the red, blue, green, pink, yellow and purple Mackinaw jacket, "but any fever that ever got mixed up with folks on the Sinnemahone an' didn't kick must a been of setch a mild an' forgivin' a disposition as to make it a shame to feed quinine to it."

"Thanks, Mackinaw," said the man from over Sinnemahoning way. "Your gentle humor goes far toward dissipating a certain sadness and tendency to abstraction and a fit of the blues that always assail me when I think of that kicking fever of the Sinnemahone, and I thank you! When I see the fertile acres of the Jepheniah Biffkins estate spreading along the Sinnemahoning's classic bottom and think how they would now all be mine but for that kicking fever I am prone to sadness. But you've knocked 'em silly this time, Mackinaw.

"Yes, yes. Those rich Jepheniah Biffkins acres would now be mine but for that kicking fever that came to the Sinnemahone country. These acres then belonged to Deacon Judd Peeler, and the deacon's daughter Nancy had promised to be my wife, and Nancy was heir to all the wide Peeler estate. So when I think—but let that pass. It is all over now.

"Wherever that most singular ailment could have come from no one ever knew, but it certainly cut a wide swath along the Sinnemahone. I was off down the river when it began its attack, and consequently I didn't know anything about it until I got back home a couple of weeks later. The first person it struck was Uncle Billy Tope. Uncle Billy was a mild and easy-going citizen that no one would have thought had any life in him at all, and he was a strict teetotaler. Consequently you may imagine the astonishment of Squire Bunker, who owned the sawmill where Uncle Billy worked, to see the old man coming up the road one day, giving a tremendous kick every two or three steps he took, sometices to the right and sometimes to the left, as if he might have started out to kick all creation into the middle of next week. Squire Bunker was scared, and he edged off to one side of the road as Uncle Billy came along, kicking and scuffing and looking as wild as an Indian. The squire ventured to say as the old man was cavorting by:

"'What's up, William?'

"Uncle Billy only shook his head, and giving a kick that didn't miss the squire's jaw by more than half an inch, went on his way toward home, kicking as he went.

"'Astounding!' exclaimed the squire. 'I never thought I'd live long enough to see Uncle Billy Tope turn out to be a drinker!'

"Then the squire started for home. He hadn't gone a hundred yards before he began to feel a little mulish himself, and the first thing he knew he was kicking away as unreasonably as Uncle Billy. He couldn't stop it any more than he could have stopped his mill race with a three-inch plug. The squire didn't have for to go, and before he could reach out and open his door he had kicked it open with a bang, and his wife came running out of the kitchen to see what was the matter.

"'Clear the way, mother!' the squire hollered. 'Give me room! Don't get in my way or I'll make a widower of myself at one swoop!'

"The squire's wife, scared almost to death, locked herself up in a closet, and the squire kicked his way out of the back door and brought up in the garden, where he yelled for some one to come and tie him down, or else turn him into a ten-acre lot where he could have room.

"And that's the way that most unaccountable kicking fever started along the Sinnemahone. In less than a week it had taken a whack at almost every man, woman and child in that bailiwick. The kicking was only the premonitory symptom of the fever. After the victim had kicked high and kicked low, and to the windward and to the leeward, for half an hour or so, the fit would pass away, but it would come back again after awhile. The kicking stage of the epidemic lasted two days, and then the second stage came on. This was a scorching fever. Sam Betts, when he got over his attack, declared that his fever was so hot that his wife had to keep the sheets wet to prevent their catching fire, but Sam wasn't a native of the Sinnemahoning country. He was from this side of the mountain somewhere, and folks didn't believe him. The fever lasted a day, and left behind it a consuming longing for something to drink—not water nor coffee nor tea nor milk, but rum, rye, apple juice, anything that had tooth and edge to it. This strange symptom of the malady was discovered in a startling way. Dominie Dibble was the first victim that it developed in. One evening while half a dozen of his flock were mingling their sorrow with the dominie's over his affliction he suddenly shouted:

"'Give me rum! Fetch me some scorching rye or biting gin!'

"The brethren and sisters were shocked, but Dominie Dibble kept on hollering for rum. No one made a move to get him any, and at last he sprang out of his chair, rushed out of the house, and made straight for the tavern like a man running to a fire. By and by he came back singing:

"'Home again, home again,
From a foreign shore.'

"He had a bottle of rum under his arm, and the brethren and sisters hurried home, feeling that the end of all things couldn't be far away. When it got out, though, that the dominie was simply suffering from the third stage of the kicking fever, they excused him and rejoiced. But the dominie always declared that he never had such a pleasing antidote for pain. Then it began to be noticed that this last peculiar stage of the ailment seemed to have no regular period of existence, and it is noted as a fact that the afflicted district wasn't entirely able to be out and around as usual until the tavern keeper gave notice that there wasn't a drop of anything left that the last stage of the kicking fever called for.

"During the time the fever lasted three leading citizens of the Sinnemahone were carried off in their bloom by it, not one of whom even had the consolation of enjoying the treatment for the last stage. First, there was Abiram Hinkle. When the kicking fever first struck the district, the doctor said that the harder the victims had to kick the better it would be for them, for if they couldn't kick hard it would strike in and that would be the end of 'em. The kicking always came in the right leg. Now Abiram Hinkle didn't have any right leg, it having been taken off clean in the saw mill. When the attack seized him he couldn't kick. It struck in and away he went.

"Next was Simon Shelly. Simon swore by Elijah Pink, the horse doctor, who could cure anything, according to Simon's belief. Elijah had cured a kicking horse for Simon one time by rigging him to some sort of a contrivance that threw him every time the horse kicked. Simon made up his mind that he was just as apt to have the kicking fever as his neighbors were, so he sent for Elijah to provide against it. He had Elijah fit him with a rigging something like the one that cured the kicking horse. The very next day the ailment seized him. Simon was standing by a window in his house. He gave one tremendous kick. The rigging worked. It threw Simon. It threw him out of the window and head first into a barrel of rain water that stood beneath it. They didn't discover Simon in time, and that made two fellow citizens the epidemic carried away.

"Its third victim was Erastus Sleeper. Erastus went out to milk his cow one evening, and just as he began the kicking fever took hold of him. He shot out a kick. It hit the cow in the shin. The disease was so very contagious that just that one kick gave it to the cow. The cow kicked. Her kick landed in Erastus' stomach, and knocked the wind out of him so far they couldn't get it back. Erastus' widow married Jeff Roner, the sheep-pelt buyer.

"Well, this brings me round to my own deep disappointment. Jepheniah Biffkins had been paying more attention to Deacon Peeler's daughter Nancy than seemed to me safe, and when I came back home that time I made up my mind I'd settle the matter right then and there and know whether Nancy was destined to be a Biffkins or a Pettibone. I went straight to the deacon's that very evening, before I had been home half an hour. This was just at the time the kicking fever was getting in its best licks, but I didn't know a thing about it. Nancy was home, and I hadn't been there long before she had promised that her name should be Pettibone. I was happy, I tell you, and just before I got ready to go Deacon Peeler himself came in. We had a very cheering talk for a minute or two, and I started to go. Just as I opened the door I felt a tremendous shock, and at the same time I rose in the air more than three feet. When I landed I was standing out in the yard. Before I had come entirely to I felt the shock again. Again I was lifted and swept several feet further out in the yard. Then I looked back. Nancy's father was just behind me with a queer look on his face. His right foot rose up and shot out, and the shock came a third time. Deacon Peeler was as strong as an ox, and his foot was shod with a No. 12 cowhide boot. This time the shock lifted me over the gate and set me down in the road. Nancy had come running from the house, and she cried out:

"'Father ain't kicking you, Praxy! It's only the fever that's workin' on him! He ain't kicking you!'

"Well! If he wasn't kicking me I didn't know what they called kicking along the Sinnemahone, and I think I made a remark to that effect as I hurried home in sorrow and went to bed. Next day I heard about the kicking fever for the first, and then I knew what Nancy had meant when she declared that her father wasn't kicking me. I went right back with a heart lighter than a feather, but Nancy made it heavy as lead in less than half a minute.

"'Praxiteles Pettibone!' she said, 'you went and ran away from father last night when he was sick and suffering! You're too heartless for me!'

"That ended it all between Nancy Peeler and me. The kicking fever had done it—although, as I remember it now, I saw Deacon Peeler out in his garden hoeing potatoes that morning, as quiet and steady as ever he was. But Nancy married Jepheniah, and the broad acres of old Deacon Peeler to this day spread themselves out over yonder along the Sinnemahone as the Biffkins estate, actually calm and peaceful and smiling, as if they hadn't missed the opportunity of being this day on the tax list in the name of Praxiteles Pettibone."—N. THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

A Synopsis of This Important State Paper.

Currency Reform Recommendations and the Affairs of Cuba Given Greatest Attention—Hawaiian Annexation and Other Questions.

Washington, Dec. 6.—President McKinley to-day sent his annual message to congress. He congratulated it upon assembling under felicitous conditions. Peace and good will with all the nations of the earth continue unbroken, he says, and we should feel genuine satisfaction at the growing spirit of fraternal regard and unification in all sections of our country and the lifting of great public questions above party prejudice.

The Currency Problem.

Beginning with the subject of the finances the president says that while the full effect of the legislation of the extra session has not yet beeen realized what it has already accomplished assures us of its timeliness and wisdom. To test its permanent value further time will be required, and the people, satisfied with its operation and results thus far, are in no mind to withhold from it a fair trial. The next question pressing for consideration is that of the currency. With the great resources of the government and with the honorable example of the past before us, we ought not to hesitate to enter upon a currency revision which will make our demand obligation less onerous to the government and relieve our financial laws from ambiguity and doubt. The evil of the present system is found in the great cost to the government of maintaining at a parity with gold our different forms of money, and the experience of the past four years has demonstrated that this is not only an expensive charge upon the government, but a dangerous menace to the national credit. It is manifest that we must devise some plan to protect the government against bond issues for repeated redemptions. We have $900,000,000 of currency which the government by solemn enactment has undertaken to keep at par and nobody is obliged to redeem in gold but the government which must borrow the gold. The law which requires the payment out of the treasury of redeemed United States notes demands a constant replenishment of the gold reserve, especially in time of panic and insufficient revenue, and during the preceding administration $262,315,400 4½ per cent. bonds were issued and sold to sustain the gold reserve and pay the expenses of the government in excess of revenues. While it is true that a greater part of this was used to supply deficient revenues, a considerable portion was required to maintain the gold reserve. If no further legislation is to be had it is correct this and the policy of selling bonds is to be continued, then congress should give the secretary of the treasury authority to sell bonds at long or short periods, bearing a less rate of interest than is now authorized by law.

Should Demand Gold in Exchange.

The president says: "I earnestly recommend as soon as the receipts of the government are quite sufficient to pay all the expenses of the government, that when any United States notes are presented for redemption in gold and are redeemed in gold, such notes shall be kept and set apart and only paid out in exchange for gold. This is an obvious duty. If the holder of the United States note prefers the gold and gets it from the government he should not receive back from the government a United States note without paying gold in exchange for it." That amounts, to the president's mind, to giving an interest-bearing debt, a government bond, for a noninterest-bearing debt, a United States note. The government should be relieved from the burden of providing all the gold required for exchanges and exports. This ought to be stopped. With an era of prosperity and sufficient receipts we may feel no immediate embarrassment, but the danger will be ever present.

The president invites careful consideration for the detailed plan of the secretary of the treasury to protect the gold reserve. He concurs with him in the recommendation that national banks be allowed to issue notes to the face value of their bonds deposited; that the circulating tax be reduced to one-half of one per cent., and that national banks may be established with a capital of $25,000. He also recommends that the issue of national bank notes be restricted to the denomination of ten dollars and upwards, and that they be required to redeem their notes in gold.

The Cuban Situation.

Turning to foreign affairs the president devotes much space in his message to a consideration of the Cuban question, which he says is the most important problem with which our government is now called to deal in its foreign relations. Summarizing the history of the former outbreaks, the president comes down to the present insurrection, speaking of its remarkable increase, its tenacious existence against enormous forces massed by Spain, the widespread destruction of property and the disregard of the civilized code of war on both sides. He says these conditions give rise to the gravest apprehensions. There is no desire on our part to profit by Spain's misfortune, and we have always desire to see the Cubans enjoying that measure of self-control which is the inalienable right of man. Of the concentration policy of Weyler he says: "It has utterly failed as a war measure. It is not civilized warfare—it is extermination."

Against this abuse of the rights of war the president says he has felt constrained on repeated occasions to enter the firm and honest protest of this government. He outlines his instructions to Minister Woodford, which were in substance to impress upon the Spanish government the sincere wish of the United States to lend its aid toward the ending of the war by reaching a peaceful and lasting result, just and honorable to Spain and to the Cuban people. It was also asked whether Spain on her own volition should not make proposals for settlement, and it was said that we could not contemplate an indefinite period for the accomplishment of this result.

The Spanish Reply.

The Spanish reply to Mr. Woodford was, in the president's opinion, in the direction of a better understanding. It admitted our friendly purposes and deep interest and declared that the new government was bound to a change of policy that should satisfy the United States and pacify Cuba within a reasonable time. To this end political reforms will be put into effect and military operations conducted on humane lines. It was suggested that Spain be left free to conduct military operations and grant political reforms while the United States for its part should enforce neutral obligations and cut off the assistance which the insurgents, it was asserted, received from this country. Early and complete pacification is hoped for.

The president declares that the Spanish disposition to charge us with failure to meet international duties is baseless, and points to the efforts this government has made at the cost of millions and by the employment of the administrative machinery of the nation to perform its full duty. He also says that the fact that no military expedition or armed vessel has left our shores has been diplomatically represented with Spain. Premising that throughout all the horror and danger to our own peace the United States has never abrogated its right to determine its policy as to Cuba, the president points out that of untried measures there remains only: Recognition of the insurgents as belligerents, recognition of the independence of Cuba, neutral intervention to end the war by imposing a rational compromise between the contestants, an intervention in favor of one or the other party. He says: "I speak not of forcible annexation, for that cannot be thought of. That by our code of morality would be criminal aggression." Taking up the question of belligerency, the president quotes at length from President Grant's message of December 7, 1875, wherein he declared that the conditions in Cuba warranted neither the recognition of independence nor the recognition of belligerency. He adds that moreover a recognition of belligerency would confer upon neither party to the conflict a status not therefore actually possessed, while it would weigh heavily in Spain's behalf, giving her the right of search on the high seas and extending her maritime rights to the margin of our territorial waters. "For these reasons," says the president, "I regard the recognition of the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents as now unwise and therefore inadmissible.

Will Not Hesitate to Act.

"Should that step hereafter be deemed wise as a matter of right and duty, the executive will take it." He points to the hopeful change in the Spanish policy, to the pledge of reform and to the abatement of the horrors of war as reasons against intervention on humanitarian grounds. The first acts of the new government, he in the honorable paths it has outlined; the policy of rapine and extermination has been reversed; broad clemencies proffered; measures have been taken to relieve the horrors of starvation. The power of the Spanish armies, it is asserted, is to be used not to spread ruin and desolation, but to protect the resumption of agricultural industries. The president sketches the autonomy scheme of the Spanish government and says that it is honestly due to Spain that she should be given a reasonable chance to realize her expectations and to prove the asserted efficacy of the new order of things to which she stands irrevocably committed. He points to the many concessions already made, to the modification of the horrible order of concentration, to the release of the Competitor prisoners, and the fact that not a single American citizen is now under arrest in Cuba. He says the near future will demonstrate whether a righteous peace is likely to be attained; if not, the exigency of further and other action by the United States will remain to be taken. Sure of the right, the government will continue its watchful care over every American citizen and its efforts to bring about honorable peace and, says the president, "if it shall hereafter appear to be a duty imposed by our obligations to ourselves, to civilization and humanity to intervene with force, it shall be without fault on our part, and only because the necessity for such action will be so clear as to command the support and approval of the civilized world."

Should Annex Hawaii.

The president takes up the subject of the annexation of Hawaii, which, he says, should be accomplished. Rapidly reviewing his former arguments in favor of annexation, he says that legislation is required in the event of the ratification of the treaty, and, while abrupt assimilations of immature elements of population should be avoided, just provision should be made for self-rule in local matters with the largest political liberty to the Hawaiians. He says the dispute between Japan and Hawaii over the immigration question is now in a satisfactory stage of settlement by negotiation; that our government has not intervened, and that it is learned that Japan is now confident in the intention of this government to deal with all possible ulterior questions affecting her interests in the broadest spirit of friendliness.

Central American Affairs.

Reference is made to the failure of Mr. Merry to be received as minister to Nicaragua on account of the obligations of that country to the diet of the Greater Republic of Central America. As there is no legal authority at present to accredit him to the diet, Mr. Baker, the present minister at Managua, has been directed to present his letters of recall. Mr. W. Godfrey Hunter is said to be likewise accredited to Honduras, a member of the Greater Republic, and his case is awaiting action.

The Nicaragua canal is spoken of as of large importance to our country, and the promise is made of further reference to the subject which in the report of the commission now at work is sent to congress.

The Monetary Commission.

The president says of the international monetary commission that, notwithstanding diligent effort, the envoys have failed so far to secure an agreement. Gratification is expressed at the action of France in this matter in joining in our efforts, and it is said that the negotiations are still pending. Meanwhile the envoys have not made their final report, believing that the doubts raised in certain quarters respecting the feasibility of maintaining parity between gold and silver may yet be solved. The president earnestly hopes that their labors may bring about an international agreement.

Mr. Kasson, of Iowa, is said to be now conducting negotiations with several governments for reciprocity arrangements under the tariff act, and it is believed that by a careful exercise of the powers conferred by the act, some grievances of our own and other countries in our mutual trade relations may be removed or alleviated and the volume of our commercial exchanges enlarged.

The president earnestly urges the improvement of our merchant marine, the inferiority of which, he says, is humiliating to the national pride.

The Sealing Question.

Reference is made to the recent conferences at Washington on the subject of the protection of seal life, the result of which places beyond controversy, it is said, the duty of the governments concerned to adopt measures without delay for the preservation of the herds. Negotiations to this end are now in progress.

International arbitration is declared by the president to represent the best sentiment of the civilized world and treaties embodying these humane principles on broad lines without in any way imperiling our interests or honor will have its constant encouragement.

A liberal appropriation is bespoken in order that the United States may make a creditable exhibit at the approaching Paris exposition, in which the people have shown an unprecedented interest.

Under the head of the navy the president points to the necessity for speedy legislation to procure the armor for the three battleships now building which would be otherwise useless. He speaks in terms of praise of the quality of our ships and thinks the time has now arrived when the increase to which the country is committed should for the time take the form of increased facilities commensurate with the increase of our naval vessels. He refers to the lack of docks, and urges that two or four of the largest docks be provided on the Atlantic, at least one on the Pacific coast, and a floating dock in the gulf. There should also be ample provision for munitions of war and an increase of officers and enlisted men. Additions are also necessary to navy yards, and, as there are now on the stocks five large battleships, it is recommended that an appropriation be made but for one more battleship on the Pacific coast. Several torpedo boats are also necessary.

The Needs of Alaska.

Attention is called to the need for prompt legislation as to Alaska and the extension of civil authority within the territory. There is need for survey and for the establishment of another land office at some point in the Yukon valley, for which an appropriation is asked. Military force is also necessary, and the establishment of some sort of flexible government. If the startling reports as to the probable shortage of food for the miners be fully verified, every effort should be made at any cost to carry them relief.

The message deals at some length with the unsatisfactory condition of affairs in the Indian territory. The large white element is said to be without protection and without schools or other rights of citizens; leading Indians have absorbed great tracts of lands and created an aristocracy, and the friends of the Indians believe that the best interests of the Five Civilized tribes would be found in American citizenship. Reference is made to the failure so far of the Dawes commission to secure the consent of the tribes to an extinguishment of the tribal titles and a division of the lands. It is said that should the tribes still fail to ratify the agreement then some legislation should be had by congress.

The president approves the recommendation of the secretary of the treasury for an extension of the quarantine laws and also suggests the appointment of a special commission to ascertain the cause of yellow fever.

Sale of the Kansas Pacific.

Speaking of the pending sale of the Kansas Pacific railroad it is said that if no better bid is received than the upset price fixed by the court, the government would receive only $2,500,000 on its claim of nearly $13,000,000. He believes that the government has the authority to bid on the road, and has directed the secretary of the treasury to make the deposit of $900,000 required to qualify as a bidder, and to bid at the sale a sum at least equal to the principal of the debt to the government. He suggests, however, that in a matter so important as the government becoming a possible owner of the railroad, congress should enact some legislation to define its views. It is clear to him, however, that the government should not permit the property to be sold at a price less than one-half the principal of its debt and less than one-fifth of its entire debt, principal and interest.

The Civil Service.

The president devotes the last chapter of his message to the civil service, the practical improvement of which, he says, has long been a subject of earnest discussion and which has of late years received increased legislative and executive approval. During the past few months the service has been placed upon a still firmer basis of business methods and personal merit. While the right of deserving veteran soldiers to reinstatement has been asserted, dismissals for merely political reasons have been carefully guarded against; the examinations improved and made practical, and a distinct advance has been made by giving a hearing before dismissal upon all cases where incompetency is charged or demand made for the removal of officials. This last has been done without impairing the power of removal, one of the vital safeguards of the system. Much remains to be done before the system can be perfected, and the president says that he shall not hesitate to exempt cases which he thinks have been improperly included in the classified service or include those which in his judgment will best promote the public service. The system has the approval of the people, and it will be his endeavor to uphold and extend it.

In conclusion the president admonishes congress not to encourage the increase of the estimates for the maintenance of the government. They would admit of decrease in many branches, and it is a commanding duty to keep the appropriations within the receipts of the government and thus avoid a deficit.

Laid Out for His Benefit.

A Devonshire lad of 12 years was industriously at work upon a pile of wood in his mother's back yard when he was approached by a playmate.

"Hallo, Ben!" said this youngster, "do you get anything for cutting this wood?"

"Well, I should think I do," replied Ben. "Mother gives me a penny a day for doing it."

"My! What yer goin' to do with yer money?"

"Oh, she's saving it for me, and when I get enough she's going to get me a new ax."—Rambler.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, DEC. 10, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Dr. Niven in Delano Dec. 10 and 11; Waverly, Dec. 12 and 13; and at Howard Lake, Dec. 14 and 15.

—Tomorrow, Saturday, Dec. 11, will be Fair Day in Delano.

--Green & Co. are already disposing of lots of Christmas presents, cheap for cash.

—Rev. Ray, of Litchfield, conducted the funeral services of Mrs. S. S. Ball, Saturday.

-- Wednesday was a church holiday and the town was filled with teams and people.

--A few warm days this week removed most of the sleighing; and wheels are again fashionable.

—If you have cordwood to sell read the offer for "Sealed Bids" by the Village Recorder in another column.

—A dozen eggs and a fair sized hen are now the same price. 15 cents buys either. Both are cheap as compared with last year.

--Rev. J. L. Farber had a larger audience last Sunday evening than he had the Sunday before. That's right, attend church.

--Cows seem to bring more money into farmer's pockets at present, than do other products of the farm. While the ever praised hen, for some reason seems to be loosing ground as a wealth producer.

--The M. E. Sunday School will hold a dime sociable at Mr. Hawker's Friday evening, Dec. 10th for the purpose of raising the necessary fund to buy a Christmas tree. All are cordially invited to come and have a good time.

--The Eagle usually about this time of year, has been in the habit of giving its readers an article on eggs, and how the price was affected by the tariff. Some how or another they have failed to furnish it this year. There is a deficiency.

--Several of our merchants are prepared to furnish people with the usual Christmas presents. G. P. Schaffer was rigging up his arrangements for displaying handkerchiefs and other fancy articles a few days ago. Green & Co. are also in Santa Claus business some.

--Before purchasing your Christmas gifts visit Schaffer's Emporium and see his assortment of handkerchiefs, beautiful crockery ware, and other useful as well as ornamental articles which would make first class Christmas presents; besides the usual toys in stock.

--Rev. McCornack preached at the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock, to a fair sized audience. His subject was "God's First and Second." He expects to be here every Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock, for awhile, at least. Turn out and hear him.

—The Mayor and police force suppressed the organization of a club by a number of Delano's young men, Saturday evening. If they will now raid some more places that are equally as bad, and those present there claim, much worse, they will begin to grow in favor with the people in town who believe in law and liberty.

—A meeting of the Delano Cemetery association should be held soon, for the election of officers. It has been several years since enough of the people interested in the cemetery could be gotten together to hold an election and the old board has continued to do business and fill vacancies on the board by inducing some one to take the place. An election should be held.

Dr. E. Balcome died yesterday at his home, 1661 Grand avenue, Macalester Park, at the age of seventy-two years. Dr. Balcome practiced medicine many years at Howard Lake, and about a year ago he came to St. Paul to enable his son to attend Macalester college. The funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and the body will be taken to Howard Lake for burial.--Pioneer Press.

Dr. Balcome was an old settler in this county. He resided in Delano and practiced his profession away back in the seventies.

Personal.

Dr. Powell, of Hanover, was in town Tuesday.

Tom Rader is reported among the sick this week.

Rev. Farber visited Minneapolis Wednesday on business.

Mrs. A. L. Jones is visiting her parents at Hutchinson this week.

Dr. Fasset, of Rockford, makes frequent drives to Delano now a-days.

Ye Editor of the GAZETTE has been confined to the house a part of the week, sick.

Rev. Ray of Litchfield held Episcopal services Wednesday and Thursday in Delano.

Will Hitsman, who has been helping set up the telephone line returned home this week.

Miss Mable Hobart came from New York to the funeral of her Foster Mother, Mrs. C. W. Kerrick of this place.

Cal Stewart and family expect their car tomorrow. On Monday they are to start for corvalis, Washington.

Operator Shaw has been acting agent at Smith Lake for a few days. Will Sleight held down his job here in his absence.

Mrs. C. G. Halgren and daughter, Mrs. Dr. Shrader, of Watertown, drove over and visited Delano friends one day this week.

Mrs. P. L. Gross, Misses Addie and Alvira, and John Cameron, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. C. M. Coffin, of Benson, attended the funeral of Mrs. Cameson, here Wednesday.

Rev. Shannon, formerly Presiding Elder of the Duluth district, now of Minneapolis, visited Delano on Wednesday, and preached the funeral of Mrs. Cameron.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hoisington, of Independence, were in town yesterday. They ordered their GAZETTE mailed to Dayton, Washington, where they expect to be soon. Earl promised to write a letter for the GAZETTE soon.

County Cullings.

Court convened at Buffalo, Monday, Judge Tarbox presiding.

The case of L. M. Meister for assault in the 2nd degree, called at Buffalo, was not answered to, and the bonds declared forfeited.

Pension Commissioner Evans has concluded it best to publish with the names, the amount granted pensioners. Under this ruling we find George M. Wright, of Montrose, increase from $6 to $10.

In the case of Mrs. Minerva Tracy against George J. Scherer and others which took up so much time at the last term of court the Supreme Court has affirmed the decision of the lower court giving Mrs. Tracy the property in dispute.

There is considerable kick from residents of both Rockford and Delano and we think they are all justified in making their kicks on account of the discontinuance of the Delano-Rockford Mail Route. Let it be re-established by all means.--Cokato Enterprise.

The Wright county editorial society seems a long time in embryo. Get a move on you, brother Wharton; call your meeting. Editor Tanner has already assigned to us the delightful privilege of addressing the society for two hours on Tariff is a tax. We don't want to loose this chance of converting our brethern to that fact.

KLONDIKE LOCALS.

Current Events for the Past Week in the Land of Gold—From the Klondike "Lyre."

Our esteemed townsman, Bud Gravel, placed upon our desk recently a handsomely shapped nugget. It weighed twenty-seven pounds. We have credited him with three months' subscription to the "Lyre." We are pleased to see that Mr. Gravel, who is one of our best citizens, is doing well. He is one of a syndicate who expect to buy a quart of whiskey on Saturday night.

The high wind yesterday raised considerable dust. Jake Luckenbill, who was out on Eldorado road with his team, says he was nearly blinded by it. When we came home he coughed up $73.89. One of our greatest needs is street sprinkling.

Dawson Pettibone has finished his new well in the rear of his new kitchen. It now has eleven feet of ice water in it, and he has washed out over $85,000 in dust from the dirt taken out.

The Widow Larkin yesterday met with a misfortune, which will, we are sure, call forth the sympathy of the public. During the heavy rainsterm in the afternoon, a regular torrent rushed down the gulley back of her house and washed so much gold dust into her pig sty that the pig was smothered. A subscription has been started for her benefit.

While Ike Sigman, the esteemed proprietor of the Big Strike saloon, was fishing in the river yesterday his boat struck a snag; it proved to be a 600 pound nugget. He will have it taken out and will use it as a horse block in front of his place. Ike is always bound to have the best that is going.

Large numbers of dead catfish are seen floating in the river every day. When examined it is found that every one of them has from six to eight ounces of gold dust in its stomach. This carelessness in allowing loose gold to escape into the river will ruin the fishing unless stopped.

Bill Jacobs made a pretty good strike on the Little Juniper this week. He struck plenty of gold at a depth of three feet, but as the lumps were too big to carry he closed up the hole and has staked another claim further up the creek.

Aleck Cameron put a new fire place in his cabin this week, but he will now have to build another one. After he had completed it he built a roaring fire, but there was so much metal in the stone that it melted and ran all over the floor. He now has a gold-plated floor but no fireplace.

There was a bull movement in dog meat yesterday, the price closing at 68 cents above the opening figure. It is supposed to be due entirely to professional speculation.—Ogdensburg Journal.

Late Literary News.

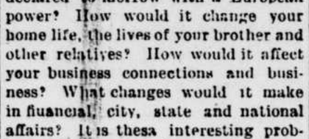
What would you do if war should be declared to-morrow with a European power? How would it change your home life, the lives of your brother and other relatives? How would it affect your business connections and business? What changes would it make in financial, city, state and national affairs? It is thes a interesting problems which a writer in the December Cosmopolitan has undertaken to sketch under the heading of "A Brief History of Our Late War With Spain," at the same time vividly describing the exciting scenes which would attend the opening of hostilities. This same number of the Cosmopolitan has an article on "The Well Dressed Woman" by Elsie de Wolfe, a contrast of the characters of Henry George and Charles A. Dana by John Brisben Walker, in another place "The Loves of Goethe," while Wells' story, "The War of the Worlds," which has been so widely read, reaches its conclusion in an unexpected way.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz. 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1.30 for the two papers.

DR. NIVEN



Will be in Delano Dec. 10 and 11; Waverly, Dec. 12 and 13, and Howard Lake, Dec. 14 and 15.

Elegant sets of artificial teeth. Fillings of all kinds. Painless extracting. Prices always reasonable. Work warranted at Gilmer Hotel.

Sealed Bids, Wood.

Sealed Bids for wood, for the Village of Delano, to be delivered at the power House, will be received as follows:

For 200 cords of 4 foot Dry Basswood, or wood equally as good, to be delivered at once.

For 250 cords 4 foot Green Basswood, or wood equally as good, to be delivered before the snow goes off in the spring.

Bids will be received for any amount from 5 cords to the full number of cords wanted.

Leave bids with the Village Recorder, on or before Monday, the 20th day of December, at which time they will be opened.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

L. M. MAXFIELD,
Village Recorder.
DELANO, Dec. 3, 1897. 3t.

"What to Eat" for December.

"How to Live a Hundred Years" forms the title of a short but interesting article in the December number of What To Eat.

What Shakespeare has to say about kissing for dyspepsia is told by Ira Gale-Tompkins in a capital way, while James Courtney Challis supplements the article by a very funny poem entitled "The Bridger Cure," all fittingly illustrated.

The cover is beautiful, and the centerpage is a patriotic gem that all old soldiers and their friends should see and preserve.

WHAT TO EAT offers $10 to the person filling out the following blank lines so as to make the best four lines of poetry, and $1 each to the ten next best. The only conditions are that you fill out the lines and send ten cents for sample copy of magazine.

I saw a man come down the street,
And he was full of——
The day was bright, the air was sweet,
And——

Other words may be used in the second and fourth lines if preferred.

10 cents a copy.

OUR HEROES.

Here's a hand to the boy who has courage
To do what he knows to be right.
When he falls in the way of temptation,
He has a hard battle to fight.
Who strives against self and his comrades
Will find a most powerful foe.
All honor to him if he conquers,
A cheer for the boy who says "No!"

There's many a battle fought daily
The world knows nothing about.
There's many a brave little soldier
Whose strength puts a legion to route.
And he who fights sin single handed
Is more of a hero, I say,
Than he who leads soldiers to battle
And conquers by arms in the fray.

Be steadfast, my boy, when you're tempted,
To do what you know to be right.
Stand firm by the colors of manhood
And you will o'ercome in the fight.
"The right" be your battle cry ever
In waging the warfare of life,
And God, who knows who are heroes,
Will give you the strength for the strife.
—Phoebe Cary.

NEIGHBOR A. N. Dare, of Elk River, is looming up as a probable candidate for Senator. He will likely get the nomination, and unless some good free silver man gets elected, he will make a good Senator.

New Republican Party.

Certain persons have held a meeting behind closed doors and resolved upon forming a new republican party in New York. The original republican party was not organized behind closed doors. —Omaha Bee.

Neither was the Free Silver branch; it walked right out the door. Perhaps this new concern has profited by that example, and concluded to lock the door.

Postal Savings Banks.

Quite an argument on the question of Postal Savings Banks is being carried on throughout the country. Several countries have established them, and it is claimed that they like them.

It may be that they would be a good thing in this country. If it were possible to keep them free from politics, perhaps they would be an advantage to many. But at present the advocating of them by some parties looks like a scheme to tide the country over a few years of Dingley deficiency, without selling bonds of the U. S. Government, and then have a much stronger case for selling bonds than has yet existed. When all the savings have be been deposited into the Postal Savings banks and the money used to defray running expences and build government buildings in a lot of little towns where there is a hope to get the people to vote right, and the depositors find out there is not enough money in the Government Treasury to pay half the depositors they will begin withdrawing their money as fast as they can get it, and soon a terrible cry will go up for another issue of bonds, to pay the poor depositors in Postal Savings Banks.

Winslow Gets $10,000.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 11.—Lem Winslow, who sued the Maccabees for $25,000 for dislocating one of his kidneys while initiating him into the local order four years ago, was today awarded $10,000 by a jury in Judge Gates' court.

Gets Its Desert.

Hamline University has gained the favor asked for by securing a second recognition on the city hospital staff. As the University has two representatives in the hospital, one on the medical staff and one on the surgical staff, this gives Hamline students the full benefit and advantages of the clinic.—The Interurban.

Having Its Effect.

The failure of the Wolcott commission is having its natural effect. Lionel A. Sheldon of Los Angeles, formerly a Congressman from Ohio, then a governor to New Mexico and lately a delegate to the St. Louis convention which nominated McKinley, has made public declaration of his intention to join the Silver Republicans in opposition to the party at present led. He believes bimetallism offers the only remedy for the hard times, and declares that no tariff bill can be passed which will yield sufficient revenue, and that we ought to have a federal income and inheritance tax. His defection has caused a stir in political circles on the Pacific slope.—Duluth Herald.

Political Prospects.

People are wont to talk of the important questions that have been settled in this country in years past Of how political battles have been fought and won; of how great the statesmen were in days of long ago; of the wonderful speeches that electrified the country from end to end, when it would require weeks and months to get them into the reach of the people who now read the speeches of great men of today in a few minutes after they are delivered.

We are living in an age of progress, We can not only read the speeches of our great men, but we can even have the voice reproduced as the speech is ground out from the phonograph.

Our country to day contains many times as many voters; and many more and more varied interests than did the world at a hundred years ago.

Our boundary lines have been established; the negro slaves of the country have been made free men, and many other important questions have been settled. Settled right, so they will remain settled.

But there are many questions still to be solved. The country never needed brave, honest, intelligent statesmen worse than it does now. The question of money has got to be the most prominent among politicians at present. All are agreed that something is wrong with our money system but all do not make the same diagnosis as to what the trouble is; neither do they agree as to the proper remedy to be prescribed; nor as to the proper time to dose the patient.

The question of whether this government, arrived at its present position among the first of the nations of the earth, needs longer to tax its people to build up a few monopolies, is still with some, a question.

One of the leading questions which at present seems under fair way to be solved without a vote, one Chief of department of the Government Pension Commissioner Evans having issued orders to keep no clerks in his department that use intoxicating liquors, is the liquor traffic, the very worst foe to American civilization and peace today.

Congress, now in session in Washington, although largely Republican, seems to be too much divided itself to do any thing of consequence. Speaker Reed, it is claimed, would like to take his chance now, for being elected President, and will use his power as Speaker to aid Tom Reed's and not President McKinley's chances. If Congress should pass a financial fixer, it is claimed that the Senate surely would not pass it. Then of course the House will get muley, and anything the Senate wants will be held back until the Senate is willing to trade off. Unless trading can be done all around in time to please a majority of both Houses it looks as if the prospects of ameliorating the financial condition or making the Dingley tariff productive of sufficient revenue, or anything else of moment stands a poor show of being done.

J. A. Wharton, editor of the Delano Eagle, was a Litchfield visitor last Saturday. He is a bright young man, and since assuming editorial charge of the Eagle, has made it one of the best weeklies in the state.—Litchfield Review.

Sherburne County Times: Revival meetings began at the M. E. church Sunday evening and will continue to be held each evening, excepting Saturday. Considerable interest is being taken in these meetings and it is hoped that much good may result.

Litchfield Independent: The New York Sun says the way to reform the currency is not to retire the greenbacks but to retire the national bank notes and let the government issue the money. The Sun is eminently correct in this opinion, Republican goldite sheet though it is.

Duluth Herald: "Comrade" Mc Kinley removed "Comrade" Macdonald from the receivership of the St. Cloud land office, at the request of Congressman Morris. The St. Cloud G. A. R. post, composed largely of Republicans, has just elected Comrade Macdonald as its commander. This is a "generous recognition" of army service; the president's was the opposite and contrary to his party platform.

Ohio Postmaster Can't Resign.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Hanna's political methods are shown in the case of E. M. Cox, postmaster at Sheldon, O., who was elected to the Legislature in Ohio last month.

There is a state law which debars any person from holding two offices, and unless Cox can resign his postmastership he cannot qualify as a legislator.

He has been trying to resign since Nov. 1, but has been unable to obtain any attention from the Post-Office Department.

Cox is a Democrat and a strong anti-Hanna man, and his absence from the Legislature would doubtless add considerably to the Senator's chances. —World.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 15, 1897.

Secretary Gage is about the only member of the administration who would really like to see his recommendations for cinching the hold of the single gold standard on this country become laws. Mr. McKinley did not dare to endorse the recommendations of his Secretary of the Treasury, and he has no real desire for the financial legislation he half-heartedly suggested. He knows that his roundabout suggestion of getting rid of the greenbacks by turning them into gold certificates could not get through Congress, even if only the republicans voted upon it. He was afraid that the recommendations for amending the National banking laws, so as to reduce taxation on National bank currency, to allow currency to be issued to the face value of the bonds deposited with the government, and to allow the establishment of National banks with $25,000 capital in small places, might get through, so he added a proviso that he knew would kill the whole, to make all National bank notes redeemable in gold. The administration is simply trying to bluff a portion of its own party and the country. It doesn't want any financial legislation. This has already been made plain in the House by the grab-game engineered by Mr. Dingley by which his committe—Ways and Means—will take charge of all financial bills and smother them. Republicans have also plainly indicated by their talk that they had received intimations from the administration that no financial legislation was wanted. If public criticism of its attitude makes it necessary to strengthen its bluff, the administration will, through Mr. Dingley, fix up a bill and jam it through the House, knowing that the Senate would not act upon it. Of course, the people of this country are fools enough not to know the difference between this sort of thing and real statesmanship, and they will be so sorry that the administration isn't able to get what it doesn't want—so sorry that they'l elect a democratic Congress next year.

The administration doesn't wish the Nicaragua Canal question to be acted upon by this Congress, and when Mr. McKinley said, in his message that he would have something further to say on the subject when he submitted the report of the Comission which has just started for Nicaragua to make a new survey and estimate of cost, under an act of Congress he was fully aware that the commission was not likely to make a report before the death of the Fifty-fifth Congress. In fact, it is known that members of the commission were given a broad hint before their departure that their report was not expected before March 4, 1899.

One Nebraska republican—Mr. Winfield S. Strawn, an Omaha lawyer—has turned up in Washington who is honest enough to publicly say that the republicans have no chance to carry that state, either at the Congressional elections next year or the National election of 1900. Mr. Strawn says the republicans have not been able to get back the farmer votes they lost on the silver question, and that they are not likely to get them back so long as that question is unsettled

With the exception of Senators Morgan, of Ala., and Gorman, of Md., every democratic Senator is now lined up against the annexation of Hawaii, and the opposition among the republicans already includes Senators Hoar, Morrill and Pettigrew. This makes it impossible to procure the two-thirds vote needed to ratify the treaty providing for annexation, and the republicans are already seriously thinking of abandoning the treaty and trying secure annexation by majority legislation. It looks a little as though the annexation question was going to be used by the Reed machine to whack McKinley over the head. The Czar is understood to have privately announced himself to be opposed to annexation. In fact, present indications are that before this session has grown very old the line between McKinley republicans and Reed republicans will be sharply drawn.

If Spain isn't entirely pleased with the situation at the Washington end of the line she must be hard to please. It was a new thing for a president of the United States to devote nearly half of his message to Congress to an argument in favor of allowing a foreign nation more time in which to try to squeeze the life out of a people residing in sight of our coast, and the innovation was nauseous to many. A dose equally nauseous followed, when Secretary Gage presented several columns of solid newspaper matter, giving in detail the extraordinary efforts of this country to aid Spain by suppressing filibustering. Senator Allen offered a resolution in the Senate for the recognition of Cuban independence, but it is feared that the Committe on Foreign Relations, to which it was referred, will pigeon-hole it.

The first skirmish in the war on the civil service law was pulled off in the House this week, and it was lively while it lasted. A conference of all members of the House who desire change in this law is to be held, in order to arrange for an organized attack.

Temperance Ruling.

From the Pioneer Press we clip: Slayton Gazette: H. Clay Evans, United States pension commissioner, has issued an order that henceforth clerks or employes of that department of the government must abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor, not only during office hours, but all the time. If this thing keeps on the fellow who indulges too freely in the flowing bowl will be crowded off the earth. Well, let him go. It is about time the world treated him as a nuisance."

If the Pension Commissioner should take a notion to rule, that no pensioner who spends his money for intoxicating liquors be allowed to draw any further pension, what a falling off in villages revenues from saloon licenses there would be in some places. How can Mr. H. Clay Evans or any other official be responsible for the correct running of his department of the Government while he has a lot of drunken clerks to deal with? This beats civil service all out.

Farmer Writes.

HEADQUARTERS, TOWN OF INDEPENDENCE, Dec. 15th 1897.

Mr. Editor: Lincoln said in his speech at the dedication of a part of the battle field of Gettysburg as a national cemetery, these words:

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Lincoln was a man of brawn and brain; was a man for the occasion and for the position for which he was called to fill. He was like the majestic oak that lifts its head above the surrounding forrest.

But has this country gone into degeneracy is there no more Lincolns nor Jacksons or men of their kind. We are living in a time when we need men with decision of character; men of nerve and back bone. We need men that can do more than to merely go on dress parade with sash and sword or appear in uniform at guard mount. It seems to be the policy of most of our leaing men to gain honor and noteriety by the shortest route. There seems to be a good many ills that afflict our body Politic, and while under the care of skilled physicians the patient seems to be growing worse all the time. A little over a year ago the patient was given a dose of medicine (the single gold standard) which it was thought by many of those belonging to the old school, would give new life and vitality to the patient—and some do say we are on the road to recovery but we can't see as the patient is any better. We had an extra session of Congress that done nothing but tinker with the tariff question, and McKinley says in his last message to Congress, that the tariff is settled. It may be if it gives revenue enough, but as yet we are falling behind. It seems that there is a good deal to look after in this country. From the 13 colonies of only a few settlemegts, we have grown to be a mighty and powerful nation with a population of seventy million and a vast domain extending from ocean to ocean and from the lakes of the North to the Rio Grande, and it is hard to predict what will be the future or the destiny of this country. But we may learn a lesson from the past and also what has been predicted by the prophets of old, that the nations that forget God will come to naught, and it seems that the flood gates of sin have been left open in this country.

College Professors and Bank Corporations seem to know what kind of money this country wants, and if we have it as they say woe be unto the hewers of wood and drawers of water.

I believe the people should have the say as to what our money system should be, and it should not be left to a few corporations. But if we get Cuba annexed, with her and Alaska, we may be able to pull through with the Hawaiian islands and a large navy attached to us.

Not much news this week Mr. Editor, everybody busy getting ready for Christmas.

THE DRUNKARD'S SERMON.

An Unexpected Response to a Request That He Pay For His Drink With a Speech

It was growing late. The tide of humanity that earlier in the evening had ebbed and flowed through the streets of the great city had swept onward, leaving the strange and almost appalling sense of desolation that comes when the noises of the town are hushed. The electric lights flared unnoticed on the corners; the street cars passed at further intervals; now and then a night worker hurried by, his footsteps ringing out loud and clear in the stillness. In front of a saloon whose lights shone out bright and ruddy across the pavement stood a tramp, unshorn, ragged, dirty, disgusting. He watched with envious eyes the men who passed in and out through the swinging doors, and then he turned his eyes toward the two young fellows in evening dress who were coming down the street toward him. They had been drinking deeply, and they stopped before the saloon door and looked curiously at him.

"By joye," said one, "think of having a thirst like that, and not the price of an extinguisher in your pocket! Beats old Tantalus all to pieces, eh! Liquor, liquor, everywhere, and not a drop to drink."

He ran his hand in his pocket and proffered the tramp a dime, but before it could be accepted the other young fellow interposed.

"Say," he said, "let's do the good Samaritan and set Hobo up to a good drink."

The other hilariously consented, and the tramp slouched into the saloon at the heels of the two gilded youths. The barkeeper set before them glasses and liquors, and with a hand that shook the tramp poured out a brimming glass and raised it to his lips.

"Stop," cried one of the young men drunkenly, "make us a speech. It is poor liquor that doesn't unloosen a man's tongue."

The tramp hastily swallowed down the drink and as the rich liquor coursed through his blood he straightened himself and stood before them with a grace and dignity that all his rags and dirt could not obscure.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I look tonight at you and at myself, and it seems to me I look upon the picture of my lost manhood. This bloated face was once as young and handsome as yours. This shambling figure once walked as proudly as yours, a man in a world of men. I, too, once had home, and friends and position. I had a wife as beautiful as an artist's dream, and I dropped the priceless pearl of her honor and respect in the wide cup, and Cleopatra-like, saw it dissolve, and quaffed it down in the brimming draught. I had children as sweet and lovely as the flowers of spring, and I saw them fade and die under the blighting curse of a drunkard father. I had a home where love lit the flame upon the altar and ministered before it, and I put out the holy fire, and darkness and desolation reigned in its stead. I had aspirations and ambitions that soared as high as the morning star, and I broke and bruised their beautiful wings, and, at last strangled them that I might be tortured with their cries no more. Today I am a husband without a wife, a father without a child, a tramp with no home to call his own, a man in whom every good impulse is dead. All, all swallowed up in the maelstrom of drink."

The tramp ceased speaking. The glass fell from his nerveless fingers and shivered into a thousand fragments on the floor. The swinging doors pushed open and shut to again, and when the little group about the bar looked up the tramp was gone.—New Orleans Picayune.

According to the government report, the number of money order offices in the country is 20,000, as against 9,382 reported in 1890, and this does not include the 1,051 limited offices where orders are limited to sums not over five dollars. The amount of orders issued last year was $175,000,000. In this branch of Uncle Sam's business there was a profit last fiscal year of $790,230, which is doing very well. Steps will be taken to greatly increase the number of offices and the business.

It appears that there is not a single state nor territory in the union in which there is not a trial for murder pending. While it is a mooted point whether legal punishment has any deterrent effect upon crime, there is ample evidence of too much professional courtesy at the expense of justice. There is a feeling among the people, however, that in the near future crime must be punished more, and more effective measures for the preservation of society's peace are to be made.

A number of Turks, immigrants who believe in polygamy, were turned back at New York. It appears that the interpreter who put the questions was an Armenian, and he managed to make them testify that they believed in the Koran, which sanctions polygamy, and were therefore polygamists and disqualified for admission here. The young men protested that they were bachelors and had no intention of getting married, but that made no difference. One Armenian seems to have got even at the expense of the "unspeakable Turk."

Every little while reports come from the great oceanic spaces of the orient of elemental disturbance, such as earthquakes, tidal waves and hurricanes, that result in loss of life that make disasters on this continent seem tame in comparison. The latest horror is a typhoon that swept the Philippine islands and left 6,000 dead. Between the Spanish besom and the typhoon's sweep the Philippines are in a lamentable condition. The awful strength of one of these hurricanes in southern seas is quite unimaginable by those who have not had experience of these disturbances.

The board on geographic names in Washington has at last issued a bulletin giving the correct orthography of places in Alaska. The mining region is to be known as the "Klondike," and not as "Clondyke," as it has appeared in some of the official charts. The lake on the Chilkoot Pass to the Upper Yukon is "Lindeman," and not "Lindemann" or "Linderman," and another lake in the same region is "Lebarge," and not "Labarge," as it is usually spelled. Similarly the "Lewis" river should be the "Lewes" river. "Dyea," at the head of the Lynn canal, has been transformed into "Taiya."

That woman in Washington who alleges that her husband hypnotized her so thoroughly that during her entire married life she had bent completely to his will in all respects presents a remarkable exception to the usual course of conjugal life in the United States. In our glorious country woman is so highly regarded that the masculine member of the conjugal partnership is expected to do all that may be considered necessary in the way of will-bending, and as a general thing he makes no kick in the performance of his duty in this respect. That Washington husband cannot be a true blue American.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Proceedings of First Regular Session.

Senator Allen (Neb.) introduced a resolution in the United States senate on the 8th for the recognition of Cuba and made a speech in its favor. The foreign relations committee reported favorably a bill to stop pelagic sealing. Senator Gallinger (N. H.) introduced a bill prohibiting the granting of pensions to widows of soldiers whose marriage occurred subsequent to the passage of the bill under which she makes claim. In the house Mr. Stone (Pa.) reported the pension appropriation bill. The committees on election and on banking and currency were given leave to sit during the sessions of the house.

A petition was presented in the United States senate on the 9th signed by 21,269 native Hawaiians protesting against the annexation of Hawaii, and a favorable report was made on the bill to provide for the twelfth census. Forty-five private pension bills were passed. The house entered upon the consideration of the pension appropriation bill ($141,121,830), and stirred up a debate that promises to continue for several days.

The United States senate was not in session on the 10th, having adjourned to the 13th. In the house the pension appropriation bill was passed and bills were introduced to reduce letter postage to one cent per ounce after July 1, 1898, and to reclassify post office clerks. Civil service reform was discussed, after which an adjournment was taken to the 13th.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Secretary Gage says in a report to the department of state that the United States has stopped 28 filibustering expeditions to Cuba, and he also says that if Spain had done half as well not a cartridge would have reached the island.

The agricultural department in Washington says that the average price received by farmers this year for corn, oats, barley, rye and buckwheat is five per cent. higher than that of last year.

It was ordered by Secretary Alger that the reprimand administered to Capt. Lovering at Fort Sheridan, Ill., be read in every army post in the country.

Native Hawaiians called on Secretary of State Sherman and presented a memorial against annexation.

Supporters of Hawaiian annexation have definitely decided to consider the question in executive session of the senate.

ITS ANNUAL CONVENTION.

National Federation of Labor Delegates Meet in Nashville, Tenn.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 14.—The National Federation of Labor began its annual convention session in this city Monday with an attendance of more than 100 delegates from different states and an equal number of visitors. The federation met in the hall of the house of representatives at the state capitol at one o'clock, President Gompers presiding. President Gompers read his annual address, which was in part as follows:

"With two exceptions, all our affiliated national unions report a large increase of local unions and in membership. There is an increase of about 34,000 members in the organizations affiliated.

"It has been the constant aim to organize our fellow workers engaged in unskilled labor. With the invention of new machinery and the applications of new forces, the division and subdivision of labor, many workers who have been employed at skilled trades find themselves with their occupation gone, to which they have devoted long terms of years to acquire. Thus we see the artisan of yesterday the unskilled laborer of to-day. It is a source of gratification to report that within the past year a very large number of federal labor unions for unskilled workers have been organized and from them a much larger number of trade unions.

"There have been quite a number of strikes within the past year, but the change in the causes which have produced them is worthy of note.

"The strikes of this year with few exceptions have been for higher wages, shorter hours and the extension and recognition of union principles. Our organizations report with gratifying unanimity the very large number of successes achieved, advantages gained and the growth and extension of the power of organization enjoyed.

"The movement to reduce the hours of labor is always one which commands the first attention of organized labor.

"We hold that no condition is satisfactory nor any solution complete which fails to eliminate the curse and the degrading influences of nonemployment, and so long as this evil shall be with us our best efforts will be concentrated to the reduction of the hours of labor of all until the desired end is attained.

"The establishment of a postal savings bank system and also a postal telegraph system, long since demanded by organized labor, seems nearer accomplishment than at any previous time.

"It is submitted whether it would not be wise to modify our position in so far as to interpose no objection to the passage of a law providing for compulsory arbitration in disputes between the organized employes of the railroads and the railroad companies, and the giving of an award by such lawful arbitrators; but we should hesitate to give our indorsement to any legislation, state or national, empowering the compulsory enforcement of an award and the specific enforcement of a contract to labor.

"There should be no equivocation as to our position on any question, much less one of such importance as immigration.

"Recently one of the branches of the federal courts decided by a majority vote that the boycott is illegal. The suggestion is made that upon any letter or circular issued upon a matter of this character, after stating the name of the unfair firm and the grievance complained of, the words: 'We have been enjoined by the courts from boycotting this concern,' could be added with advantage."

After the reading of the address the federation adjourned until 2:15 p. m.

Vice President McGuire presided at the afternoon session, which was well attended. Secretary Morrison presented his report, showing an increase in receipts of $2,349 over the previous year. An extra amount had been expended in organization and 34,280 new members were enrolled. The greatest item of expense was $3,539 for organization, and of this $2,000 had been used in sending organizers among the miners during the great strike. Expenses for the year were $19,113. During the year, the report states, 376 strikes had been officially noticed, involving 165,407 workers. Of these 189 were won, 31 compromised and 33 lost. During the year 217 charters were issued to national, state, central, local and federal labor unions.

Pushing Gen. Gomez.

Havana, via Key West, Fla., Dec. 14.—It is officially announced that the Spanish forces under the command of Gen. Pando, in the province of Puerto Principe, have been pushing the insurgent leader, Gen. Maximo Gomez, so closely that he was obliged, with about 200 men of his escort, to seek refuge in the woods and mountains of Las Delicias. The commissioners sent by Gen. Pando to different parts of the island with instructions to negotiate with the insurgents for their acceptance of the autonomous form of government proposed by Spain, have not returned in a single case, which seems to confirm the reports that some of them have been hanged by the insurgents and others have elected to remain with the enemy. It is reported that Juan del Gado, the insurgent leader, has hanged the two commissioners who were sent to him with peace propositions.

Settlement Effected.

Peking, Dec. 13. — The German-Chinese difficulty is practically settled. The Germans refuse to discuss the occupation of Kiao Chou bay; the governor of Shan-Tung province has been removed from office, but will not be any further degraded; no monopoly of mines and railroads is conceded to Germany, but that country is given preference. Finally the area immediately surrounding Kiao Chou bay is set apart exclusively for Germany. China yields on all other points.

Accidental Death.

London, Dec. 13.—The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of Walter Croot, the English bantam weight, who died on Tuesday morning last from injuries received during the contest for the bantam weight championship with Jimmy Barry, of Chicago, at the National Sporting club on the previous night. According to the medical testimony Croot's skull was fractured at the base, due to a fall after a blow in the twentieth round.

Won't Wear Prison-Made Uniforms.

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 14.—Orders were recently issued that the entire national guard of New York should be supplied with uniforms made in the state prison. The members of the Thirty-sixth separate company have announced that they will never consent to wear prison-made uniforms. They say they will disband rather than wear prison-made uniforms. It is probable that the matter will be settled by the men paying for their own uniforms.

Iron Mine Closed.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 10.—A special to the Journal from Ely, Minn., says: The Pioneer iron mine closed down Thursday morning, throwing some 250 men out of employment. The close marks a crisis in the difficulties of the fee and lease holders of the mine over a proposition to sell to the Carnegie Steel company's interests.

LABOR TROUBLES IN ENGLAND.

Engineers Refuse to Accept Employers' Terms.

London, Dec. 14.—The ballot taken by the unions of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers is almost unanimous against accepting the proposals of the employers. The ballot grew out of the formal conference between the representatives of the striking engineers and their employers, which began on November 24 last, and after several sessions was adjourned on December 3 until December 14, in order to allow the delegates of the engineers to submit to the various unions the terms of the masters.

The employers, through their representatives at the conference, have declined to recede from their position respecting freedom in the management of their business, without the interference of the unions, and emphatically pronounce against a reduction in the hours of labor, on the ground that such a diminution would mean a smaller output and inability to meet foreign competitors. The strike began on July 13, last, with a lockout upon the part of some of the engineers, followed by the engineers calling out a large number of men, until about a hundred thousand engineers were thrown out of work. The ostensible reason for the strike was the question of payment for overtime, and incidentally for eight hours' work per day. The engineers have insisted upon eight hours' work and that all overtime must count as one and a quarter time for the first two hours and as time and a half after that.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

Mississippi Farmer Finds His Wife and Children Slain.

Wesson, Miss., Dec. 10.—One of the most atrocious murders on record in the south was committed Wednesday night in Simpson county, this state, 20 miles from here. Brown Smith, a farmer and a son of ex-Representative Edward Smith, left his family at his home in the country to go to town for shopping purposes, thinking of no possible danger for them. Thursday morning when he returned he found his wife and five children weltering in their blood and apparently all dead. An alarm was raised immediately and the entire neighborhood turned out to hunt for the perpetrator of the foul and bloody crime. There being no telegraph connections details of the murder come in slowly, but it is reported that one of the little girls, supposed to have been dead, has revived enough to tell what she knew of the occurrence. She says she knows the man who committed the deed, that it was a negro, and described him. It is learned that Mrs. Smith and the other four children are dead.

Wesson, Miss., Dec. 11. — Charles Lewis, a negro accused of killing the wife and four children of Brown Smith, was captured by a posse, carried back to the scene of his crime, where he was fully identified by the surviving girl, and was put on trial by Justice T. D. Holmes. He gave testimony implicating two other negroes, Will Powell and Andy Smith, who are now in custody.

Miller Rides in First.

New York, Dec. 13.—Charles W. Miller, of Chicago, is the new champion of the bicycle track—the world's champion six-day racer. So he was acclaimed Saturday night when he finished the great race many miles ahead of the world's record made by "Teddy" Hale, of Ireland, in 1896. After the end of the racing, in the presence of the management, the track was surveyed and found to be 564 feet 3 inches in circuit, measured 18 inches from the pole, according to the racing rules. These figures, multiplied by nine, the number of laps said to have made a mile, showed a total of 5,078 feet 3 inches. Accordingly the track turns out to have been short 201 feet 9 inches in every mile, and it is estimated on this basis that Miller's record of 2,093 miles really represents nearly 80 miles less. This would bring his figures down to about 2,013 miles, over 100 more than the record made by Hale in the garden last December.

Weyler Is for War.

Madrid, Dec. 13.—Gen. Weyler said Saturday at Barcelona that, considering Spain's military and naval strength and the courage of her soldiers, she had nothing to fear from a war with the United States. Gen. Weyler continued:

"If such a war becomes necessary, I will consider it my greatest military glory to take command of a military expedition against the United States. I approve the language of the papers hostile to McKinley's message, but I think that even they are too cold in their censures. Never have such insults as those of McKinley against the representative of an army of a friendly nation remained unpunished."

Gen. Welyer said that in defense of his campaign and honor of the army in Cuba he would ask the government to publish the diplomatic notes exchanged with the United States, chiefly one sent by Premier Canovas on the 4th of August, this year.

Bryan in Mexico.

City of Mexico, Dec. 14.—Mr. Bryan and party arrived here over the Mexican National railway from Toluca at 8:30 Monday night and a great crowd of Americans and Mexicans were awaiting the arrival of the distinguished political leader. Col. Garcia, of President Diaz' staff, in full uniform greeted and welcomed Mr. Bryan in the name of the chief magistrate and escorted him to the president's private carriage. Enthusiasm was great among the many Americans present and cheers and tigers for Bryan rent the air and loud calls were made for a speech. But he refused to talk and again he was cheered.

Held Up the Entire Village.

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 14.—The little town of Argusville, ten miles from Fargo, was the scene of a desperate robbery Monday night. Three masked men walked into the town armed to the teeth, and ordered the merchants and business men to stand in line. Then one man went through nearly every store in the town, securing money and valuables amounting to $1,000. None of the desperadoes were captured.

To Promote Bimetallism.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—Herr Wilhelm Von Kardorff, president of the Bimetallic League of Germany, presided Monday at the meeting of the league at which it was resolved to take steps to promote the objects of the league in other countries. Herr Von Kardorff, in the reichstag, has expressed his great regret at England's rejection of the proposal of the Wolcott monetary commission.

MOTHER M'KINLEY DEAD.

President Was at Her Bedside When She Passed Away.

Canton, O., Dec. 13.—Nancy Allison McKinley, the aged mother of President McKinley, passed away at 2:08 o'clock Sunday morning. The nation's chief executive, the son whom she had lived to see in the white house, was at her bedside for hours before the end came. The mother passed away with her hand in his, but the end was marked by the unconsciousness that denotes paralysis from acute old age. The death scene was a touching and impressive one. The members of the McKinley family, including children, grandchildren and other relatives, were grouped about the bedside, and as the hours of the night wore on it was realized that the sufferer could not live until daylight. President McKinley was a constant attendant at his mother's side, and vainly tried to secure some signs of recognition.

Mrs. McKinley came of a family which was transplanted from England to the hills of Virginia. The Allison family subsequently removed to Green county, Pa., where Abner Allison, Nancy's father, was born, and where he married Ann Campbell, of Scotch-German descent. Early in the present century Mr. and Mrs. Allison came from Pennsylvania to Columbiana county, this state, traveling by pack horses. In 1809, near the present city of Lisbon, Nancy Allison was born. Her girlhood was passed on the farm, and in 1827 she married William McKinley, a young iron manufacturer. The couple first lived at Fairfield, and afterward at Niles and Poland before removing to Canton. Nine children were born to them. They were: David Allison, deceased; Anna, deceased; James, deceased; Mary, deceased; Helen Minerva, now living at Canton; Sara Elizabeth, now the wife of A. J. Duncan, of Cleveland; William, the president; Abigail Celia, deceased, and Abner, whose home is in New York. William McKinley, Sr., died in November, 1892, at the age of 85 years. When President McKinley entered congress over 20 years ago he was from his mother much of the time until he retired from congress to make the canvass for governor in 1891. During his service from 1892 to 1896 as governor, he went to Canton frequently to visit his mother, and he was with her from January, 1896, until he went to Washington last March. Previous to entering public life the president was always located near his parents and spent much time with them.

Native Hawaiians Protest.

Washington, Dec. 10. — Senator Hoar on Thursday presented a monster protest in the senate from native Hawaiians against the annexation of the Hawaiian islands to the United States. The protest filled several hundred pages of foolscap paper, and was forwarded by Enoch Johnson and Lilia K. Aholo, secretaries respectively of the Hawaiian Patriotic league and the Hawaiian Woman's Patriotic league, who made certificate that the signatures were all genuine. Of the 21,269 signers 10,300 were women, and 160 were foreigners. The petition was printed in both the English and Hawaiian languages, and was very brief, merely "protesting against annexation to the United States in any shape or form." The presentation of the petition was witnessed by the native Hawaiians comprising the delegation now here to oppose annexation, who made their first visit to the capitol on Thursday. They told those with whom they conversed that their people were unalterably opposed to annexation.

Special Message Coming.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Officers of the Chicago Business league have received word from Washington that President McKinley will make the proposed department of commerce and industries the subject of a special message to congress. Immediately after the holidays a delegation of local citizens interested in the new cabinet department will go to the capital to have the bill introduced in congress. Senator Frye (rep., Me.), who is chairman of the subcommittee and introduced the bill in the senate, has had a conference with the president. The result of the interview was all that the most sanguine champions of the new department could hope for. It is understood among the members of the league that the topic of the new department was not referred to in President McKinley's message to congress because it was regarded of sufficient importance to warrant a special message during the present session.

They Will Pool Interests.

New York, Dec. 11.—The representatives of the steel and wire nail manufacturing firms of the United States, who have for months been negotiating to form a steel wire and nail pool, are nearing a conclusion of their work. It is said that about 20 of the largest steel wire and nail manufacturers will enter the pool and the capital involved will exceed $60,000,000. The legal formalities for forming the pool will probably not be completed until after the holidays. Already many of the small wire and nail concerns throughout the country have been bought out and negotiations are pending for the purchase of others. According to Judge Gary, of Chicago, G. H. Tenbrouck and others interested, the combine will not result in raising the prices to the purchasers of wire and nails, but will enable the manufacturers to operate the plants upon a more economical basis.

The Strikers Win.

Streator, Ill., Dec. 11.—The miners' strike in this vicinity came to an end Friday afternoon when A. L. Sweet, general manager of the Chicago, Wilmington and Vermillion Coal company, agreed to pay the price demanded by the men, which is 64 cents a ton for gross weight mining. The Star Coal company officials met State Secretary Ryan and a committee of the miners and agreed to pay the price demanded. The miners refused Mr. Sweet's proposition to go back to 42 cents a ton, and he finally yielded to their demands. This practically settles the strike in all northern Illinois, and will put 2,000 men at work at once. The men have been standing out for gross weight, positively refusing to accept any price over screens, and are elated over their victory.

Farmers Get Higher Prices.

Washington, Dec. 11.—The agricultural department has issued the following, signed by John Hyde:

"The department's final estimates of the production of the principal crops are based largely on the December returns. The only information now available relates to the average farm price of certain products on the first day of the present month. The farm price of corn, as indicated, averages 25.5 cents per bushel, against 21.5 cents last year; that of oats, 21.5 cents, against 18.7 cents last year; that of barley, 37.7 cents, against 32.3 cents last year; that of rye, 44.7 cents, against 40.9 cents last year; that of buckwheat, 42.1 cents, against 39.2 cents last year; that of hay, $6.65 per ton, against $6.55 last year. The averages for the products not given are withheld for revision as are also the estimates of the acreage of winter wheat and rye and the condition of these products."

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE AL

A COLD REALITY.

He stood and gazed with wondering eye,
A fabled world it seemed,
Where hill and plain and sea and sky
In radiant splendor beamed.
The mountains flashed their yellow rays,
The rivers glittering rolled,
Before him stretched Alaska's ways,
And all was shining gold.

The gold fish swam the rippling rills
That drained the glistening sod,
The goldfinch fluttered over the hills
Where bloomed the golden-rod.
Each man and maid had golden hair,
Each horse a golden load,
And golden sunshine filled the air
And gold dust heaped the road.

He gazed upon the treasures vast,
Then delved and dug in glee,
And ere one fleeting hour had passed
A millionaire was he.
But while he strove a change had come,
The breeze blew fierce and bold,
His limbs grew stiff, his fingers numb,
Ye gods! 'twas piercing cold.

His form was ice, he fought for life,
When lo, he heard a shout—
"Wake up, you donkey!" shrieked his wife,
"The furnace fire is out!"
Brought back to earth, he sadly rose,
A millionaire no more,
And coal dust filled his eyes and nose
As gold dust had before.

THE CAPTAIN'S STORY.

AN INCIDENT OF THE INDIAN MUTINY.

BY EFFIE H. BRADDOCK.

"SEE here, young man, I think it's about time you were awake and getting up out of that!" Late the evening before I had arrived in Mubarakpore, travel-worn and weary, and this was my host's morning salutation. With the delicious consciousness that there was not a word of truth in the speech, I turned lazily over to look at the clock and at the speaker. The clock said half-past eight, and I didn't care if it did. The speaker, in cool, white morning suit, lounged carelessly in at the open door, followed by a silent-footed, white-turbaned khidmatgar (table servant) bringing on a tray a generous chhoti hazri (little breakfast). As I discussed the tea and toast, listening the while to Capt. Harris' cheery talk, my eyes wandered once and again to the Indian curios, in the way of arms and shields, adorning the wall. Among them was a peculiar object which had arrested my attention as I had glanced at the clock. In a pause in the conversation I said:

"And what heathen weapon is that, captain? I have not met anything like it before in all India."

"No, that you haven't; and the fellows who used to have it played on them thought the same," said the captain, with a chuckle.

The article in question was a heavy oaken cudgel of about a yard in length, thinner in the middle, and thickening, hour-glass-wise, toward either end.

Said the captain:

"Sure, mon, don't you know a rale Oirish shillalah when ye say it? Ha, if you had seen it worked by the Irishman who used to own it, you would never forget the sight. It belonged to Capt. Halkett, of our regiment. He used it in the days of the mutiny. He was a splendid soldier, brave and tender—God bless him. Every man in the regiment loved him. Many's the time I've seen him take the gun and do sentry-go for some poor fellow worn out with marching and loss of sleep. He'd divide his last crust with any of the men, and often I've watched him plodding along carrying the colors for some poor little officer knocked up by the march. A great, big, handsome fellow he was. I never knew him to draw his sword on a native. Whenever it came to close quarters he used to return his sword to its scabbard, and, taking his shillalah, go to work with it.

"The time I saw it most effectively brought into action was before Lucknow. We were sent there from Cawnpore to relieve the people shut up in the residency. We were having to fight for every inch of advance we made. We went down past the Martiniere school, through Selimpore; we had taken Banks' bungalow and had got possession of 'D' bungalow. From its shape we called 'D' bungalow the Star Chamber. It was right under the walls. From that point of vantage we hoped soon to get into the city. Just in front of 'D' bungalow was the hospital. It was in the hands of the mutineers, and they kept up such a telling fire from its shelter that we had to go and take it. The roof of the hospital was of thatch, and not long after we had taken it the shells of the rebels set it afire and we had to fight our way back to 'D' bungalow.

"When at last we got through and were resting, some one exclaimed: 'Look!' they've got a European over there!' Sure enough, we could see a sergeant, like a stag in the midst of a pack of hounds, fighting pluckily, but evidently wounded and with strength failing.

"Quick as a flash Halkett clubbed that shillalah of his and plunged into the melee, sending the natives tumbling like ninepins. He mowed a literal swath through to the man, laid hold on him and came bringing him out. The sergeant's strength was evidently almost spent; he seemed hardly able to stand. Halkett, supporting and half carrying him with one arm, was fighting with the other. The mutineers saw his disadvantage, and, though afraid of his shillalah, were closing in and harassing him.

"Among those who were standing, anxiously watching, was our drummer boy, Georgie Munner, a jolly little chap, a favorite with everybody. 'He'll never get through alone!' said Georgie, and, dropping his drum, he darted, unarmed, into the thick of it, making straight for the captain.

"Slipping through, dodging around, clambering over, he at last reached the two men. 'Get him on your back, can't you, captain? I'll carry his legs for you—and his gun?' suggested Georgie. 'Good plan!' remarked Halkett, as cool as though it had been on parade. In a minute we saw them coming, wheelbarrow style, fighting their way through, and in a minute more they were safe.

"Well, it happened that Col. Crawford saw the occurrence, and he reported it, recommending the two men as 'worthy of good reward.' After some delay, the Victoria cross was sent out for Capt. Halkett; but there was no mention of Georgie. One morning we had orders to parade for the purpose of presenting the cross to Capt. Halkett. Not a man of the regiment but was glad to see him get it; but in every heart there was a feeling of regret that our brave little drummer had been left out. There seemed no help for it, however. As strong a representation as possible had been sent home, but it had been ignored by 'the powers that be.' The Victoria cross is held to be a gift of free grace, and no man may dictate to whom it must be given.

"The men came out that morning, spick and span, willing to lend all possible glory to the occasion. The commander in chief was himself present to bestow the honor. The troops having been formed into a hollow square, his excellency said: 'Capt. Halkett, H. M. Twenty-third Royal Welch Fusiliers, stand forth.' Capt. Halkett, paler than usual, but every inch the soldier, stepped forward and saluted. His excellency continued: 'Her majesty, the queen, has been graciously pleased, in consideration of your gallant and humane behavior on the 18th of November, 1857, to confer upon you the honor, to a soldier, the highest in the gift of the British nation—the Victoria cross. I have exceeding pleasure in performing this, my grateful duty.' As the commander in chief advanced to pin the cross upon the breast of the man whom the queen had delighted to honor, with a gesture of dissent the soldier raised his hand. Respectfully and with evident emotion he said: 'Your excellency, I am most grateful for what you have been pleased to say; but I cannot wear that decoration until I have seen it given to my companion in danger, the lad who as truly earned it as did I—the lad who, for my sake, risked his life.'

"The silence which ensued was such as might be felt. Every soldier knew that only a man who had earned the cross would have dared thus, by technical insubordination and disrespect to the queen, to render himself, in the cause of justice, liable to court-martial.

"The commander in chief remained a moment in meditation, then, raising his head, he said to his aid de camp: 'The parade is dismissed.' That officer, saluting, proceeded to the discharge of his duty.

"After that the air seemed charged with electricity. Everybody was wondering whether the captain would have to suffer, or whether public opinion would prevail. Not many days later we were again paraded for the ceremony of presenting the cross; but it was to no purpose—the captain was firm.

"Then followed a lot of correspondence and official interposition, when, at length, a cross was sent out for Georgie.

"When, for the third time, we were paraded, excitement was thrilling in each man's veins.

"The troops were again drawn up in order when the commander in chief said: 'Capt. Halkett, H. M., Twenty-third Royal Welch Fusiliers and Drummer George Munner, H. M., Twenty-third Royal Welch Fusiliers; stand forth.' In the order addressed the men advanced and saluted. The intimation as before delivered followed. 'Her majesty, the queen, has been graciously pleased, in consideration of your gallant and humane behavior on the 18th of November, 1857, to bestow upon you the Victoria cross, the decoration dearest to the heart of the British soldier—that which stands for manly courage, knightly chivalry and Christ-like self-forgetfulness.' His excellency proceeded to present the medals in the order of the rank of the recipient. As he approached Halkett to pin the cross upon his breast, the captain said: 'Your excellency, I have declared that I shall never accept that honor until I have seen it upon the breast of the lad who was willing to die for me.' The commander in chief seemed not ill pleased and pinned on Georgie's first."

"I suppose there was some cheering then," said I.

"My dear boy," composedly replied the captain, "the British soldier cheers when he is ordered to cheer. But, my dear fellow, you have forgotten your tea. It is quite cold. Let me get you some fresh."

"Pray, don't trouble," I rejoined. "You see an American may pay tribute to British chivalry without having been commanded."—N. Y. Independent.

Clam Chowder.

Twenty-five clams chopped fine, six potatoes chopped fine, two onions chopped fine and a piece of salt pork, also chopped, and butter about the size of an egg; salt and pepper to taste; the clam juice and one pint of milk and the same of water; six crackers rolled and one nutmeg grated. Boil these slowly for at least four hours, adding water if it becomes too thick. Half an hour before serving add a coffee cupful of tomato catchup and two tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce. When ready for the table add a tumblerful of sherry, and serve with a lemon cut in slices.—Good Housekeeping.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

About Wheat.

State Grain Inspector Clausen estimates that 67,000,000 bushels is the amount of the spring wheat crop of 1897 that has already been marketed. There are, according to Mr. Clausen, 9,000,000 bushels in country elevators. For bread and country milling, 25,000,000 bushels of the remainder of the estimated crop of 140,000,000 bushels will have to be set aside; 17,000,000 bushels will have to go for seeding, leaving the farmers 22,000,000 bushels to sell. At Duluth, the receipts have averaged up 60 per cent No. 1 northern and No. 1 hard; at Minneapolis, there has been only 25 or 30 per cent of the higher. The Duluth receipts have been duplicated a little by about 2,000,000 bushels of wheat that were shipped to Duluth from Minneapolis, and there has been a similar but lesser duplication between Duluth and Chicago. The inspector says that southern Minnesota and South Dakota farmers ought not to seed from their own this year's crop. Southern parts of the state and South Dakota should go to Iowa and Nebraska for good seed, and the central regions to North Dakota and northern Minnesota. The acreage in need of new seed is not less than 5,000,000 acres.

A Bold Robbery.

Three men robbed the grocery store of Holt Bros., in Minneapolis, securing a large sum. When the first robber, with his face completely covered by a handkerchief and revolver in hand, stepped into the store between 6 and 7 o'clock, George Holt, who was alone in the building, thought it was a huge joke. He did not raise his hands, but stood and laughed. When he saw two others follow in, and the command to "hold up" was repeated, he complied with haste. The robbers then searched him, taking from his pockets a gold watch. In the cash drawer they found $300 in bills, which the grocers had not placed in the bank. After helping themselves, they ran off in the dark and no trace of them was secured.

The State Begins Suit.

The state has began suit at Duluth under the act of the last legislature to set aside the entire grant of swamp lands to the Duluth & Iron Range road, comprising over two million acres. It is claimed by the state that the original grant was for a road that was never built, and that the amendments by the legislature are void because they contained more then one subject not named in the title. While the legislature was discussing the matter last winter the road transferred all the land to W. F. Cott in trust, and it is claimed that this is illegal and the court is asked to set it aside.

Good Roads.

If the plans of the newly elected officers of the League of American Wheelmen are carried out, Minnesota will have some improved highways.

A committee of five is to be appointed to study up the needs of the state in the matter of roadways, and generally to agitate the improving of roads in the columns of the state papers. Another committee will be appointed to take up the matter with the law making power, and every effort will be made to impress the legislators with importance of good roads to farmers as well as cyclists.

Brainerd Leads.

The completion of the statistics of the northern part of the state by the state labor bureau show that Brainerd is the largest manufacturing point outside the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. There are 1,104 operatives at Brainerd. At St. Cloud there are 457 operatives; Crookston, 304; Little Falls, 184; Fergus Falls, 161; Barnesville, 117; and Alexandria, 94. The other towns of northern Minnesota range down in considerably lower numbers.

A Peculiar Case.

A very peculiar wreck happened at Morris on the Great Northern. A heavy-loaded freight train started out but broke in two; the first car of the rear part toppled over on its side and was pushed for fifty yards in this position, tearing the car to pieces and scattering its load of wheat all along the track. When the engineer discovered that the train was broken he put on the air and telescoped the cars in front in the front part of the broken train.

Pleads Guilty.

Leigh Hough, the self-confessed 19 year old murderer of Joseph M. Clark, was indicted for murder in the first degree and pleaded not guilty, but later charged his plea to guilty in the third degree. The plea being unsatisfactory to the court at Owatonna, it was changed to guilty of murder in the second degree. This plea was accepted by the court.

News in Brief.

John Moshik was found guilty of the murder of John C. Lempke, in Minneapolis, Oct. 22d last. He was sentenced to death.

Mrs. Sophie Weber, the divorced wife of former Register of Deeds of Ramsey County, Henry Weber, ended her life by hanging herself with a clothes line to the banister at the home of her sister at St. Paul.

J. A. Willard as president and C. K. Willard as secretary of the Mankato Knitting mills, made an assignment. Liabilities are estimated at $85,000; not yet known.

The Minneapolis Dairy Board of Trade at its weekly sale sold 139 tubs of butter, aggregating 8,340 pounds, and 160 boxes of cheese, or 9,600 pounds. The price received for butter was 21¾ cents, for cheese 8¾ cent a pound.

An excellent map of Polk county has been made by Miss Susie Low, and is said to be more accurate than any heretofore published. The map will probably be lithographed.

The woman whose body was found on the dreary slope of Hog Back pass, near Lamberton Lake, was murdered. So the coroner's jury which held an inquest over the remains decided.

The roller mills at Atwater were destroyed by fire.

John Hans is fined fifty dollars for allowing gambling in his place in Moorhead.

The entire system of the Twin City Rapid Transit company will probably be operated with electricity from the new dam below St. Anthony Falls before the expiration of the year. The laying of all the conducting cables has practically been finished, and as soon as the power machinery is in shape the river will begin to run the street cars.

Ole S. Bjornsted, an employe of the Crown Roller Mills at Minneapolis, dropped dead while eating his supper.

THE PETERHOF PALACE.

Beautiful Bedroom of the First Grand Duchess, Olga.

One must not think of Christopher Sly in speculating on M. Faure's dreams at Peterhof. He slept there in a bed arranged for the first Grand Duchess Olga Nicholaievna. She was the youngest and handsomest of the three beautiful daughters of Nicholas I. He and his wife were fondly attached to Peterhof. The farm now tenanted by the emperor and empress was the only estate they had in Russia before they came to the throne. The ground was given to Nicholas by Alexander I. to create a homestead for himself and his young wife. They were satisfied with quite a small cottage with two rooms on each side of the hall, a kitchen, a greenhouse, and four bedrooms upstairs. The servants lived in an outhouse communicating by a passage with the cottage. Nicholas and Alexandra had no idea when the house was finished of ever reigning. When they came to the throne they remained at the cottage, but added to it a large dining-room and a few more bedrooms. It has now a reserved garden, a kitchen garden, poultry yard, aviary, and many hothouses. The view on the Baltic, with the rocky uplands of Finland in the distance, is very fine. The emperor leaned on his sword when presenting the grand dukes and their attendants to M. Faure. He was satisfied to wear a naval captain's uniform.

But the bed and bedroom at Peterhof. They were used by the Austrian and German emperors, and belong to a suite of 20 rooms, which a grand staircase connects with the ground floor. Versailles was the model on which Peterhof was built. The bed is like that of Louis XIV. in having a canopy, but is curtained in soft, thick creme silk. Opposite the foot is a mirror framed with Sevres porcelain flowers. The grand duchess, sitting up in this bed, could see herself in it. Lying down she could also contemplate her beautiful person, for the alcove ceiling is faced with mirrors, also set in garlands. Olga, in her visit to Russia as princess or queen of Wurtemburg, dwelt in this suite of rooms. Their arrangement shows that they were meant for a beautiful woman, and that her father intended they should be a suitable sanctuary for her loveliness. Her wedding dress was preserved there until the death of Empress Alexandra (Charlotte of Prussia), in 1860, when it was taken to Stuttgart, where it was at Olga's death. The great ones of the earth have a passion for relics. Impressions slip from their minds, because there is no daily strain on all their faculties, as water flows.—Paris Cor. London Truth.

Changes Under the Ocean.

Many of the violent changes which occur under the surface of the sea, as Prof. John Milne has recently shown, produce effects that are distinctly and sometimes disastrously felt on land. Wherever a profound cavity exists in the bed of the ocean near the land, and wherever the border of a continent slopes off into a deep sea, great slides are apt to occur, and these often cause earthquakes. In Japan, Mr. Milne says, a large number of earthquakes came from the deep sea off the mouth of the Tenegawa, the largest of the Japanese rivers. The river brings down alluvial detritus which is deposited on the brink of a deep hollow in the ocean, and from time to time the accumulated deposit slides into the depths, shaking not only the sea-bottom, but the adjacent land.—Youth's Companion.

How He Reasoned.

"You are not putting on two undershirts on such a warm morning as this, are you?" said the Allegheny young man to his roommate the other morning.

"Yes."

"That's a very curious performance."

"Not at all. You see that this is a very thin one, don't you?"

"Yes."

"And it will keep me cool?"

"Yes."

"The other is a thin one, too."

"Well?"

"Well, if one will keep me cool, two will keep me twice as cool, won't they? Where is your arithmetical ability?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

"Infantry Blue."

Col. R——, the well-known army officer stationed near New York, being in need of some "infantry-blue" ribbon, from which to suspend one of his decorations, asked his wife to purchase some.

On her next shopping expedition Mrs. R—— asked the pretty young woman who presides over the counter of one of the largest stores for it.

"Infantry blue," said the young woman thoughtfully—"oh, yes, we have it. It's at the other end of the counter. Forward, show the lady some baby-blue ribbon."—Judge.

YOU CAN'T STOP 'EM.

News comes from Attica, Ind., of the destruction, by fire, of the big laboratory and office building of the Sterling Remedy Company, makers of Cascarets Candy Cathartic and No-To-Bac, the original guaranteed tobacco habit cure. The fire broke out in one of the packing rooms on the third floor during the noon hour, and had made considerable headway before it was discovered.

As soon as it became apparent that the fire department would have difficulty in combating the flames, the work of saving the thousands of valuable documents, contracts, files, millions of booklets and tons of advertising matter was begun with the utmost energy. The Sterling Remedy Company is the principal industry of the beautiful little city of Attica, employing several hundred people, besides being affiliated with the Indiana Mineral Springs, the famous Magno-Mud Cure. Hundreds of men, women and children vied with each other in carrying the contents of the burning building to places of safety.

Meanwhile the proverbial energy and and presence-of-mind of General Manager Kramer, of the Sterling Remedy Company, was displayed. He quietly walked away, and secured a big show room near by, and had all the office furniture, charred and dilapidated as it was, taken there. Before the boxes had ceased burning, in which the fire originated, orders were being dictated in the make-shift office for new supplies, and car loads of material were ordered by wire while the streams were still playing on the ruins. Several shipments were made the same evening from goods saved, and on Friday morning, all departments were at work in various rooms about town, while a gang of men were cleaning away the wreckage preliminary to rebuilding.

MRS. LYNESS ESCAPES

The Hospital and a Fearful Operation.

Hospitals in great cities are sad places to visit. Three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls.

Why should this be the case?

Because they have neglected themselves! Women as a rule attach too little importance to first symptoms of a certain kind. If they have toothache, they will try to save the tooth, though many leave even this too late. They comfort themselves with the thought that they can replace their teeth; but they cannot replace their internal organs!

Every one of those patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warnings in the form of bearing-down feelings, pain at the right or the left of the womb, nervous dyspepsia, pain in the small of the back, the "blues," or some other unnatural symptom, but they did not heed them.

Don't drag along at home or in the shop until you are finally obliged to go to the hospital and submit to horrible examinations and operations! Build up the female organs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will save you from the hospital. It will put new life into you.

The following letter shows how Mrs. Lyness escaped the hospital and a fearful operation. Her experience should encourage other women to follow her example. She says to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I thank you very much for what you have done for me, for I had given up in despair. Last February, I had a miscarriage caused by overwork. It affected my heart, caused me to have sinking spells three to four a day, lasting sometimes half a day. I could not be left alone. I flowed constantly. The doctor called twice a day for a week, and once a day for four weeks, then three or four times a week for four months. Finally he said I would have to undergo an operation. Then I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after one week I began to recover and steadily improved until I was cured completely. By taking the Pinkham medicine, I avoided an operation which the doctor said I would certainly have to undergo. I am gaining every day and will cheerfully tell anyone what you have done for me."—MRS. THOS. LYNESS, 10 Frederick St., Rochester, N. Y.

How to Wash with Ease.

Washing cannot be well done with a scant supply of hard water and inferior soap. To skillfully perform this necessary work, assort the clothes, put the linens first in a tub nearly full of hot water, soap with Ivory soap. When clean scald, rinse, starch and hang on the line. When dry, sprinkle, fold and lay in a basket over night. Iron carefully with well-heated irons. ELIZA R. PARKER.

That's the number of the Michigan Central North Shore Limited Train, leaving Chicago 2.00 p. m. and arriving New York 3.00 p. m. next day (24 hours) and Boston 5.20 p. m. (26 hours 20 minutes). If you want comfort on your journey east take this train. Because of the convenient hour of leaving, the business man is enabled to be at his office here in the morning and arrive at New York and Boston during business hours the next day. To ladies traveling alone is this train particularly recommended. Leaving as it does at mid-day, connections are made at junction points and New York for the New England States in ample time for one to reach her destination by daylight. The Last Man on Earth

To recklessly experiment upon himself with hope of relief is the dyspeptic. Yet the nostrums for this malady are as the sands of the sea, and, presumably, about as efficacious. Indigestion, that obstinate malady, even if of long perpetuity, is eventually overcome with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an appetizing tonic and alterative, which cures constipation, fever and ague, bilious remittent, rheumatism, kidney complaint and feebleness.

CAUSE FOR ALARM.

How baldness begins.

How to prevent it.

Every person, male or female, shrinks from baldness. It adds to the appearance of age and is a serious discomfort. The cases are rare when the falling out of the hair may not be stopped, and a new and healthy growth of the hair promoted. The hair grows in the scalp like a plant in the soil. If a plant flourishes, it must have constant attention; it must be watered regularly and find its food in the soil where it is rooted. It's so with the hair. Neglect is usually the beginning of baldness. Dandruff is allowed to thicken on the scalp. The hair begins to loosen. The scalp loses its vitality. The hair, insufficiently nourished, begins to fade and to fall. The instant need in such a case is some practical preparation which, supplying the needed nourishment to the scalp, will feed the hair, give it strength, and so produce a strong and healthy growth. All this is done by Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor, the most practical and valuable preparation for the hair that can be obtained. It tones up the scalp, does away with dandruff, stops the hair from falling, restores the original color to gray or faded hair, and gives an abundant and glossy growth. Those who are threatened with approaching baldness will be interested in the following voluntary statement, made by Alderman S. J. Green, of Spencer, Iowa. He writes:

"About four months ago, my hair commenced falling out so rapidly that I became alarmed, and being recommended Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor by a druggist, I resolved to try this preparation. I have been now using it for three months, and am much gratified to find that my hair has ceased falling out and also that hair which had been turning gray for the past five years has been restored to its original color, dark brown. It gives me much pleasure to recommend this dressing."—S. J. GREEN, Alderman, Spencer, Iowa.

Those who are interested in preserving and beautifying the hair will do well to send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook. A story of cures told by the cured. This book of 100 pages is sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, DEC. 17, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Liveryman Jones, we understand, intends building a new barn on River street, before long.

—Joe Pietrek's house, in Woodland near Johnn Plattner's, burned to the ground one day this week.

—Mr. McArthur, of Minneapolis, has been assisting Mr. Smith this week at the old John Coolen lumber yard.

—A small spot of clear ice between the bridges on the river, furnished a skating park for the young folks several nights this week.

—Bishop Gilbert is to hold Episcopal services at the Presbyterian church to night, Friday Dec. 17, at 8 o'clock. The Bishop is an eloquent preacher.

—Wednesday evening the fire bell called out a crowd to stand in the cold and watch the chimney on the residence of N. K. Coffin burn out. Got off lucky.

—We have been having a second class imitation of a first class cold snap on the Klondike. It went hard on the wood piles and nasal extremeties of some of out citizens.

—The Post Office now has a new storm shed inside the building where it is out of the street. The P. M. says it is more for comfort than ornament. We believe he is correct.

—The sociable at William Hawker's last Friday evening was well attended and an enjoyable time had. Quite a sum was raised toward getting and furnishing a Christmas tree for the M. E. S. S.

—The Delano Cornet Band has lost its leader and several good members. There is plenty of material left boys. All you want is a magnet of sufficient power to overcome the resistance of several negative poles.

—Yesterday morning about 9 o'clock old Sol with a huge sun dog on either side could be seen for a short time in the South East. He didn't warm things up much all day, and at night the mercury ran down to 8 or 10 below zero again.

—Rev. McCornack, of Howard Lake, had a fair sized audience, for a week day evening, at the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. Hear him. He will furnish you with food for thought until he comes again. He is a good preacher.

—The High School Literary Society will hold a public meeting in the City Hall, next Wednesday evening. Dialogues, recitations and other exercises will be furnished by the scholars. Lets all attend and see how they manage their literary meeting.

—At last week's regular meeting of M. W. of A. the following officers were elected: V. C., A. L. Mealey; W. A., J. S. Cooper; Clerk, George Horsch; Banker, Henry Schwerin; Escort, Charles Kaemmer; Watch, Henry Hillman; Sentry, John Leudasher; Manager, Edwin Kelsey; Examining Physicians, Dr. T. J. Catlin and Dr. J. S. Shrader.

—Excursion rates to the Twin Cities took several of our citizens down to spend their money. These kind of doings may help out the city merchants but it is death to the country dealer. If it is kept up our country dealers will learn to buy in cities further east, and will be able to sell at lower rates, and can better compete with city stores and then things will change. In the end it may result in waking up our merchants to buy to better advantage and enable them to satisfy their customers better. Deal at home when you can as well as not. But merchants will have to do like their customers, deal where they can do best.

—Rev. J. L. Farber preached an interesting sermon Sunday evening. He shook up the oil in the lamps a little. (Those who heard him will understand this.) He evidently don't think the poor sinners entitled to all the advice. The church was not so full of people as it might have been. There was present 19 men and a larger number of women and children. The choir, Dr. and Mrs. Soper, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Buckley, Mrs. J. L. Farber, Miss Jesse Gray and Professor Hawker, furnish good music; especially when the congregation assists them. The church is nicely lighted by electricity; a load of wood has been secured, and a gentleman present last Sunday evening volunteered to pay for putting in one of the broken window lights, and it is hoped to have the last rag out of the window by next Sunday. God's House should not be deserted nor neglected. Come out Sunday evening and do your duty. Help fill up the pews, and by your presence encourage others, and stimulate the pastor to labor still more earnestly in the Master's cause. Our town needs more Christianity. You know it. Attend church, and lend your influence, and set an example to which you will not be ashamed to have your children or your grand children or any one else refer; and the thoughts of which will not rise ghostlike before your eyes when the summons has been served on you to appear before the Judge of the quick and the dead.

The above refers to the Delano M. E. church, to which ye editor belongs; but we are liberal enough to allow others, if they feel disposed, to act on this good advice. If you can't come to church, go to church.

—The elevator of Hon. Peter Barrett, of Hutchinson is said to have burned the other day.

—John Brandser requests people to come and see his new stock of cloth for suits and overcoatings. His brother Louey lately returned from New York, is cutter. A fit guaranteed.

—Forty dollars was paid quietly, for a first class milk cow, last Fair Day. Fat cattle were also in demand, and a good many were sold. Horses are being held at higher figures; a number of people want horses but dislike to pay advanced prices; consequently few sold.

Personal.

Mrs. Everson and mother, Mrs. Utter are visiting in Minneapolis.

James Sherry has moved into the old Cramer residence on River street.

Will Stacy, Z. Stephens and Joe Streeter, of Montrose, visited the fair.

J. J. McDonald has gone to Nova Scotia for a winter's visit with friends.

Leonard Belder is clerking for Frank Cramer, in the City Meat Market.

Editor Wharton visited Buffalo to attend Commissioners meeting, etc. this week.

L. W. Everson has gone to Hawarden, Iowa, to work at printing and to toot in the band. Success Louey.

Adolph Mohl and two sons, of Rockford, attended Delano Fair, Saturday. Mr. H. sold a cow for forty dollars.

Curtis Graft, of Hamline, and his Uncle Philip Ludwig, a Hoosier farmer, visited old Delano friends on Monday.

Miss Mable Hobart, recently of New York State, is duly installed as housekeeper for her Foster father, C. W. Kerrick.

Cal Steward and family accompanied by his son-in-law Teesman and family left Monday for their new home in Oregon.

Fred Farber, who has been farming, out on the prairie, has taken to the timber for winter, and is once more under the parental roof.

Mr. Drew, of Minneapolis, Tony Riser, of Long Lake, and Al Hitsman, of Independence, bought their shares of the cattle sold here Fair Day.

Among Tuesday morning's visitors to Minneapolis was Miss Mary Catlin, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Bowen, Charles Brunkow and Leonard Dedrick and Wash Boler.

Martin Bland and Hollis Baker, of Marysville, were GAZETTE callers Saturday. Mr. Baker was prepairing to go with Cal Stewart's car to Oregon. He has lived there before.

County Cullings.

Editor Wharton makes sport of Editor French's illustrations in last week's Times, and then he tries to ring the GAZETTE into the same boat. Mr. French's picture of Sheriff Nugent might furnish cause for a libel suit. But then! really don't Bro. W. think the GAZETTE'S last cut was right to the point, even if it was home made? And then after admitting all he says about the Time's and GAZETTE'S pictures, for the sake of argument, don't the majority of the readers think they are equally as instructive as some the Eagle publishes?

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased a most merciful and allwise God, the author, creator and preserver of our being, our common Father, to remove from our midst the beloved wife and companion of our dear brother C. W. Kerrick, now, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That Delano Lodge No. 178, Knights of Pythias, tender to Brother Kerrick and his bereaved family, its most sincere sympathy and condolence. Recognizing the supreme wisdom and love of our heavenly Commander, we do point our bereaved brother to Him for comfort and solace.

RESOLVED FURTHER, that a copy of these resolutions be handed to our bereaved brother, and that they be spread upon the minutes of this lodge; and that a copy be furnished each of the local papers for publication.

Late Literary News.

What would you do if war should be declared to-morrow with a European power? How would it change your home life, the lives of your brother and other relatives? How would it affect your business connections and business? What changes would it make in financial, city, state and national affairs? It is thesa interesting problems which a writer in the December Cosmopolitan has undertaken to sketch under the heading of "A Brief History of Our Late War With Spain," at the same time vividly describing the exciting scenes which would attend the opening of hostilities. This same number of the Cosmopolitan has an article on "The Well Dressed Woman" by Elsie de Wolfe, a contrast of the characters of Henry George and Charles A. Dana by John Brisben Walker, in another place "The Loves of Goethe," while Wells' story, "The War of the Worlds," which has been so widely read, reaches its conclusion in an unexpected way.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz. 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1.30 for the two papers.

Sealed Bids, Wood.

Sealed Bids for wood, for the Village of Delano, to be delivered at the power House, will be received as follows:

For 200 cords of 4 foot Dry Basswood, or wood equally as good, to be delivered at once.

For 250 cords 4 foot Green Basswood, or wood equally as good, to be delivered before the snow goes off in the spring.

Bids will be received for any amount from 5 cords to the full number of cords wanted.

Leave bids with the Village Recorder, on or before Monday, the 20th day of December, at which time they will be opened.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

L. M. MAXFIELD,
Village Recorder.

DELANO, Dec. 3, 1897. 3t.

"What to Eat" for December.

"How to Live a Hundred Years" forms the title of a short but interesting article in the December number of What To Eat.

What Shakespeare has to say about kissing for dyspepsia is told by Ira Gale-Tompkins in a capital way, while James Courtney Challis supplements the article by a very funny poem entitled "The Bridger Curv," all fittingly illustrated.

The cover is beautiful, and the centerpage is a patriotic gem that all old soldiers and their friends should see and preserve.

WHAT TO EAT offers $10 to the person filling out the following blank lines so as to make the best four lines of poetry, and $1 each to the ten next best. The only conditions are that you fill out the lines and send ten cents for sample copy of magazine.

I saw a man come down the street,
And he was full of——
The day was bright, the air was sweet,
And——

Other words may be used in the second and fourth lines if preferred.

CHRISTMAS MORNING.

The bells ring clear as bugle-note,
Sweet song is thrilling every throat,
'Tis welcome Christmas morning!
O, never yet was morn so fair,
Such silent music in the air,
'Tis merry Christmas morning!
Dear day of all days in the year,
Dear day of song, good will and cheer,
'Tis golden Christmas morning!
The hope, the faith, the love that is,
The peace, the holy promises,
'Tis glorious Christmas morning!
—Joaquin Miller.

Merry, Merry, Christmas!

Once again the great holiday of the Christian world has rolled around. The birthday of Christ the Saviour is here. Christmas eve tonight will be ushered in with merry making. Children will receive numerous gifts, and presents from friends. Beautiful Christmas trees will be erected and filled with presents and ornaments in thousands of homes; and in churches, hospitals, orphan and other asylums. Many little hearts will be made glad, as they are brought to remember their kind friends.

Tomorrow in the early morning, church bells and chimes will be heard in the crisp, frosty air ringing out the joyful tidings, "Christmas is here." Christ the Saviour was born nearly nineteen hundred years ago. His birthday will probably be observed by more people this year than ever before. His cause is spreading. His followers are becoming more and more numerous. Even though not embracing his love, as invited to do, many acknowledge his power, and respect the anniversary of his birth.

While making merry and having a good time let us not forget the sacrifice made by Christ that we might have eternal life.

THE Christmas number of the Winona Daily Herald with a full description of its new home and much other interesting matter reached us Tuesday. It is nicely gotten up and shows enterprise in Winona and in the Herald office.

WHEN we read of the deep snows in Nebraska and Kansas, and the Klondike cold in other places, we are thankful that our lot is cast in a land of light snows and moderate weather. This winter, so far, has been fine for Minnesota.

THE criminal libel suit of the Minneapolis Trust Co. against W. E. Haskell, editor of the Minneapolis Times is now on. Judge Elliot has ordered that the newspapers make no comment during the trial. As the jury is supposed to refrain from talking or reading on the subject how could comments in the papers affect the outcome?

THE general impression seems to be that the republicans are using the same tactics they used last year to kill off John Lind, by announcing that he will not be a candidate for Governor. Of course he will not be a candidate unless the people want him. If they do they will doubtless nominate him and elect him, and of course he will serve them when he is elected.

OUR cousin James K. Keithley, Editor of the Weeping Water (Nebraska) Republican, has our thanks for a late copy of the Omaha Bee, with a fine birdseye view of the Trans-Mississipi and International Exposition as it is to appear from June to November, 1898. The Exposition looks nice on paper; of course the real object will surpass the picture very much.

THE rank and file of the G. O. P. can't well help itself, just at present, but must quietly watch the powers that be, playing by appointment, one after another, the gold democrats in good paying offices. But when it comes to nominating a man for Congress, it is hardly a supposable case, that the would be Congressmen of that party will so quietly sit by and allow the prince of gold bug democratic speakers, J. Adam Bede, to be nominated for that high place. J. Adam will surely have to rustle to secure that nomination and, even if he should be nominated the chances are against him in the next campaign.

AT a meeting of the free silver forces recently held at Minneapolis, it is announced to the public, John Lind declared his intentions not to run for Governor next fall. This is not what the people expected: neither is it what they deserved. A noble effort was made to seat Mr. Lind in the Governor's chair; the combination against him was too strong to be overcome. He was abused by newspapers and others. He has succeeded in clearing himself from the smoke of battle, and as a veteran warrior would be the proper person to lead the people on to victory. It is hoped that Mr. Lind will again hearken to the voice of the people, and allow his name to lead the ticket, and with his earnest efforts for reform assist in gaining the victory over monopoly and corruption.

"Is A Swede!"

Senator John Peterson, of St. Peter, has been selected for collector of customs by our Senators, and nobody, aside from those who wanted the office, appears particularly disgruntled. Senator Peterson is a Swede.—Elk River Star News.

As Mr. Peterson has been serving as State Senator from Nicollet county, we supposed he had become a citizen of this country.

Wright County Politics.

Wright county has a superabundance of republican newspapers. There are so many of them that some of them are likely to turn cannibal and devour each other. There is an unusual number of republican aspirants for office, and every one that can seems to be securing an organ to cry up his chances and cry down the other fellows. There seems to be an unusual number of kinds of republicans; but they seem to agree heartily on one point and that is that all the offices belong to the republicans and that each wants his share. From reading those papers one would naturally infer if he didn't know any better, that about all the people of consequence in Wright county, and that would at all do to hold an office, big or little, was a republican, and that most of the elect lived at Buffalo or did business there. They teem with the good qualifications of Judge Tarbox, County Attorney Pidgeon, Judge Alley, and a few others, some of whom they apparently think need lots of bolstering up. There are a few republican politicians who have got the Rank paper again in the field. It promises soon to be on solid footing, and then just look out. Then the Advocate is whooping it for state officers, never mind the small fry. The Enterprise, Herald, Eagle and Times and Standard are more or less in with the powers that be, while Eaton is keeping the free silver republicans tickled with A. Y. all he can. When the time comes, of course they will be a unit for the party, and the party ticket.

The Maple Lake Messenger is hoeing its own row in good shape. The Waverly Tribune occasionally fires a broadside into the camp that makes them squirm, while the BUFFALO GAZETTE is fighting a good square fight for what is right and best for the people. What is best for the people is best for the party. The majority should rule and not a few wily old politicians run the whole concern, parties, people and all.

The voters should turn out to every primary election and send only honest, reliable men as delegates, in any party, to pass resolutions and to nominate officers. That's the way to get good officers.

Of course if you read only Republican papers you will read mostly good of republicans, and bad, or nothing at all of democrats in the county.

But there are democrats, good men, full of life and eager to serve their country or county in the capacity of officials, would like the honor and the pay for serving their fellow men. At present there may be some difference of opinion concerning the money system, but not more so than among republicans. There are rising young democrats in Wright county who are entitled and deserving of a place in the councils of their party, and whose voices should be heard at conventions, and who should help to form resolutions embodying the sentiments of their party in their own county and forward them to state conventions to aid in making state sentiment, and who should not sit with their lights under a bushel, waiting for the State Convention to be manipulated by a few "practical politicians" into the enemies hands, year after year. Wake up! young democrats. To the front! Be men, and take part in your country's councils! Don't wait at home until your ticket is made and your resolutions are drawn; which you feel were so arranged as to turn you over to the other fellows in the easiest possible manner. The time is ripe for action. Be out at your spring town elections and take a hand in affairs.

We might name a few democrats in some parts of the county who would doubtless accept and fill with honor any office the people might see fit to elect them to. But look about you and fix upon your choice for candidates for every place. Don't tie yourself up to anybody too soon. There is no telling just yet what the issue may be, and it is best to be guarded, and on your guard for all emergencies. A few we think of at present are W. S. Huntington, A. P. Ritchie, Joe Rosseau, of Annandale; James Madigan, T. O'Connor, M. D., Maple Lake, S. J. Mealey, J. L. Harwick, Monticello; C. Bugbee and John Sleight, of Rockford; W. J. Walsch and J. F. McDonnell, of Waverly. And there are others equally as good. These are not out scratching like an old hen in a potato patch for an office, but would probably accept if asked to do so. All may not be in harmony with the democratic party, but are good men.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec 17, 1897.

That the democratic party fights best and wins oftenest when it is aggressive is well known. Therefore the action of the democratic caucus of the House in running up the party flag with declarations, writ so large that even he who runs may read, against the retirement of the greenbacks, either directly or indirectly; against any extension of privileges enjoyed by National banks, and for the recognition of the belligerency of Cuba, and the enactment of a just and wise bankruptcy law, was wise as well as good politics. It shows the country that if the republicans in Congress were afraid to announce a policy for the session in advance of the Christmas recess, which extends from tomorrow until Jan. 5th, the democrats were not.

It has been often denied on the floors of Congress that the logical outcome of the present civil service law would be a civil pension list, under the alias of a "roll of honor", to which all Treasury Department employes more than 70 years old are to be transferred for life, at a uniform annual salary of $900 each-that is, they are to be, unless Congress upsets this programme, which it is more than likely to do. Nothing has occurred since the civil service act was placed upon the statute books that will do more to open the eyes of the people to the correctness of the position of those democrats who favor the repeal of that law. The country is today staggering under the burden of its military pension list, and will not carry a civil pension list.

Those snide patent attorneys, said to be quite numerous, who make a practice of getting the cash of inventors under the pretence of procuring and selling foreign patents on their inventions, knowing that no foreign patent that is worth the paper upon which it is written can be gotten for them, and that no sale can be made, are in a bad way. Acting Commissioner of Patents Greeley, who earned his spurs by his conduct of the investigation that resulted in reforming a number of glaring abuses in Patent Office practice, is on their trail, and determined to break up such criminal methods, and his determination, ability and honesty are all of the A. 1. brand.

An attempt is to be made to have the House and Senate Indian committees agree on legislation for Indian Territory, but inasmuch as the Senate committee has already agreed to a bill for apportionment of the lands of the five civilized tribes, it looks as though that means merely an attempt to get the House Committee to accept the bill of the Senate Committee, which is supported by the Dawes Commission and opposed by the Indians.

Although the National Board of Trade, which held its annual session in Washington this week, changed the time for holding its annual meetings from January or February to December for the avowed purpose of influencing Congress, its members must be fully convinced of the impossibility of getting the gold legislation they, in common with Secretary Gage and his side partners of the "monetary conference," are trying to secure from the present Congress.

This has been a red-letter week, indeed, in the career of Senator Daniel, of Va., who has been chosen to succeed the late Senator Harris, of Tenn., as a member of the Senate committee on Finance, and unanimously re-elected to the Senate by the Va legislature. Two such honors seldom come to any man in a single week, and it is not surprising that Senator Daniel should be overwhelmed with congratulations on his good fortune.

The republicans of the House should be held responsible for their failure to save the $1,000,000 or $1,500,000 a year which Representative Bingham asserted could in the opinion of himself and his colleagues on the Appropriation committee be saved by the reduction of extravagant salaries paid to clerks in the departments. If that committee has such an opinion, it failed to perform its duty when it repeated the Legislative, Executive and Judicial appropriation bill, now before the House, without providing for those reductions.

There are reasons for believing that there are a sufficient number of republican Senators who will refuse to reverse their previous votes against the right of a governor to appoint a Senator after a legislature has failed to elect when it had an opportunity, to make it certain that Mr. Corbett will not be given that Oregon vacancy, even if a majority of the committee on Elections and Privileges reports in his favor, as it probably will.

Mr. Richard Croker, the widely known Tammany democrat, was a guest of Senator Murphy this week. He said that he only ran over to Washington for a rest and a change, but there was probably considerable New York politics in the long talks he had with Senator Murphy.

National University.

MAPLE PLAIN, Minn., Dec 21, 1897.

MR. EDITOR: I see by some of the leading papers that there will be a bill presented before the present Congress, for the building of a National University.

It is claimed that George Washington in his last will and testament left $25,000 for that purpose with interest compounded. Now we all believe George Washington was a great and good man but was of aristocratic blood and if this National University is built it will be an aristocratic concern and will only be intended for high bloods, for sons of Presidents, Congressmen, Navy officers, and sons of millionairs, etc., and will help to bring around or establish an aristocracy in this country. Education is a fine thing to have, but a young man with nothing but a diploma showing him to be a graduate of some institution of learning is in poor plight to meet a cold selfish world without some practical knowledge, push and energy. I would think it better if Congress would be more interested in helping the young men of this country to get land, then they would help build up the country, pay taxes, make improvements and pay the freight at the end of the line. But an establishment of this kind spoken of would be very expensive to the government; would take large appropriations every year to keep it running, and of no benefit to only a few, and but little if any to them. In the first place the Government would start out with great expense for a building of this kind. Marble would be bought in Georgia. Cedar and fir trees would be brought from Lebanon; and Hiram, his sons and grandsons would be employed as architects, and the material would be prepared so as the building would go up without the sound of a hammer.

If the government would begin to show signs of economy, the people might follow in the wake, but so long as extravagance is at the head it will follow along the whole line, and I as one do not think we are in need of an institution of this kind. It will take lots of money to pay the freight on such a building; and besides, the game will not be worth the amunition.

Two thirds of our college graduates now are nothing but house plants; they wilt at the first rays of the morning sun. The common school is a good place to lay a foundation for future usefulness, and if necessary you can go higher but we need no National university to make the trip.

"THE HOUSEKEEPER." Celebrates Its Twenty-first Year and Makes a Very Liberal Offer.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to this admirable woman's magazine, recent issues of which have been more than ordinarily attractive. It has just entered upon its twenty-first year, and the publishers are celebrating the event by offering to send the magazine for six months on trial to new subscribers, and with it a beautiful pin set with a ruby stone encircled by six small pearls, both for only 30 cents. Any one not satisfied with their bargain can have their money returned. This is certainly a remarkable offer and will doubtless attract thousands of new subscribers.

The Housekeeper is a delightful home companion, abounding in bright things. No other "domestic" magazine is so prolific of practical suggestions along the lines of home and social endeavor. To the prudent and economical housewife it is invaluable, because its helpful hints and easily understood directions enable her to make the most of the means at her command. No one can read it without becoming familiar with the science of household financiering in all its branches. It discusses both the ideal and practical sides of home life in the most entertaining and instructive way. Its department devoted to marketing and cooking is especially valuable. The departments of Fashions, Fancy Work, Home Talks, Music and Art, Mothers' Council, Etiquette and Toilet, Home Entertainments, Floriculture, News and Comment, Our Young Folks, Queries and Replies, etc., etc., each presents unrivaled features.

The Housekeeper is published twice a month, and comprises twenty to twenty-four pages, 11x16. It is handsomely illustrated and printed. Size, character and frequency of issue considered, it is the lowest priced woman's magazine in the world. More than 115,000 women take it. The Housekeeper is published at 51 and 53 South Fourth Street, Minneapolis, Minn. 13.

Late Literary News.

What would you do if war should be declared to-morrow with a European power? How would it change your home life, the lives of your brother and other relatives? How would it affect your business connections and business? What changes would it make in financial, city, state and national affairs? It is these interesting problems which a writer in the December Cosmopolitan has undertaken to sketch under the heading of "A Brief History of Our Late War With Spain," at the same time vividly describing the exciting scenes which would attend the opening of hostilities. This same number of the Cosmopolitan has an article on "The Well Dressed Woman" by Elsie de Wolfe, a contrast of the characters of Henry George and Charles A. Dana by John Brisben Walker, in another place "The Loves of Goethe," while Wells' story, "The War of the Worlds," which has been so widely read, reaches its conclusion in an unexpected way.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1 30 for the two papers

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

In a comment upon this statement the American Machinist makes the remark that a promising field is open to the man who can invent a safety appliance for elevators that will unfailingly perform its work.

There are indications of a general outbreak of religious fanaticism in central and western Asia. Mohammedanism has taken fresh courage from the persistency of the crescent in Constantinople. But with European civilization closing in on the east coast of Asia as well as on the southern and western bounds, the submission of those who worship toward Mecca is inevitable.

Secretary Gage's figures on what the revenue cutters have done to prevent filibustering make an imposing total. Eight of the ships, with crews of 317 men, have cruised over 75,000 miles to look out for expeditions, nine of which they captured or broke up. It is also pointed out that our measures to arrest such blockade running have been more effective than the Spanish naval cordon to stop it.

The death of the mother of President McKinley touched the chord of sympathy in all hearts. The relations between mother and son were ideal. Three of our postwar presidents, Grant, Garfield and McKinley, all born in Ohio, had the supreme satisfaction of attaining to the highest position within the gift of the people while their mothers were alive and able to keenly appreciate the honor thus bestowed.

The past year was one of great financial depression, and yet the statistics show that the total contributions of Congregational churches last year for home expenses and benevolent purposes were $9,000,584, which was $14.63 per member. The total contributions of the Presbyterian church were $13,298,151, almost $13 per member. In addition to that church people were not behind in contributing to all other benevolences. It is well to note such facts. As a rule the church people are not the rich people.

The official report in regard to national banks shows that they have had to bear their full share of the burden of hard times. Seventy-one went into voluntary liquidation and 38 failed and were placed in the hands of receivers. The number of new banks organized was 44, making a net decrease of 65. The present number of banks is 3,610, with an aggregate capital of $631,488,095. The state banks of the country are still more numerous, and have nearly as large aggregate capital. It is estimated that 30 per cent. of the banking capital of the whole world is in the United States.

There will be interest in the announcement that the plan for a union or federation of Central American republics, which was interrupted some months since, will be carried to completion. The states taking part in the union are Nicaragua, Salvador and Honduras, the republics of Guatemala and Costa Rica still holding aloof from the arrangement. The union will amount to a practical consolidation under one national administration instead of a mere alliance of independent republics, as has been supposed, although each will retain control of its internal affairs as in the past.

The orders to the gunboat Helena, which has started on a cruise to the Asiatic station, direct her after passing the Suez canal and the Red sea to cruise far up the river Euphrates and explore the Persian gulf. The object is to show the American flag where it has not been seen for many a year. It is a very proper object and should result in considerable good. There are some benighted Asiatics who are not aware that the United States is a great power, capable of protecting its citizens abroad. Uncle Sam is not going into the bullying business, but merely desires to convey a gentle hint.

THE PARTITION OF CHINA

Ancient Empire of the East Is Thought to Be Near Its Fall.

Russia Follows Example of Germany—England and France Watch the Situation—May Involve the United States.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 20.—It is announced that a Russian squadron under Rear Admiral Reounow has entered Port Arthur, on the Chinese coast, with the entire acquiescence of the Chinese government. The squadron intends to remain at Port Arthur throughout the winter. This is due solely to the need of a temporary winter station and involves no question of forcible occupation or hostile demonstration, or any intention against China, Germany, Japan or any other power.

China Approves.

London, Dec. 20.—The correspondent of the Times at Peking says: China approves of the Russian fleet wintering at Port Arthur, being persuaded that this action is taken in the interest of China and necessitated by the German occupation of Kiao-Chou.

Reply to Germany's Action.

Telegrams from all the continental capitals show that Russia's step at Port Arthur is regarded as tantamount to a permanent occupation and a reply to Germany's action. A well-informed St. Petersburg correspondent says there was no agreement between Russia and Germany and that the latter simply warned Russia when the occupation of Kiao-Chou was already decided upon.

The Paris papers, without pretending to be deceived by Russia's innocent explanations, are pleased with the actions of the ally of France. The burden of Viennese comment is: What will England do? The British fleet now in Chinese waters consists of one ironclad, nine cruisers and 18 smaller men-of-war.

England to Take a Hand.

London, Dec. 21.—An unconfirmed report is current here that part of the British eastern squadron will be stationed at Wei-Hai-Wei this winter. If true, this indicates that Great Britain is working in harmony with Japan. The latter power still occupies Wei-Hai-Wei, pending payment of the Chinese war indemnity.

The evening newspapers are much disturbed over the situation. "What do we get?" is the burden of their complaint, and they all insist upon the necessity for immediate action.

The Pall Mall Gazette echoes the Standard's inquiry as to America's attitude, and says:

"Of course the partition of the coast, which is bound to come, will not be confined to Russia and Germany. Every naval state in the world is actively concerned in the disturbance of the equilibrium in the far east, Great Britain, France and Japan especially. But the United States cannot be taken as a quantity to be ignored. The tame acquiescence with which the seizures are made is not worthy our report and is fatal to our future. We may remark that we shall not be without sympathizers, as the Japanese will most joyfully back any scheme to redress the bitter humiliation they have suffered at the hands of Russia."

France Will Follow Suit.

Advices received here from Paris show that France is awaiting Great Britain's action. If Great Britain follows the lead of Russia and Germany and occupies a seaport France will forthwith follow suit.

The Cologne Gazette regards the occupation as merely a continuance of the cooperation of Germany with Russia in eastern Asia.

The officers of the Chinese embassy here do not conceal the belief that the powers intend to seize Chinese ports. They discredit the report that Great Britain has been requested to assume a protectorate over the Yan Tse valley and the West river.

Cause of Russia's Grab.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Minister Wu Ting Fang, the diplomatic representative of China in this country, expressed the belief that the reported occupancy of Port Arthur by a Russian squadron would prove to be but a temporary convenience to the czar's fleet granted by the Peking government.

The minister also stated that it was his opinion that the Germans would eventually withdraw from Kiao-Chou. So far as known in Washington, there is no intention on the part of the Chinese government to seek the exercise of the good offices of this government with a view to securing the withdrawal of Germany. Minister Wu is extremely anxious that American interests shall be extended in China.

An Assured Fact.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 20.—S. S. Marvin, president of the United States Bakery company, returned from New York Sunday and announced that the consolidation of the three great cracker companies of the United States is now an assured fact. The deal has been practically consummated, and only details of organization remain to be settled. The capitalization of the big combine, he says, will be $55,000,000, and it will be in operation January 1, 1898. The three companies entering the trust are the New York Biscuit company, the American Baking company and the United States Bakery company. Mr. Marvin says the great and primary object of the combine is to invade foreign markets and open up an outlet for the overproduction of bakeries in this country. Another object is to establish a cooperative company, one in which the employes can have an opportunity to own stock, by investing their savings in that way instead of depositing in banks.

Ghouls Indicted.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—The grand jury voted to indict Prof. William Smith, of Kirksville, Mo., for robbery of the Dunning morgue October 24 last. With him it was voted to hold Henry Ullrich, watchman, and John Ludes, teamster. The charge upon which the indictments were voted was burglary, and not body stealing. Under the laws of Illinois a human body has no value unless it is in the grave. Theft of bodies outside of graves is not larceny, but the ghouls who visited the Dunning morgue broke open the door and took away with them the shrouds in which the bodies were wrapped. This constitutes the crime of burglary.

Signed by the President.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The president Saturday afternoon signed the joint resolution passed by congress for the relief of the miners in the Yukon river country and changing the appropriation for the government building and display at the Omaha (Neb.) exposition.

CIVIL SERVICE LEAGUE.

Carl Schurz Reelected President—The Resolutions Adopted.

Cincinnati, Dec. 18.—The National Civil Service Reform league reelected Carl Schurz president by acclamation.

The report of the treasurer, A. S. Frisnell, of New York, showed: Receipts, $4,254.95; disbursements, $3,878.82; balance on hand, $376.13.

The report of the committee on resolutions, which reported through its chairman, Charles J. Bonaparte, of Baltimore, was adopted as follows:

(1) The National Civil Service Reform league, assembled in this, its seventeenth annual meeting, reminds the country of the specific and emphatic pledges of the last republican national convention thoroughly and honestly to enforce the present federal civil service law, and to extend its operation wherever practicable. The league confidently expects from the president and demands from every republican senator and representative a faithful fulfillment of this distinct and solemn pledge.

(2) The league denounces any attempt on the part of republican members of either house of congress to repeal the law or embarrass its administration, or any modification of its provisions, except to the end that the merit system of selection for public officers and employes may be extended and personal or partisan favoritism in their choice more thoroughly eradicated, and declares such attempts not only unpatriotic and unwise, but gross and shameful breaches of party faith of which no man of honor would be guilty.

(3) The league recognizes in the order of President McKinley, forbidding removals in the classified service unless for good cause and after due notice to the person accused, a wise and just measure, fully indorsed by an enlightened public opinion, and it demands for this order a fair construction and a practical enforcement, with adequate punishment for any officials who may disobey or seek to evade its provisions.

The report then proceeds to urge upon President McKinley the necessity of remaining firm against the enemies of civil service, demands that the employes of the census bureau be selected by the civil service test and renews its declarations in favor of the repeal of the law prescribing four-year terms for many federal offices and disclaims any advocacy of civil service pensions.

M'KENNA IS NAMED.

Appointed to Fill Vacancy on the Supreme Bench.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The president Thursday sent the following nominations to the senate:

Justice—Joseph McKenna, of California, to be associate justice of the supreme court of the United States.

Treasury—Charles G. Dawes, of Illinois, to be comptroller of the currency.

The president also sent in a large number of appointments which were made during the recess of the senate and which have heretofore been announced. The nomination of Attorney-General McKenna to succeed Justice Field on the supreme bench will not be acted upon by the senate until after the Christmas holidays.

HON JOSEPH M'KENNA.

A BAD FIRE.

Destroys Property Worth Over $400,000 in Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, N. D., Dec. 18.—The Hotel Dacotah, the largest and finest in the state, and the two largest wholesale grocery establishments in the northwest were destroyed by fire early Friday morning, and the charred bodies of at least two human beings lie in the ruins. The three buildings together with a fourth, which remains standing, occupied a full block in the center of the business district and were well built and substantial.

The flames spread so rapidly that nothing of value was taken from any of the buildings. In the hotel everything was a total loss. The cost of the building was $108,000, exclusive of the furnishings, which were valued at $50,000. The insurance was $60,000. The wholesale cigar stock of W. W. Fegan & Co., valued at $7,500, was a total loss. The other losses are: Grand Forks Mercantile company, stock and fixtures, $95,000, building, $40,000, insurance, $65,000; Nash wholesale commission stock, $75,000, building, $40,000, insurance, $60,000; I. H. Bergh, drug stock, $5,000; Jerry Daily, bar fixtures, $3,500; Fabel & Co., bowling alley and gymnasium, $3,500.

Wage Scale Adjusted.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 20.—After many hitches the complete wage scale of the window glass workers has been settled, and the factories will resume operations. The cutters and flatteners were granted advances of 15 and 13 per cent. respectively over last year's wages. The blowers and gatherers reached their settlement early this month and have been waiting for the other branches to settle the scale. The starting of the window glass factories in January will give work to 10,000 men scattered over eastern and central states.

Working Time Reduced.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Dec. 20.—Notices have been posted in the Union Pacific shops at Cheyenne and Laramie reducing the time of the men employed from five to four days a week and from eight hours to seven hours per day, taking effect immediately. In addition the employes are given a lay off of ten days during the holidays. This is equal to a reduction of 30 per cent. in wages. The reduction is said to be caused by a falling off of business on the Union Pacific equal to 40 per cent. of the business done during the summer months.

McCoy Is Champion.

New York, Dec. 18.—Norman Selby, of Rush county, Ind., better known in pugilistic circles as "Kid" McCoy, is undoubtedly the middle-weight champion pugilist of the world. He met Dan Creedon, of New Zealand, Friday night in the arena of the Puritan Athletic club at Long Island City, and after fighting 15 lively rounds made the foreigner throw up the sponge and acknowledge the "Hoosier's" superiority.

WELCOMES THE NEGRO.

American Federation Invites All Labor Regardless of Color.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 17.—The American Federation of Labor met Thursday in adjourned session. One of the most important reports of the session was that of the special committee on convict labor. It was the sense of the committee that the employment of convict labor should be primarily for self-support and at the furthest for the making of goods which should be used in state institutions.

The negro question occupied the major portion of the session, and a heated discussion was brought on by a resolution introduced by Henry Lloyd reaffirming the declaration of the federation that all labor, without regard to color, is welcome to its ranks—denouncing as untrue, in fact, the reported statements of Booker T. Washington—that the trades unions were placing obstacles in the way of the material advancement of the negro, and appealing to the records of the federation conventions as complete answers to such false assertions. This resolution caused much spirited discussion, but was finally adopted.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 20.—In the convention of the American Federation of Labor Saturday Samuel Gompers was reelected president by a vote of 1,845 to 407 for Ernest Kreft, of Philadelphia. The next session is to be held in Kansas City, Mo. The committee on president's report recommended that the president issue an appeal to the unions of the country for contributions to a fund for the aid of the striking engineers of England. It was advised that the federation appropriate $500 for this purpose. Concerning restriction of immigration the committee recommended that the convention pronounce in favor of a reasonable measure of restriction on the lines of the educational test as contained in the Lodge bill, that failed of enactment at the last session of congress.

GETS HIS REWARD.

Maceo's Betrayer Appointed to a Good Position.

Havana, Dec. 21.—Dr. Zertucha, who was the physician of the late Gen. Antonio Maceo and who betrayed him, has been appointed mayor of Bejucal, this province. At the time the famous Cuban commander was killed Zertucha was charged with leading him and his party into a fatal ambush, but he issued a long statement in which he tried to show that Maceo met his death in battle in the usual way. Zertucha also bitterly assailed the honor of the other Cuban leaders. After the killing of Maceo the dishonored physician was allowed to go free by the Spanish, and it was said and generally believed that his pockets were well lined with Spanish gold.

Key West, Fla., Dec. 21.—The correspondent of the Madrid paper, El Imparcial, has cabled the statement telegraphed by Gen. Parrado to Gen. Blanco that the insurrection in Santa Clara province is triumphing, and that it is impossible to fight Gen. Gomez, as he evades all engagements. Great consternation has been caused in Havana by the execution of Col. Ruiz, the emissary of Gen. Blanco to Gen. Aranguren. The Cubans declare they will execute all emissaries who come in favor of autonomy, without paying any attention to who they are. Forty-three concentrados at work in the country were captured by the forces of Gen. Maroto, and put to death with the sword. Among them were women and children.

New York Post Office Does a Rushing Money Order Business.

New York, Dec. 21. — The Christmas money order business of the New York post office this year greatly exceeds that of any previous year. The outgoing European mail has practically been closed, but the incoming mail from foreign countries has just begun to arrive. All of the foreign money order business is transacted through the New York post office and a great mass of orders will be handled here this week. Our Christmas present to Europe, represented by the money orders sent during the first 18 days in December, was $1,536,836, in 140,903 orders. The largest number of orders, 73,400, sent to Great Britain and Ireland, represented $789,514. The remainder of the money orders were divided as follows:

Germany, 32,870 orders, $328,744; Italy, 2,923 orders, $51,551; Sweden, 15,735 orders, $167,565; Norway, 3,444 orders, $49,990; Switzerland, 2,108 orders, $24,307; Belgium, 413 orders, $6,356; Denmark, 2,187 orders, $20,316; Netherlands, 430 orders, $3,615; Austria, 3,992 orders, $49,205; Hungary, 1,027 orders, $11,960; France, 2,263 orders, $28,164; Portugal, 15 orders, $193; Luxemburg, 63 orders, $951; Cape Colony, 33 orders, $398.

The incoming orders up to date with the country sending them are:

Germany, 4,234 orders, $133,263; Great Britain, 7,583 orders, $94,970; Sweden, 1,516 orders, $65,000; Denmark, 218 orders, $4,775; Netherlands, 16 orders, $2,829; Norway, 251 orders, $5,100; Switzerland, 199 orders, $3,500; France, 420 orders, $7,000; Hungary, 155 orders, $6,600; Italy, 126 orders, $4,400; Austria, 270 orders, $9,700.

Labor in New York.

New York, Dec. 21.—According to the World, of 297,850 workers in this city the records show that 92,075 are out of work. Last year at this time 125,375 were idle. Ernest Boehm, secretary of the Central Labor union, estimates that fully 100,000 persons are in enforced idleness now. This estimate is probably very near the truth, for if to the 92,000 shown to be idle by the World's figures be added the many clerks, bookkeepers, accountants and others who are seeking work, the total would surely reach 100,000. Comparison shows that so far as the number of unemployed is concerned, the situation is a marked improvement over that of a year ago. More men by thousands are at work. This is particularly true of men engaged in the building trades. Within several years there has not been so much building as now. The increase of employment has come for the most part to skilled labor. The only striking increase in unskilled labor has been in the ranks of laborers on streets and for contractors.

They Claim Innocence.

Chicago, Dec. 20. — Chris Merry, charged with the murder of his wife, and James Smith, the alleged accomplice of Merry, arrived in Chicago Sunday from Princeton, Ky., where they were arrested. Sunday afternoon both men were confronted by Joseph Hickey, upon whose confession they were arrested, but they stoutly denied any knowledge of Mrs. Merry's death.

WHAT MA'S HUSBAND DID

E aint got no Chris'mus tree,
'Cause my mamma's husban' he
'Ist forgot he has a kid,
'At's what my ma's husban' did.

Pa, at's my ma's husban', says
Trees ain't fash'able these days;
Ast him why, an' pa says: "'Cause
Don't b'lieve in Santa Claus!"

Says he hates the noise and fuss,
Makes him aggravate an' cuss;
Don't see why ma keeps him, he Ain't no use 'at I can see.

'F me was him an' him was me,
Bet I'd have a Chris'mus tree;
Ma 'ist smiles an' says: "too bad!"
'At 'ist makes me awful mad.

Other little boys has pas
What believes in Santa Claus.
Hate mean pas—I'll tell him so
'Ist as soon as I can grow.

Wisht ma lock him out to-night
When he comes, 'ist serve him right;
Make I im stay out there, an' then
Gobuliins an' bogie men

Ketch him 'fore the mornin' come—
Bet you then I'd have a drum.
An' a whistle 'at I'd blow,
Whether he don't like er no.

Wisht—why, here's pa, an' I see
That he's bought a Chris'mus tree.
Says he thought he'd fool the kid—
'At's 'ist what ma's husban' did!

A CHRISTMAS AT Starvation Junction.

SOMEHOW or other Reuben Bullwinkle will get into Heaven, though I don't suppose he will do so in any ordinary way. But I am fairly fixed in my opinion that somehow or other, in the merciful providence of the Lord, he will walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, wearing a crown of eternal life—and I will tell you one reason why I think so:

It was almost noon on Christmas day when the through express pulled into Starvation Junction six hours late. Desolate and dreary as the station appeared, the travel-worn and hungry passengers were glad to see it, as they had been informed they could procure refreshments on their arrival, as no other opportunity had presented itself to satisfy their hunger since the previous day.

The storm which began in the night had developed into the unmistakable blizzard so much hated and feared by all who travel by rail. The engine had done all that iron and steam could do against its inveterate foe, but in spite of gallant efforts the blizzard seemed to be getting the best of the battle, and for some time before the train pulled up at the station the iron lungs of the engine seemed to labor with a painful effort as it plowed its way through the drifts.

The station was equipped with the usual lunch counter, upon which was displayed the uninviting and meager fare which generally greets the traveling public at such institutions. There were sandwiches for those who could afford to pay ten cents for the small suspicion of the fag end of some old remnant of fat mercifully hidden between two slices of stale bread. There were beans—baked beans, hard, dry and musty, which could be had for 25 cents; ten cents for two indigestible looking doughnuts; five cents apiece for eggs—boiled eggs, boiled hard, boiled until they were black and blue, boiled to the consistency of an india-rubber ball. Nobody could tell how long those eggs have been boiled. I say have, because probably most of them are doing duty yet on that lunch counter. And then there was pie—at least something that went by that title—and coffee, too, that would be recognized only by the name.

It often happens under circumstances of this nature that there are some who have not started on their journey with the expectation of being put to extra expense, and are consequently not prepared for the exorbitant charges of the railway lunch counter, and are therefore placed in a very unpleasant situation.

Among the crowd of hungry mortals who gathered in the dingy station were a woman and a little boy. These two made no effort to secure a place with the eager crowd at the lunch counter, but stood unnoticed and alone beside the stove. It was easy to see that they did not belong to the opulent class of society, for, though scrupulously neat, their clothes were of cheap material, and several skillful patches on the garments of the boy indicated careful economy. There was a weary and anxious look on the woman's face as she bent down and whispered something to the child, who was whimpering and tugging at her dress, casting longing looks at the lunch counter.

To a close observer the situation was perfectly plain, for there was no doubt that the boy was pleading for a chance at the edibles, and the mother, without the means of relief, was trying to pacify him. Of course, in a selfish and greedy world it is no uncommon thing for some to go hungry, for when so many are actually starving to death it seems hardly worth while to waste sympathy on those who are only fasting a little, and yet what is more pitiful than a helpless mother with a hungry child?

Among the crowd of passengers who had hurried into the station came Reuben Bullwinkle. The discomforts of the journey had no apparent effect upon his invincible good humor. "Dinner is now ready, ladies and gents!" he shouted. "Table de hote, or a la carte, all the luxuries of the season at prices within the means of any millionaire. Never mind the cost. A full stomach is better than a full pocket book, and you can't have both together in this ranch. Walk right up to the festal board and enjoy your Christmas dinner."

After this outburst of dime-museum eloquence Rube looked about him for some evidence of appreciation, but every one was too busily occupied in the scramble for food to heed his vagaries. But no, not every one, for as Reuben's eyes wandered over the room they observed the forms of the lone woman and her little boy standing idly by the stove.

Reuben was an old and experienced traveler, and withal a shrewd observer, and it did not take him long to read the pathetic story of this group of two. There was no doubt in his mind that they were faint with hunger and without sufficient money to pay for food. The drummer Rube pushed his traveling hat to the back of his head and scratched his bald pate as he held a secret consultation with the angelic and interior Reuben. "Rube, old fellow, what are we going to do about this business? We can't enjoy our Christman dinner knowing all the time that hungry eyes are watching every mouthful of food we devour; no, that's out of the question, but what can we do? That woman is no pauper, and she would probabiy scorch us with a glance if we presumed to offer her money, or even to blow her off to a dinner. But, great Caesar! they must be fed somehow. Now if we could manage to scrape up an acquaintance with the boy I think we could make the deal; so let's see if we can hypnotize him."

Agreeable to this resolution Reuben fastened his gaze upon the child until he caught his eye, then smiling the same old smile which had won him friends from Boston to California, he addressed him: "How's this for a Christmas, little boy?" But the little boy only clung closer to his mother's skirts and scowled at the presumptuous stranger.

"What's the matter, little friend, can't you find a seat? You just come with me now, and if we don't find a place I'm much mistaken."

The boy ceased whimpering and looked inquiringly at his mother.

TOMMY GETS HIS CHRISTMAS DINNER.

Reuben thought he could detect the conflicting emotions of the woman in the struggle between womanly pride and motherly love. He saw her tighten her hold on the hand of the boy and turn slightly away.

Slipping forward and politely doffing his hat, he addressed the woman:

"Madam, I beg your pardon, but you see I have taken a notion to that boy of yours, and as I am far away from my own little ones (this was rank duplicity, for Reuben had neither wife nor children, near or far), and as this is Christmas day, I am feeling a little lonesome. You, being a parent yourself, can appreciate my feeling, for doubtless were you away from your boy you would naturally be interested in any child which reminded you of your own. Now I beg you to permit your little boy to be my guest and eat his Christmas dinner with me."

The woman lifted her downcast eyes to the honest face of the stranger, then blushing slightly, without either forbidding or consenting, replied diplomatically: "Tommy is afraid of strangers."

However noncommital this answer was, it was equivalent to a full consent when made to a knight of the grip, and either owing to the hypnotic power of Reuben Bullwinkle or the cravings of appetite, no difficulty was experienced in winning the child's consent to any arrangement which had for its ultimate object the eating of a dinner.

Hungry children are not very fastidious, and however unappetising the viands of that forlorn lunch counter would seem to you and me as we sit down to our Christmas turkey at our own table, to the little hungry boy they were fit for a king, and if everyone throughout the land enjoyed his Christmas dinner as little Tommy did in that dingy old station, it was indeed a merry Christmas.

However, it came to pass that the boy was finally satisfied. He had stuffed himself to his full capacity, and with a sigh of supreme satisfaction prepared to slide off the high stool, ignoring all obligations and without a word of excuse or thanks to his genial host. It was very probable that with the purely natural selfishness which we are all heirs to, but which is more plainly evident in children owing to their innocence, the boy who did not think that his poor mother was still fasting, but with the sublime faith of childhood in the omnipotence of parents, he rested in the conviction that she was old enough to look out for herself, if indeed he gave the matter any consideration, which is not at all probable.

But Reuben had not forgotten, and had made up his mind that the woman's fast should be broken.

"Wait a minute, Tommy," said he, seeing the boy was about to escape.

"Don't you want something more?"

"No, I don't want no more," answered the polite Tommy.

"Wouldn't you like a nice big apple to put in your pocket?—or hold on, I've an idea. It's Christmas, you know, but you didn't know that I was old Santa Claus. The reason you didn't know me, Tommy, is because the blizzard blew my beard clean off. Yet all the same I'm going to fill your stocking, and if I can't get at your stocking I'll fill something else for you. Here, young lady, let's have one of those big paper bags. Now, Tommy, we'll call this a stocking. Let's ill it up. What'll you have? Apples, of course, and doughnuts and some of those delicious sandwiches and pie 'like your mother makes,' and I guess that exhausts the bill of fare. Now hold the end of the bag tight and don't spill out the vicuals; and, Tommy, your mother wants you."

The refreshed travelers had all settled themselves in their seats and the train was jogging along again as best it could through the snow. Passing through the car Reuben looked carefully about for the woman and child, as he was deeply interested in the success of his maneuvers. There is no great difficulty in locating anyone on a train of cars, and as a matter of course Reuben soon found the objects of his search. His business with them was very brief; indeed it was completed with a passing glance, and completed to his intense satisfaction, for that glance was sufficient to show him that the hungry woman was enjoying his bounty with a relish which none can appreciate, unless he has had corresponding experiences. He was not noticed as he hurried by the little group. He did not want to be recognized, for with a fine delicacy which always accompanies true generosity he felt that the less the woman saw of him the more comfortable she would be. Reuben Bullwinkle wanted no recognition or thanks; indeed the idea that he was entitled to thanks never entered his head for a moment. Neither did he make any mental calculation as to the value of an act of friendliness put down to his credit account on the recording angel's book, nor did he look for any special blessing which the Lord might owe him for his act of charity. Indeed the little thought which he gave the matter had its relation entirely to the objects of his sympathy, and if his heart was light and his soul joyous, it was because he had unconsciously wandered near the threshold of Heaven and heard the echo of angel voices singing: "Peace on earth and good will to men."—Frank Beard, in Ram's Horn.

CHRISTMAS LONG AGO.

All Presents Had to Go Into the Christmas Stocking.

Robert J. Burdette in the Ladies' Home Journal tells in his humorous way how he remembers the Christmas of long ago. "Most of the Christmas presents in those days were designed by the manufacturer for the hanging stocking. Anything too big to go into a stocking had to go over to somebody's birthday. In any family where there was more than one child the old reliable 'Noah's ark' was always looked for. We hailed with exclamations of astonished recognition Noah and Mrs. Noah, Messrs. and Mme. Shem, Ham and Japhet. There was no way of telling the men and women apart. They were exactly alike, but the elephant and giraffe you could distinguish at a glance, on account of the spots on the giraffe. So also the dog and the cow, because the cow was always white and blue, while the dog was invariably plain blue. Within 24 hours after the landing on Ararat the baby would have all the paint sucked off Shem, Ham and the hired man, and the doctor would be sent for.

"The red monkey climbing a red stick was another regular Christmas visitor. He was highly esteemed as a light luncheon by the baby. It never seemed to affect the infant unpleasantly—to himself, that is—although the cloudy symphony of red and blue about his innocent mouth was apt to make the beholder shiver. But it made the monkey look sick. Then there was a man on the box, with a major-general's uniform, beating a drum. You turned a crank, the general lifted his stick high in the air, and something in the box made a noise as much like a drum as a peal of thunder is like a piccolo. These things as toys were of no great value, but as practical and useful object lessons they were beyond all price, on the minus side."

ACROSS THE STREET.

The Change That Came with Another Christmas Time.

Last Christmas the house across the street from mine was the brightest and gayest of any in the block. There were beautiful Christmas wreaths in every window and the whole house was aglow. The shades were thrown up high and the soft lace curtains parted wide. The tree in the great parlor of the house across the street was larger and it had costlier presents on it than any other tree in the town. And most of the presents were for the little girl in the white dress and the big pink sash who could be seen from the street dancing around the tree, the happiest, sweetest little maiden in all the world and the light and life and joy of the house across the street.

This Christmas time all is dark and silent and gloomy in the great house across the street. There are no Christmas wreaths in the window, no ray of light comes from behind the closely drawn blinds, no childish voice is heard within the house. There is no bright and beautiful tree, but on the spot on which the tree stood last year there is something white and as beautiful in its silk and satin and velvet finish as the skill and wealth of man can make it. But the sight of it brought a chill to the hearts of those who saw it carried into the house on Christmas eve, and when the eyes of the mother and father fell upon it their hearts bled anew.

The passers-by who saw the bands of white fluttering from the knob of the door of the house across the street went on to their own humble houses thanking God that their own little ones were left to them, no matter how little of wealth or beauty there might be in their homes.

The poorest house in which there was the laugh of children was so much less desolate than the great mansion across the street in which the child's laugh was forever still. It added to the melody of Paradise that Christmas morning. It rang out clear and sweet across the jasper sea. It had gone through the gate Beautiful and into a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.—Detroit Free Press.

When Formally Instituted.

The celebration of Christmas is said by the church historians to have been formally instituted by Pope Telesphorus, who died A. D. 138.

With His Own Money.

Mrs. Benham—Henry, what shall I get you for Christmas?

Benham—Nothing; I've got to economize this year.—Chicago Tribune.

Best Way to Tell.

The best way to tell whether a present is a cheap one is to observe whether the price has been rubbed off.—N. Y. Truth.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Another Hold up.

Masked men perpetrated another bold robbery, in South Minneapolis. The crime was committed with the cool deliberation that has characterized other robberies of a similar nature, and which appear to have become so common in that city of late.

It was about 8:30 o'clock in the evening when F. N. Glasoe, of the firm of Glasoe & Holen, proprietors of the Globe meat market, Twenty-fifth avenue south and Riverside, upon looking up from work that engaged attention, saw himself confronted by five masked men. As many revolvers met his gaze. He was powerless, and although his partner was in the rear room, he did not dare make an outcry. He was told to keep silent, and stand still Then one of the robbers coolly walked back of the counter, and opened the till. From it he took all the money there was in sight, about $40, and a check. The robbers then left. The robbery did not consume over three minutes of time.

Dead.

Mrs. Louis Rober, wife of Lieut. Rober of the Minneapolis fire department, died at her home, 2704 Hamline avenue, St. Paul. About two months ago Mrs. Rober was bitten by a strange animal that found its way into her chicken coop. The animal was not a dog, in all probability, and doctors have ventured the opinion that it was a mink. About two weeks ago, or a little less, Mrs. Rober was taken violently ill, and the physicians who attended her state that she showed symptoms of having hydrophobia.

Still More Trouble.

The sheriff of St. Louis county has levied on the mains of the Duluth Gas and Water company on an execution issued under judgments for personal property taxes for 1894, 1895 and 1896, amounting to $35,000. Notices were posted in the usual form, advertising the sale under execution Jan. 4. There is an interesting question involved, as a mortgage is being foreclosed in the United States court, the commissioner having been appointed to make sale, and the company claims that the plant is in the hands of the court. It may come to a conflict with the United States court.

Judges Must Act.

It will hereafter be necessary that naturalization papers be granted to alien applicants only when the judge is actually present, questions the witnesses and passes upon each case.

This is the statement of P. G. Sjoblom, and he fortifies himself behind a decision of the supreme court of New York, and the opinions of Judges Jamison and Russell, of Minneapolis, and various other eminent members of the Hennepin county bar. The judge cannot delegate his powers to the clerk, but must exercise it himself, if it is to be exercised at all.

Not Guilty.

The jury in the case of the state against William F. Bickel returned a verdict of not guilty.

The charge on which Mr. Bickel was tried was that of grand larceny in the first degree from the Minnesota Savings bank of St. Paul, of which he was vice president and managing officer. It was alleged that he had stolen from the bank a large number of notes and considerable cash. It was shown on the trial of the case that all of the notes had been returned to the receivers of the institution.

Trouble at Anoka.

State Auditor Dunn has ordered the arrest of all trespassers upon the asylum site at Anoka, and the list will include some very prominent Anokans. Their offense consists in the cutting of wood upon the land owned by the state. No arrests have as yet been made, but the evidence is said to be very strong against certain individuals, and a sensation is promised when the warrants are served.

News in Brief.

Gunder Olson, a well-to-do farmer residing a mile and a half from Canton, committed suicide by hanging. He leaves a wife and three children.

The village of Jordan has made a contract for operating an electric light plant for the term of five years.

Samuel Baltimore, an escaped convict, was recaptured near White Bear, and is again in prison. He was on his way to St. Paul and offered no resistance when captured. He was reduced in grade, but not put in the solitary.

George Howard, recently released from the reformatory, has been arrested for stealing a team from a St. Joseph farmer. He sold the horses in Princeton.

Charles Johnson, a farmer near Melby, died from injuries received by being thrown from his wagon while his team was running away. He was about 36 years old and married.

Mrs. Anderson won the ladies' wood sawing contest at Amboy, the prize being a gold watch. There were seven contestants.

Gov. Clough denies that he is responsible for the order prohibiting the playing of indoor baseball in the armories of the state.

The Pioneer mine at Ely, one of the best mining properties in the country, has closed down, throwing 250 men out of employment. This action marks a crisis in the relations between the fee owners and lease holders.

Sergeant Thomas Howard, of the Chicago detective force, was at Crookston to decide as to the identity of a prisoner there alleged to be Chris Strook, alias Red Chris, wanted in Chicago for the bold robbery of Miser Schrag. Howard says the man is not Strook.

Company I, at Minneapolis of the state militia, is now the happy possessor of the four gold medals issued this year as official recognition of proficiency with muskets. By winning these medals the company earns the reputation of having the largest number of sharpshooters of any company in the state.

Cash receipts of the state prison for the month of November were the largest in the history of the institution, aggregating $129,643. Of this amount, $123,352 was for binder twine.

The annual convention of the order of the Eastern Star was held at Marshall, with 100 delegates.

In the case of Louis Christianson vs. the Winona Street Railway and Light company, a verdict was returned for the plaintiff of $2,000, in the United States court. The suit was on account of an accident to the plaintiff's young son, who had a leg cut off by a car last June.

A Parlor-Cafe Car Now Running on Daylight Special of Illinois Central Between Chicago and St. Louis.

The Illinois Central has substituted for the parlor car, formerly running on its day train between Chicago and St. Louis, a new composite parlor-cafe car, built for the Company at the Pullman Shops especially for service on its fast, vestibule, solid "Daylight Special" train to St. Louis. The parlor, in the Empire style, is finished in mahogany, with darker panels of the same, the latter being richly inlaid with marquetry composed of various shaded woods. Its furnishing includes easy, luxurious revolving armchairs, upholstered with green frieze plush. The ceiling overhead (in which are fixed brilliant Pintsch gas chandeliers of the latest pattern) are decorated in gold, and in color and design are in harmony, as also is the rich Wilton carpet on the floor beneath, with the plush and mahogany finish of the rest of the room. The cafe is in general design and color scheme in harmony with the parlor, and has tables at which parties of four can be seated, and tables at which couples can dine tete-a-tete. A complete kitchen adjoins the cafe, and meals will be served en route from a varied menu at reasonable prices; the cafe feature to be conducted in the same general way for patrons of the entire train as are the cafe cars on the Central running West out of Chicago, and which have proved so popular. The car also contains a gentleman's smoking room, in connection with which is a buffet from which cigars and liquid refreshments can be obtained. The car as a whole is of substantial construction and elegant finish. The features of this car are particularly adapted to Hot Springs Ark., travel, the Daylight special leaving Chicago every forenoon, making the run to St. Louis in eight hours, and giving good connection in Union Station with trains for Hot Springs.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

"MY WIFE'S LIFE."

How I was the means of saving it.

When the lungs are attacked and the symptoms of consumption appear, then begins the struggle between affection and that destroying disease which slays its thousands annually. It is a happy issue to the struggle when disease is conquered and health restored. Such an issue does not always end the struggle, but it did in the case of Mr. K. Morris, Memphis, Tenn., who saw his wife wasting and weakening and physicians helpless, and then suggested the simple remedy that wrought the cure. He tells the story thus:

"Seven years ago, my wife had a severe attack of lung trouble which the physicians pronounced consumption. The cough was extremely distressing, especially at night, and was frequently attended with the spitting of blood. The doctors being unable to help her, I induced her to try Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was surprised at the great relief it gave. Before using one whole bottle she was cured, so that now she is strong and quite healthy. That this medicine saved my wife's life I have not the least doubt. I always keep Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Whenever any of my family have a cold or cough we use it, and are promptly cured."—K. MORRIS, Memphis, Tenn.

The question: "Is consumption curable?" is still debated, and still debatable. It is easy to say that this was not a case of consumption. Yet the physicians said it was. They should know. As a matter of fact, Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has wrought so many similar cures that it seems to argue the curableness of consumption, in its earlier stages, by the use of this remedy. There is no better medicine for pulmonary troubles than Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It gives relief in cases of Asthma, and Bronchitis, where relief has been heretofore unattainable. It promptly cures Coughs and Colds, La Grippe, and all affections of the throat and lungs. Heretofore, Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been put up in full size bottles only, at $1.00 per bottle. To meet a world-wide demand for a smaller package, the remedy is now put up in half size bottles, at half price—50 cents. Write for Dr. Ayer's Curebook (free) and learn more of the cures effected by Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Address J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Extinguishers.

One of the greatest and heaviest of them is that drudgery of washing and cleaning in the old way with soap. What is a woman good for, after a day over the washboard, or cleaning house? She's too tired even to rest, usually.

Why is it that any woman is willing to live such a life when Pearline stands ready to do all her hard work and save her money besides? There's no answer to this—at least, no sensible, satisfactory answer. 563

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, DEC. 24, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Fine mixed candies at Billing's Restaurant; 3 pounds for 25 cents.

—Large quantities of wood are being shipped from this point this winter, oak at $2.40 and maple at $3.60 per cord on the cars.

—The shortest days of the year have already come, and gone. Soon there will be more daylight than we have been having for some time.

—Wednesday morning's train east, was an hour and a half late. It is pretty hard to get around on time these cold, frosty mornings, even for railroad men.

—Merry, Merry Christmas, to each and all of our readers. To-night is Christmas eve, hang up your stocking and see what old Kris Kinkle will bring you. You can't always tell. Give him a chance.

—Rehearsals are being had for an entertainment, and preparations are being made to have a good time Christmas Eve at the M. E. church. A Christmas tree and what the children like are on the programme.

—Fresh oysters always on hand at Billing's Restaurant.

—On Wednesday, Rupert Muckenhirn, who has had several severe accidents during his life time, met with another mishap. While loading wood, one of his horses kicked him on the leg. He will be laid up for awhile.

—Meetings have been held, and an organization affected to either buy out the Delano creamery or start a new one in the near future. Farmers find there is money in milk, and they desire to preserve to themselves the cream of the business.

—From the St. Peter papers we learn that a city horse buyer visited that town a few days ago and bought horses from six parties, paying $220 for one animal; and the average price for the lot being $151. Surely this looks like old time horse market, anyway.

—Aurora Borealis in all her fantastic shapes, and beauty, is visible along our northern horizon nearly any evening now. It is a little cool to linger long to observe it sometimes. But it well repays one to take a short run out and look at it occasionally.

—The Delano Furniture Company is constructing a livery barn for A. G. Jones, on the river bank, opposite Mayor Borsch's store. He is to have a nice place when it is completed: regular city style. The location is quite handy to the business portion of town.

—The Cosmopolitan, monthly magazine, and Bellamy's new book "Equality" and the GAZETTE one year all for $2.50 It has been but a short time since the price of such a magazine as the Cosmopolitan was, alone, $4.00. No one should be without good reading now-a-days.

—A crew of men are at work for the Minneapolis Brewing Company here this week. They have torn down the old storage house and will build one of the latest improved refrigerators for their beer, to be distributed from this point. Cold weather don't seem to check the beer business.

—The Eagle persistently, and apparently purposely, refrains from even mentioning that eggs are selling at about three fourths the ordinary winter price, and that many of the manufactories are being killed off, to appease the appetites of hungry hordes in the cities and at home. Why don't she explain?

—If you want to make a friend a nice Christmas present subscribe for some of the nice magazines to come once a month, for a year to them. Demorests and the GAZETTE one year for $1.75. Cosmopolitan and the GAZETTE one year for $1.89. Send your money to us, paying up arrears and one year in advance, entitles you to the same chance as new subscribers.

—Cream taffy, all kinds, fresh made always found at Mrs. B's Restaurant.

—There is a state law with severe penalty for dumping garbage of various kinds into running streams. Some of our citizens should read it and take warning ere they are caught in the meshes of the law. The river is not the place to put your rotten appels, potatoes, and other vegetables; nor your spoiled fish, meats, or manure from your barns. Take heed or a bill of costs may accrue.

—The High School Literary Society's public entertainment at the City Hall, passed off nicely, and was enjoyed by a well filled room of interested listeners. President Emma Hitsman called the meeting to order and Secretary Minnie Lawrence read the minutes of last meeting. The programme for the evening was shortened by omitting the most interesting and instructive part of the programme, the debate, on account of the lateness of the hour and the coldness of the atmosphere in the Hall, two causes that might have been overcome by beginning earlier and by firing up a little. The programme as rendered was:

Instrumental music, Blanche Rader; reading, Edna Ross; Dialogue; song, Mollie Maxfield; recitation, Polish Boy, Minnie Lawrence; Instrumental music, May Mowatt; recitation, Miss Arnold; song, Misses Steffes, Sturman, Ross and Erickson; paper, Edna Ross; reading, Amanda Sturman; song. Ella Bryant; dialogue; tableaux.

Merry, Merry, Merry Christmas!

—The Parochial school is enjoying a vacation during holidays.

—Don't fail to inspect Mr's Billings' fine, home made cream candies.

—The Public school is to have two weeks vacation for Christmas holidays beginning to night.

—If you want to know how a fellow feels with a carbuncle on the "ligamentum nucia", ask Policeman Martin Nelson.

—Rev. McCornack, of Howard Lake, preached Tuesday evening and left an appointment for next Tuesday evening. He is a good preacher. Hear him.

—One of liveryman Jones' best horses, of course, received a very severe kick Sunday night, from his neighbor horse. He will have a rest for a few weeks.

—Skating, since the last below zero weather has been good on the river and the young folks have been improving their opportunities, even nights and Sundays.

—The severe weather let up Sunday and since then we have been having a fine spell of zero temperature. The air is pure and bracing. Regular old time Minnesota weather.

—John McGary, of Independence, has been appointed administrator of the Hysted children, and will sell at public auction on Tuesday, Dec. 28, at their farm most of their stock and other property.

—Rev. J. L. Farber preached Sunday evening to a fair sized crowd. We do beleive most of the audience, for once were of the mail persuasion. Don't stay away from church ladies just because the men come.

—The creamery talk crystallized Saturday, into a meeting at the City Hall, where steps were taken to organize a stock company and buy out Mr. Roosen or build a new creamery. An adjournment till Monday was taken.

—Fred Zabel and Carl Shrader purchased a nice Christmas tree of Grown & Co., a few days ago, for the entertainment in the German Lutheran church on the Montrose road. They expect to have as good a time as their city neighbors. There is no reason why they shouldn't. Christmas is for all.

—Several farmers in our vacinity, as has been their custom for years, butchered their hogs and hauled them to Minneapolis the week before Christmas. We haven't learned how they were satisfied with their trips, but suspect when they compare notes with neighbors who were ready to accompany them, but who finally accepted 4cts per pound, on foot, for their hogs here and thus got rid of a hard days work butchering, and another days trip to the city in the cold and on slippery roads, we suspect that they will feel that they are not much better off for their visit to the big city.

—The annual Village election will soon roll round. Good men should be placed in nomination and elected to each office. Men should be on guard who will strive to make our Village a model for good order and observance of law. The present board does some good things but like their predecessors, if not more so, they allow the saloons to do about as they please, setting a poor example for the rising generation. As at present run the saloon license amounts in Delano to a hugh monopoly, allowing a few men to sell liquors to whom, and when they please, while others are excluded from the business. It should not be so.

—The Health officer, under instructions from the State Board of Corrections and Charities made the annual inspection of the Village lockup last Saturday. It is in poor condition for company. The dirty matress and pillow, without sheets or pillow case, piled up in a corner, on the floor, with a pair of blankets and a couple of quilts, all dirty, is not inviting to prisoners. The council should pfecure a bedstead, and a few other conveniences, if they expect to keep people in jail. If any one should be confined over night in the present outfit we believe he might get some damages from the village for being kept in such a place. Fix it up at once.

—A good square meal, or a lunch, at any time, at Billings' Restaurant. Mrs. B. is a good cook, and tends to business.

Personal.

Ole Swedebeck, of Maynard, is visiting with his brother E. J. and family.

Frank Cary and family, of cedar Mills, are enjoying a visit with Grandpa Stanley.

Prof. Roy Wilder, who is teaching in the Warner district, was home over Sunday.

Ed Freeman and Miss Grace O'Hair, of the "U", came home this week for Christmas.

George Bolton and L. M. Maxfield were among Delanoites at Buffalo, this week.

Prof. Everson, it is claimed, didn't like Hawarden, and so returned to Minneapolis.

Miss Kizzie Gates left this morning for Mantorville, to spend Christmas with relatives.

John Nugent Jr., was serving summonses on some of our citizens, as witnesses, this week.

Miss Annie Parslow, who is teaching on the other side of Buffalo will spend the Christmas vacation at home.

Bishop Gilbert held Episcopal services in the Presbyterian church Friday evening and Rev. Ray, Wednesday.

DIED.

COOPER.—At Williston, N. D. William Cooper, aged 83 years.

Mr. Cooper was an old resident of Wright county and moved to Dakota about three years ago.

County Cullings.

Rev J. W. Powell, of Mankato, is to preach at Montrose Sunday, instead of Rev. Farber.

And eighteen year old boy, Paul Golla, of Montrose, accidently shot himself in the abdomen last Monday while loading a gun. His condition was critical at last accounts.

The Grand Jury failed to find any body guilty of murdering Mr. Boxell and his young wife. To most people it looks as it that crime should be uncovered, soon. Else what is the use of officers and laws against crimes?

Valley Herald: John Sheehy, rold democrat and a supporter, at the last election, of Joel Heatwole for Congress, has been appointed postmaster at Montgomery. This is a bitter dose for the old time republicans of that town, who supported one of their own party for the position.

Editor Wharton has a terrible time bringing to life the Wright County Editorial Association. Perhaps he could induce the Wright County Medical Society to lend a helping hand. Nothing like trying. If a call was made it looks as if enough quill drivers would be present to make an interesting time for once anyway.

On the list of Jurors to serve in the United States courts to be held at St. Paul, January 11, we notice the names of J. A. Sternberg, Smith Lake; Thomas Kelly, Waverly; A. H. Grant, Buffalo, for the grand jury.

Among petit jurors are M. J. Kingsbury, Monticello, J. L. Harwick, Monticello; A. J. Wood, Otsego; Owen Dailey, Maple Lake; and George Davies, Buffalo.

The County Commissioners met at Buffalo Dec. 13. Employed Fred Brown to draw up plans and specifications for repairing Dayton bridge.

A committeee to view the proposed changes in county roads was appointed to meet at residence of N. P. Nelson, Dec. 28.

The Treasurer was instructed to visit towns of the county, to collect taxes, in January and February.

Bids for printing will be received and acted upon at the first meeting in January.

Also for furnishing 100 cords of 2 foot, green, body maple wood, and 25 cords of 18 inch green, body maple wood and for 25 cords 18 inch green basswood. Bids will also be received for oak same dimensions and quantities as above.

Order for formation of new school district, No. 127, was made.

The County Surveyor was instructed to complete record of surveys up to date, in books provided for that purpose.

Sealed bids for 18,000 feet of oak plank, at Monticello bridge, planks to be 3 inches thick 12 feet long and sound not less than 8 nor more than 12 inches wide.

Petition of R. C McEachren, granted.

Petition of F. D. McMillen, rejected.

Court News.

District court at Buffalo was still in session this week.

Roy Spencer was given a reformatory sentence, and Charles Spencer found not guilty; no evidence against George carsley, he was dismissed. Mark Thomas was sent to Stillwater for three years. The charge against these men was stealing sheep.

Derrick Fuller vs. Belle Fuller, divorce granted.

State vs. Thomas Kelly fined $100. Paid.

Augusta H. Archibald vs. Anna Goetz. Verdict for plaintiff damages $5. 20 days stay granted.

The report of the Commissioners on laying a public road from Rockford Village to Rockford station was approved, and an order made granting the road; the county to pay commissioners.

Mary A. Higgins vs. Thomas Wrenn, dismissed; failed to prove cause of action.

Peter Bjorklund vs. P. S. Oslund, dismissed.

State vs. James Sweeney, no bill found, discharged.

McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. vs. H. A. Peterson. Verdict of lower court affirmed, defendant given judgement.

State vs. L. A. Meister, assault in second degree. No bill found; ordered released from custody.

Archie Gilmer. Jury disagreed and was discharged; defendant held.

William Opat vs. John Punchover et al. Verdict for defendant.

Etta and David Flannigan appeal from guardians account. Settled and dismissed.

Samuel Longfellow was found not guilty and defendant discharged.

The New Year.

The New Year is here. Another mile stone has been passed in our journey through space. Another year has been added to the short span of life we are allowed here. The year of 1897 is closed. Its good deeds and its bad deeds have been credited or charged up to us in the book of life. We are given the opportunity to begin another year with pages white and clean. Will we keep them so? Or, will we allow big ugly blots to mar many day's records, as was the case with the year's account just closed? Let us make good resolutions. And let us not forget them as the merry bells cease ringing in the glad New Year. But let us ever bear in mind the necessity of keeping inviolate our New Year's vows and promises. Let us daily ponder them in our mind, and faithfully work to have our account for 1898 the best of our lives so far.

It is very easy for many people to make resolutions to lead a better life as each new year presents itself on the calendar of life; but it appears that many break them, with even more ease, before the sun goes down on the day they make them.

Let everybody make good resolutions for the New Year, and let everybody make a resolve not to break them for one year. Let 1898 be a happy and a prosperous year if we can make it so.

HANNA, of Ohio, lacks more than Foraker of getting the nomination to succeed himself as Senator from the Buckeye state.

THE Litchfield Saturday Review has changed hands, Mr. Mullen having sold out to Messrs Mathews, of Benson, and Wagner, of Waseca. If the new proprietors keep the moral tone of the Review up to Mr. Mullen's pattern it will continue to be a good paper.

THE State Educational association has been having an interesting time at St. Paul this week. Teachers from all parts of the state have been having their says on different subjects connected with the securing of an education by the rising generation.

A MEETING of the Democratic State Organization is to be held in January in Minneapolis. The next campaign for State officers and for Congressmen, and a United States Senator to succeed C. K. Davis is now on, and things political will grow warmer each week until next November.

MR. BRYAN met with a hearty welcome on his recent visit to Mexico. It must be that these Mexicans are not so tired of their silver dollars as some of our newspapers would have us believe, or they would not be so fond of welcoming Mr. Bryan, the leading apostle of free silver in this country.

THE St. Cloud Journal Press, the me too Eagle, and other party organs are jumping onto Capt. Van Sant's proposed nomination for Governor in great shape. They want a man that can enthuse the party. That's not the way to enthuse the party boys. You must unite and holler for the winning hoss, or John Lind will do the enthusing sure.

THE scare headlines in some of our daily papers make the average reader weary. Day after day it is wars, and rumors of wars, formations of trusts, bankruptcies, suicides, murders and the like. The truth is bad enough without making a lot of scare head lines. Lots of people scarcely read all the scare heads now-a-days, to say nothing of the horrible tales themselves.

JUDGE THOMAS CANTY has made friend. by his straight forward manly course on the bench of the State Supreme Court. He had friends before or he would never have been elected to that high place. As he has added to their numbers, he must now have enough to send him to the U. S. Senate, in the place to be vacated by C. K. Davis soon.

He has demonstrated his ability to the satisfaction of all. Some of the papers claim he can not be spared from his present position, because of his peculiar fitness. Just such men as discharge their duties well are fitted for higher places and should not be switched off into niches and kept there till they die of old age.

ENGLAND, Germany, and Russia are gaining footholds in China. It looks as if they wanted to gobble up the whole Chinese Empire. But then our John Goodnow is over there, and he is a professional ball player, and they surely will keep their distance from his residence, at least.

IT is now claimed that Gen. Ruiz was trying with $100,000 to buy the surrender of some of the Cuban forces, was why he was killed. Could it be possible that Spanish gold is influencing the actions of U. S. toward the Cuban affair? The reputation of U. S. legislators is not that of killing the bribe offerers.

JOSEPH LEITER, of Chicago, backed by his father, a retired merchant surprised the Chicago wheat speculators by having his grain, a big pile of it, delivered in Chicago. It is claimed that while he was having fun in wheat, he was making a big thing in oats. And now some of the papers are exhibiting cuts of Mr. Leiter's chin. A man don't carry his brains in his chin. And its not every man with a double chin that gets rich dealing in wheat and oats. Some men get double chins from barley.

A SWISS doctor is said to have removed the stomach from one of his lady patients lately, who made a good recovery and is now apparently in better health than she had been for a long time. A tumor had grown in the organ causing its removal. We would advise our readers not to be in too big a hurry to have their stomachs taken out. If they should, and then be called upon to have their vermiform appendix amputated, and a few other intestines removed they surely would have to live by hypodermic injections.

IT is considerably humiliating to the people of this country to have the President announce in his message to Congress that they would later be presented with a printed report by Great Britain, on the international agreement business, instead of having the pleasure of listening to a report from the three eminent citizens of this country sent to Europe expressly for the purpose of doing what they could to bring about international bimetallism. It does surely look as if the Commission had become so disgusted as to refuse to make a report. And, if they hadn't before, they should after that direct insult.

THERE don't seem much chance for passing the Postal Savings Banks bill this session of Congress. There is a variety of opinions as to what kind of a law should be made, and as to the effect on finances such a law would have. Some claim that a billion dollars would soon be deposited in savings banks, if they were started once, and the great question then is what would the government do to invest the money, to enable it to pay the interest on so much wealth. It will cost considerable to run all these banking institutions. And in case the deposits should be so large as some anticipate the temptation to extravagance by government officials would be very great. The money would soon be spent in some way, and when the depositors wanted their money back government bonds would have to be sold to raise the money to pay them off. Great scheme that.

FROM present indications President McKinley will not be a candidate for re-election unless he can so arrange and parcel out political plums as to secure his renomination in spite of the majority of even his former followers.

The bimetallists who supported him at the last election, hoping something would be done to bring about international bimetallism, have about given up hopes that he will aid them in that direction. The civil service rules and regulations people are not pleased, neither are the anti civil service advocates satisfied with the way things are going. Prohibitionists, many of whom supported McKinley thinking him a good Methodist and of course a thorough temperance man now claim that he is allowing wines used at his receptions, and on his table; and they are as much opposed to such conduct in the chief executive of our land as in any other individual. If these charges are true, he can depend on the solid vote of the Prohibitionists for some other candidate, at the next election. On the whole it is generally claimed that though the President may have some good manly ideas of how things should be carried on in a Christian country and by a Christian President he allows the politicians to have their way too much; to do things to suit themselves, and not him. In short the claim is that the President lacks backbone of his own.

THE Republicans are having a terrible time fixing upon a nominee for Governor. There are a few followers for each of many men. Some want a governor from one of the big cities; some say he must and shall come from the country. Some want a solid gold standard man; others think he should advocate bimetallism. Among those mentioned we find the names of Capt. Van Sant, the old war horse, many think he has been in service as a prospective candidate too long now. Then there is "My Policy" Eustice, and Farmer Gibbs. They have been hankering after the office about as long as has the Captain, or even longer. Then there is Gen. Clapp, Tams Bixby, Bob Dunn, Gov. Clough, and probably since his return to the ranks. Old Peas, and no telling how many more. And each has his handful of friends, and the friends will all have it in for the fellow that robs their favorite of the plum; and there are so many handfuls that when they all vote for the opposition, just to even things up you know, of course John Lind the only opponent they seem to have, will be elected by a handsome majority.

Tried To Buy Towne!

A Duluth special of Dec. 28, to the Pioneer Press says: "Ex-Congressman C. A. Towne alleges that he was offered $50,000 and a special train with which to visit Canton, and the influence of the administration to procure him a United States senatorship in Minnesota, providing he would keep in line with the Republican party on the money question shortly before he walked out. He declines to mention any names, however, and says that he does not believe President McKinley knew of the attempt to bribe him. Mr. Towne is credited with these statements at Long Prairie and confirms them here."

The people are entitled to know who made this offer and on what authority they made it. Mr. Towne, of course, is prepared to tell, when he thinks the proper time for him arrives. People in such business should be exposed to the public gaze, that their efforts may not prove more successful with some purchasable man.

The People Will Rule.

The Indiana Republicans have expressed themselves in a way to surprise some of the National leaders. They think the G. O. P. ought to redeem its pledges; and this is only a starter; wait until other states further west are heard from.

People have tired of waiting and watching and watching and giving parties one more chance. They have expressed themselves before, and are now doing so earlier in the administration's term.

When Cleveland went in last time, people were led to believe they would have a tariff law to suit them. After fooling around for a long time Gorman's amended affair, nothing like what people wanted and had a right to expect, was passed and presented to the President for his signature. Instead of vetoing the bill he allowed it to become a law by limitation, and took his first step toward the Klondyke camp and out of the hearts of his countrymen. Since then, though Maryland had to go Republican in order to accomplish it, Mr. Gorman, a once Presidential possibility, and who was so active in thwarting the will of the people so recently and forcably expressed on the tariff question has been relegated to the ranks of innocuous desuetude.

New men with different views and as many and fully as loud promises have succeeded in securing control of affairs. So soon it has become evident that things are, for all the present administration, to jog along in the well worn rut, so far as aiding the poorer people is concerned. Whereyer opportunity presents, the people are declaring themselves as desirous of having things done about as agreed upon, before election; but it seems about an impossibility for the present House and Senate, and Presidential aspirants and their followers and leaders to agree upon any plan of mending the finances; or re-arranging the Dingley bill; or delivering the Cubans from their perilous predicament; or doing anything to alleviate the sufferings of afflicted humanity, anywhere.

People have had all this kind of thing they want; they are heartily tired of electing to office, against their own convictions, term after term, men who promise great things and after election simply follow the paths of their predecessors, diverging only to help monopoly, wealth and greed gain a better grip upon the poor.

At the first opportunity an aroused populace will be at the polls and vote for what they think right. They have been reading and thinking and they have got tired of voting as they are told; and always for the other fellows interest, and intend to see what kind of a gouernment we will have when they vote for what they know is best for the country and the people in it, regardless of "financial" interests of a few millionairs who are seeking to drain the savings of even the women and children into their own coffers by the Postal Savings banks, making another sale of bonds inevitable.

No Money in Beets.

Columbia, Mo., Dec. 29.—Since 1890 the Missouri experiment station here has been making experiments with sugar beets. Today the authorities gave out the result of their experiments which demonstrate that it would not be profitable for the Missouri farmer to raise the beets for sugar purposes, if he intends to go to the expense of erecting factories for manufacturing sugar.

Next Congressman Towne Speaks.

C. A. Towne, whom the people have slated for the next Congressman from the Sixth Minnesota district addressed a vast audience at the opening of St. Cloud's new Opera House last week. Mr. Towne spoke on the financial question of the day, and quite evidently has lost none of his old time vigor, but handles the subject in a still more entertaining and instructive manner than he did two years ago. He is a man that learns by experience, and he has profited by the last two years' schooling in finances. He fired some redhot shot and shell into the camp of the republican bimetallists who voted with the old party against their convictions, just once more at the last election. Although a commission was sent to Europe to work up a bimetallic scheme on an international agreement it has accomplished nothing. Senator Wolcott who headed the commission is said to have returned home disgusted not so much because of what the prospects were in Europe, as with the avowed determination of the Goyernment of the United States, as announced by Secretary Gage, to have nothing but a straight out and out gold standard money. How can bimetallists longer be led by such actions by their party leaders? They have surely had enough of this kind of doings.

Frank Larrabee and W. E. Dodge have had another head end collision on the Great Northern road. Judge Smith has sent out a wrecking train.—Times.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 24, 1897.

"Wobbling Willie" is again being applied to Mr. McKinley as a nickname by members of his own party. The Republicans who still call themselves bimetallists have about decided that Mr. McKinley must either declare himself to be a gold monometallist or a bimetallist; they are tired of having him coddle them by talking bimetallish and then allowing Secretary Gage to publicly announce, without remonstrance, that the administration was for any and everything that was regarded as likely to help perpetuate the single gold standard. Those men have quieted their constituents by assuring them of Mr. McKinley's sincere friendship for bimetallism, and his desire to aid in its restoration when the opportunity offered, and it was from Mr. McKinley himself that they got the impressions upon which those assurances were founded. Now they have doubts, and will demand that Mr. McKinley settle them once for all.

Mr. McKinley has been wobbling on the civil service rules quite as badly as upon finance and he is likely to find himself brought to book upon this subject soon after Congress resumes business. Just before Congress adjourned for the holidays, Mr. McKinley indicated, if he did not actually make the promise, to some of the republicans who had been taking an active part in the movement to secure anti-civil service legislation, that he intended to issue an executive order that would remove from the protection of the civil service rules many of the offices that were included in Mr. Cleveland's extensions of the rules. This week, with Congress away, Mr. McKinley told his Cabinet that he was inclined to stand pat on civil service and that while he might make some changes he did not expect to make any extensive modification of existing rules.

The joint sessions of the House and Senate Indian Committee, the object of which is to agree upon a single bill covering all the legislation for the Indian Territory and the five tribes of civilized Indians that this Congress will be asked to pass, have so far merely served to show how many divergent interests there are in this matter and how difficult it would be to draw a bill that will not be unjust to some of these interests.

The nomination of Mr. Charles Page Bryan to be minister to China, if persisted in by Mr. McKinley, may be the cause of a big fuss in the Senate. It has been represented to Mr. McKinley that the European grab game which is now being played in China makes it imperative that the U. S. minister to that country should be a man of wide diplomatic experience, and that Mr. Bryan lacks that qualification. Such Senators as Teller, Wolcott and Frye have announced their intention to fight the confirmation of Bryan, if Mr. McKinley sends it to the Senate in spite of the protests which have been made to him.

The republican policy of cutting the appropriations regardless of what is needed, in order to try to help the Dingley tariff lessen that deficit nightmare, has been shown in a striking manner by the way in which the House committee on Appropriations treated the recommendations of the Secretary of the Interior, who had himself, under orders from the White House, cut the estimates of all his bureau chiefs. Everybody knows that the work of the Patent Office has steadily increased with the growth of the country, and perhaps everybody doesn't know, but it is true all the same, that the U. S. Government makes a profit out of the Patent Office, the amount to its credit at this time in the U. S. Treasury being in excess of $5,000,000. The Secretary of the Interior asked Congress to provide for just one-half of the additional help that the Commissioner of Patents says is needed to get the business of the office up to date, and the House Appropriations Committee declined to provide any additional help at all, although the business of the office is now from two to six months behind. If a private business establishment refused to employ help enough to promptly handle its business, it would soon find that rivals were getting it away from it, but as the government has no rivals in this business those who have dealings with the Patent Office will have to grin and bear the delay until better business sense prevails in the House, unless the Senate comes to the rescue by properly amending the Legislative, Executive and Judicial appropriation bill.

Every republican office holder from Ohio, in Washington, who is supposed to have the slighest influence with the republican members of the Ohio legislature has been ordered—not requested—to report at the Hanna headquarters in Columbus, for the purpose of helping the boss to land that Senatorial plum. Another proof that this is a civil service reform administration.

Retirement of Bank Notes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Mr. Coffin, the acting Controller of the Currency, today called attention to the fact that the retirement of national bank notes in the first twenty days of this month had qeen $3,000,000. This is said to be the first time during the last ten years that the voluntary retirements have reached this amount in one month.

Under the law the United States Treasurer is not allowed to receive for retirement more than $3,000,000 in any one month, and hence all deposits to retire notes during the last ten days of this month must be refused.

This exceptional condition, Mr. Coffin says, is due to the prevailing low rates of interest, arising from a superabundance of money for investment, which has advanced the price of United States bonds. He says the law should be amended in this particular, as it interferes with the elasticity of the currency and the natural laws of trade.

Against the Saloon.

Des Moines, Dec. 29.—The antisaloon league closed its meetings here to-day. A pledge was adopted which all members must sign, making it the rule and practice of the league members to vote for candidates who are opposed to the saloon. Officers were elected as follows: President, L. S. Coffin, Ft. Dodge; secretary, Allen T. Hickey, Des Moines.

Late Literary News.

What would you do if war should be declared to-morrow with a European power? How would it change your home life, the lives of your brother and other relatives? How would it affect your business connections and business? What changes would it make in financial, city, state and national affairs? It is these interesting problems which a writer in the December Cosmopolitan has undertaken to sketch under the heading of "A Brief History of Our Late War With Spain," at the same time vividly describing the exciting scenes which would attend the opening of hostilities. This same number of the Cosmopolitan has an article on "The Well Dressed Woman" by Elsie de Wolfe, a contrast of the characters of Henry George and Charles A. Dana by John Brisben Walker, in another place "The Loves of Goethe," while Wells' story, "The War of the Worlds," which has been so widely read, reaches its conclusion in an unexpected way.

Better Than Ever.

Farm, Stock & Home, Minneapolis, Minn., begins its fourteenth volume November 15th, and starting with that issue will hereafter appear with enlarged pages, having a fourteen inch column instead of a thirteen as heretofore.

Farm, Stock & Home, by the use of minion type, has always given more reading matter for the money than any other Minnesota Agricultural paper and this move will place it still further to the fore. While an inch on a column does not seem a great deal, a little figuring will quickly prove that it is nearly equal to giving twentysix papers of the old size in a year, instead of twentyfour. The subscription price and frequency of issue will remain the same, viz. 1st and 15th of each month and 50 cents per year. The BUFFALO GAZETTE has an arrangement with the publishers by which Farm, Stock, & Home can be had in connection with the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1.30 for the two papers.

Men who have passed the prime of life are wont to speak with a certain kind of envy of the young people who are about to enter upon active life at the beginning of the twentieth century. The feeling is that the next generation is to see a greater advance in the world, a greater advance in civilization than has ever yet been attained in any equal period. The outlook before the young man of to-day is a matter of interesting speculation.

Miss Lucinda Day died at the age of 90 years in a quaint little brick house in West Springfield, Mass., where she had lived all her life. Seventy years ago Miss Day had a love affair. Her lover was a sailor, and on his departure for a voyage Miss Day promised to place every night a lighted candle in the window to greet him if he returned in the night. He has not since been heard from, but Miss Day refused to believe him dead. The night of her death was the first time for 70 years the candle had not shone in the window.

The Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians, of Indian territory, seem in earnest in the determination to leave United States soil if arrangements can be made with the Mexican government for the location of colonies aggregating 26,000 natives south of the Rio Grande. The white men who covet the valuable lands held by the Indians will not regret their going, but the Indians themselves may make a serious mistake. Doubtless they have some real grievances, but in the main they are now well treated, and many of them have become rich and prosperous.

It will be remembered that an investigation by the treasury department about a year ago showed Former Librarian A. R. Spofford to be about $30,000 short in his accounts. Now it appears that a large part, if not all of this deficit, which Mr. Spofford promptly made good out of his own pocket, will be accounted for by a great batch of old money orders which the absent-minded librarian had put aside and forgot to cash. Librarian J. Russell Young and First Assistant Postmaster-General Heath say that some of the orders date back 22 years.

President McKinley's mother wrote a little sketch of his early life which has in it more worth than many campaign biographies. Alluding to her family cares she said in one of those simple sentences that say so much "I did the best I could, of course, but I had six children, and I had all my own work to do." Her experience is that of millions of women who "do their own work" and do it so well that their memories are blessed in countless homes. A good woman's work is never done, and it is doubtful if the busiest man labors more industriously than does the ordinary, careful housewife.

THE COLISEUM IN RUINS.

Huge Chicago Structure Reduced to a Heap of Twisted Iron.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—Fire Friday night destroyed the Coliseum building, at Sixty-third and Stony Island avenue, in which the democratic national convention was held last year. The fire was one of the quickest ever seen in Chicago. From the time it originated, by the crossing of two electric wires, until the Coliseum was a pile of twisted iron and hot bricks, not over 20 minutes elapsed. The building had been rented for a manufacturers' exposition, and was filled from end to end with booths, all of which were destroyed, with all contents.

The fire originated in a booth which was used for an exhibition of X rays, the booth being managed by M. J. Morley and William Robertson. The two men were examining their Roentgen machine when they were startled by a sizzling noise behind them, and upon turning saw part of their exhibit ablaze. Crossed electric wires which were over the exhibit it is thought caused the flames.

Within ten minutes after the fire began the roof was ablaze, and in a very short time after the fire appeared on the top of the building one of the large arches that span the building gave way with a tremendous report, and then another, and another, each one going down with a sound like the report of a cannon. The building fell very quickly, as after the first arch went down the weight was too great for the arches next to it, and all collapsed. It took not over 20 minutes to make a complete ruin of the building.

The Coliseum cost $250,000 and was twice as large as the Madison Square Garden building, New York. It had floor space of seven acres, including the ground floor and galleries, and was 770 feet long by 300 feet wide. On August 21, 1895, the first Coliseum, then in course of construction, was wrecked, entailing a loss of $125,000. The cause of the collapse was never known, but it was thought the last arch was not placed in position correctly. Six hundred men had been working on the building up to half an hour before the collapse. After the collapse of the first building plans were drawn for a new building, and it was constructed and opened to the public June 1, 1896. Its arena was only equaled in extent by that of the Roman Coliseum.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—The fire which on Friday evening destroyed the Coliseum claimed only one victim. He was N. H. Johnson, whose charred remains were recovered from the ruins Saturday. Johnson was a fireman employed about the building. He evidently remained at his post until the last moment. Then he rushed toward the exit. Within a few feet of the door an immense piece of glass fell from the roof, pinioning him to the earth, while the flames slowly consumed him.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—From midnight, the morning of December 22, until six o'clock Saturday evening, the fire record of the city was: Number of fire alarms, 119; total losses, in part estimated, $1,102,500; number of people killed, 1; number of people injured, 51. The city has not equaled this record since the fire of 1871. Of the 51 injured persons 14 were firemen, 12 policemen and 30 were citizens. The fire alarms this year will approximate 6,500, the greatest number in the history of the city in 12 months.

Great Britain Refuses.

London, Dec. 28.—Lord Salisbury, the premier, has written to United States Ambassador Hay in response to America's latest proposals in the Behring sea controversy, and her request that Great Britain would enter into an agreement with the United States, Russia and Japan to stop sealing. Great Britain declines to enter into such an agreement. Lord Salisbury says in substance that he has communicated with the Canadian government, which has the foremost interest in the sealing question, and that Canada is unwilling to become a party to such an arrangement as is proposed by the United States. Therefore England, continues Lord Salisbury, whose interest is but slight, would not be justified in acceding to the proposals. Lord Salisbury's answer emphasizes the policy of England not to interfere in Canada's foreign relations.

To Meet in Chicago.

Columbus, O., Dec. 28.—A call has been issued by the conference of miners and operators for a joint meeting of representatives from the competitive field of western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, to be held in the Y. M. C. A. building in Chicago, Ill., at ten o'clock a. m., Monday, January 17, 1898, for the purpose of establishing mutual relations and formulating an annual scale of prices to be paid for mining in the various fields in the states aforesaid for the ensuing scale year, and such adjustment of differentials as may be agreed on, and if possible the permanent establishment of interstate agreement on the mining question, and the consideration of such other matters as may properly come before such meeting.

Bad Fire in Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 24. — Fire broke out in the business center of the city at five o'clock Thursday afternoon, and fanned by a high northwest wind destroyed property worth nearly $1,000,000. The Power block of Frankfort street, owned by J. B. Perkins, six stories high and made of brick, was consumed above the second story, and the rear of the brick Wilshire block, six stories high, owned also by Mr. Perkins and fronting on Superior street, was burned. The fire started by the explosion of a large can of benzine in the lithographing establishment of Johns & Co. in the Power block.

Will Pay Better Wages.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 24. — The Coronne Coal company and the Virginia and Alabama Coal company, employing about 1,200 coal miners in Walker county, announce that on January 1 they will advance wages from 60 to 70 cents per ton. The increased demand for coal and the need of more labor is the cause of the advance. Other operators are expected to follow suit.

Aged Couple Slain.

Indiana, Pa., Dec. 27.—Milton Neal and his aged wife were shot to death by an unknown assassin at her home near Jacksonville, nine miles southwest of here some time during Christmas. Their bodies were found at nine o'clock Sunday night by their son Harry, who was passing the house, and stopped to pay a Christmas call on his parents.

PHILADELPHIA BANKS FAIL.

Two Supposedly Strong Financial Institutions Go Under.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24.—A sensation was created in this city Thursday by the announcement of the suspenson of put Street Trust and Savings Fund comgarded as one of the strongest financial institutions in the city. The suspension carried with it the closing of the Chestnut street Trust & Savings Fund company, doing business under the state banking laws. William M. Singerly, publisher of the Philadelphia Record, is president of both companies, and the same men, with one exception, act as officers and directors.

No statement of assets and liabilities is available, but it is stated that the deposits of the Chestnut street bank amounted to $1,700,000, and of the Trust company $1,300,000.

It was known for some time in banking circles that Mr. Singerly's banks were in trouble, and the national bank examiner, it is said, was aware of the condition of affairs. Wednesday night a number of the leading bank officials of the city held a conference lasting until nearly three o'clock Thursday morning, considering the matter of raising sufficient money to relieve Mr. Singerly's banks of their distress. It is understood that a proposition to float $2,000,000 preferred stock of the Philadelphia Record had been practically agreed to when the discovery was made that because of the involved condition of the trust company's finances this sum would not be within several hundred thousand dollars of the amount required. Negotiations were therefore declared off and the banks were forced to the wall. Now it is hoped that the committee which began where the former committee left off will succeed in satisfactorily adjusting the finances and thus permit the banks to pay deposits dollar for dollar.

The net earnings of the Record last year are said to have been $249,000, more than sufficient to pay dividends on a sum sufficient to pay all of Mr. Singerly's indebtedness to the banks. The statements of the cause of the failure current here agree with that made by Comptroller Eckles at Washington Thursday that it was primarily due to the loss of much money by Mr. Singerly in his unproductive paper mill at Elkton, Md., one of the largest in the country. One statement placed the sum thus involved at nearly $1,000,000. Mr. Singerly also has much money invested in other enterprises in this and other cities.

Much sympathy is expressed on all sides for Mr. Singerly. He has occupied such a prominent place in the affairs of the city and the state for years past that the news of his financial difficulty naturally created a sensation. Mr. Singerly stated that he had received hundreds of telegrams from all over the country expressing the sympathy of his friends. He has borne the strain well, although he naturally shows in his face and manner the deep concern his troubles are causing him.

NOTED CASE ENDED.

Marriage Set Aside After Bride Had Been Dead for Four Years.

Chicago, Dec. 24. — The Illinois supreme court has handed down a decision in the Orchardson-Merrick marriage annulment case affirming the decree of nullification granted by a lower court, and giving the property to relatives of Mrs. Merrick. The case is unique in that the marriage is set aside after one of the contracting parties has been dead almost four years. In 1893 Charles Orchardson, an artist and at one time socialistic candidate for mayor against the late Carter Harrison, was married to Mrs. Merrick, of Quincy, Ill. Mrs. Merrick, who was over 80 years old, was possessor of property worth something like $100,000. Orchardson, who was 60 years old, met Mrs. Merrick at a spiritualistic seance in Quincy conducted by Vera Ava, known better as Odelia Dis de Bar, and with her help, it is alleged, prevailed upon the aged Mrs. Merrick to marry him and make a will leaving her property to him. Mrs. Merrick died within a year. Shortly after her death Mrs. Merrick's relatives brought suit to have the marriage set aside. The case has been in the courts over three years.

At High Water Mark.

Washington, Dec. 25.—The treasury gold reserve crossed the $160,000,000 mark Friday, and now stands this afternoon at $160,267,463, the highest on record. It was estimated by treasury experts 60 days ago that the column would reach $160,000,000 before the end of the calendar year, and there is great rejoicing among these gentlemen over the figures. The net balance, aside from gold, is $76,858,304, which brings the grand total up to $237,125,768. By the time the extraordinary disbursements which are to be made about the 1st of January are out of the way the total treasury balance will be down to nearly $200,000,000, which would reduce the working balance above the gold reserve to about $40,000,000.

Heaviest in Years.

New York, Dec. 25.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The weekly reports show a remarkably large holiday trade at many points, the largest for five years. Moreover, at the season when wholesale business usually shrinks, the pressure of demands for immediate deliveries, which results from unprecedented distribution to consumers, keeps many establishments at work that usually begin their yearly rest spell somewhat earlier. Instead of decreasing, the demand for products shows an unexpected increase in several important branches. Foreign trade continues satisfactory, even in comparison with the remarkable record of a year ago, when exports exceeded $117,000,000 in December. Bank failures at Philadelphia, due to individual operations, cause no disturbance, and commercial failures for the month have been less than half last year's to the same date."

For Singerly's Creditors.

Philadelphia, Dec. 28.—The conferrees appointed to formulate a plan of settlement of the affairs of William M. Singerly have recommended that stock in the Philadelphia Record be issued and paid to the creditors to the amounts of their indebtedness. Mr. Singerly is to be left in charge of the Record, and he is to be given six years in which to pay off these bonds. According to the statement the Philadelphia Record for the last seven years has shown a net earning of $243,000 a year.

A Special Message Coming.

New York, Dec. 24.—A Washington special to the New York Journal says President McKinley will recommend the establishment of a department of commerce and industry. The message urging congress to provide for this is to be sent in shortly after the holidays.

RUSSIA GRABS AGAIN.

Her Troops Occupy Kin-Chau—Japan Waits Her Opportunity.

London, Dec. 28.—Russia has made another grab of Chinese territory, and evidently is intent upon forcing the hand of Great Britain in regard to partition. News comes that the czar's forces have occupied Kin-Chau, lying north of Port Arthur. This places them a little nearer Peking, and gives them command of another important strategic position in the Gulf of Lau-Tung. The incident has intensified the interest in oriental affairs, and is taken to mean that the czar is intrenching himself in the Flowery kingdom. It is also taken as signifying that an understanding exists with Germany and possibly with France.

It is expected, however, that when the French cruisers get into Chinese waters seizures will be made, and that Britain will then be compelled to grab territory in an attempt to preserve the balance of power in the Yellow sea.

Action is likewise awaited on the part of Japan, whose indemnity is likely to remain unpaid should all the powers appropriate the Chinese littoral.

Odessa, Dec. 28.—It is reported that two first-class cruisers, with a large number of extra marines, have been ordered to join the Russian squadron in Chinese waters.

London, Dec. 27.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says: It is reported that 17 British war ships are off Chemulpo, Corea, southwest of Seoul, supporting the British consul's protest, really amounting to an ultimatum, against the king's practically yielding the government of Corea into the hands of the Russian minister. The protest is specially directed against the dismissal of McLeavy Brown, British adviser to the Corean customs, in favor of the Russian nominee. The news has produced consternation at Seoul, which is heightened by the knowledge that Japan has a fleet of 30 war ships awaiting the result of the British representation, that Japan fully supports. Japan is irritated by the arrival of Russian troops in Corea and it is believed that she will oppose them.

FOR STARVING CUBA.

Secretary Sherman Issues an Appeal to Americans.

Washington, Dec. 25.—The following proclamation to the American people has been issued:

"Department of State, Washington, D. C., Dec. 24, 1897.—By direction of the president, the public is informed that, in deference to the earnest desire of the government to contribute by effective action toward the relief of the suffering people in the island of Cuba, arrangements have been perfected by which charitable contributions in money or money kind can be sent to the island by the benevolently-disposed people of the United States.

"Money, provisions, clothing, medicines and the like articles of prime necessity can be forwarded to Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, the consul-general of the United States at Havana, and all articles now dutiable by law so consigned will be admitted into Cuba free of duty. The consul-general has been instructed to receive the same and to cooperate with the local authorities and the charitable boards for the distribution of such relief among the destitute and needy people of Cuba.

"The president is confident that the people of the United States, who have on many occasions in the past responded most generously to the cry for bread from peoples stricken by famine or sore calamity, and who have beheld no less generous action on the part of foreign communities when their own countrymen have suffered from fire and flood, will heed the appeal for aid that comes from the destitute at their own threshold, and especially at this season of good will and rejoicing give of their abundance to this humane end.

"JOHN SHERMAN."

The appeal was issued after consultation with Minister Dupuy de Lome. The Spanish minister called at the state department about noon Friday and conferred with Judge Day concerning the relief of the reconcentrados on the island. He made it clear that the Spanish government would cooperate in any relief measures, and that there was entire willingness that the supplies go direct to Consul-General Lee, instead of through Spanish relief channels.

Havana, Dec. 25.—Capt. Gen. Blanco has cabled to the Spanish minister at Washington—Senor Dupuy de Lome—that Americans have authority to send supplies to the reconcentrados of the island without paying customs duties.

New Baseball League.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Five western universities organized into the Western Intercollegiate Baseball league in this city Monday. The following clubs will compose the league: University of Michigan, University of Chicago, University of Illinois, University of Wisconsin and Northwestern university. Manager Keith, of Michigan, was elected president, and L. E. Fischer, of Illinois, secretary. A series of three games will be played between each of the clubs. The season opens April 9, with Northwestern versus Illinois, at Champaign, and closes June 11, with Chicago versus Michigan, at Detroit, and Illinois versus Wisconsin, at Madison.

Fate of a Large Family.

London, Dec. 27.—A Mrs. Jarvis and her nine children, the youngest a baby, were burned to death at five o'clock Sunday morning in a four-room cottage occupied by the Jarvis and two other families in Dixie street, Bethnal Green, London. The unfortunate family occupied the upper floor. By a strange coincidence, Mr. Jarvis, the woman's husband, who had been suffering from consumption, died in the workhouse infirmary Sunday afternoon without having heard of the disaster. Mrs. Jarvis earned a scant livelihood by making match boxes, and her rooms were filled with inflammable material.

Marvel in Surgery.

New York, Dec. 25.—For the first time in the history of surgery the complete excision of the stomach of a human being has been successfully accomplished, the patient—a woman—more than three months after the operation being to all intents and purposes well and capable of performing her daily work. The operation, which was performed by Dr. Carl Schlatter, of the University of Zurich, Switzerland, has attracted widespread attention in Europe, where it is hailed as a brilliant one, the first step in a new history of surgical triumphs.

Eaten by Hogs.

Tiff City, Mo., Dec. 24.—Two little children of a farmer living near here climbed into a pigsty to catch one of the pigs. They were set upon by a number of hogs, which killed and ate both children before they were found.

Sixteen Killed.

Dortmund, Prussia, Dec. 24.—Sixteen persons were killed by an explosion of fire damp in the Kaiserstuhl II. pit here.

MOTTO ON THE DENTIST'S WALL.

Enraged the Suffering Patient But Pleased the Tooth Puller.

"I tell you what it is," the infuriated patient was saying to the dentist, "I don't mind so much the way in which you yanked out that tooth, nor even the fact of its being the wrong tooth, nor the price you asked for paralyzing my nerve, nor any of the disagreeable things you've said to me, nor the insinuation that a ten-year-old child would have stood it better; no, I can't say that I care for any of that racket. It is something else that barbed the iron that entered my soul—I mean my jaw."

"I suppose you didn't like the manner in which I assisted you out of that chair?" said the dentist.

"It wasn't that," continued the man with the fractured jaw. "I was in the army and am used to being shot out of a cannon. Nor it wasn't the pain when you took the top of my head off. No, sir, it was none of those. It was that framed and emblazoned motto on your wall which aroused in me the feeling that insult had been added to injury."

The dentist smiled as his eyes followed those of his tooth-tortured patient, and read those words:

PEACE! BE STILL.

"My wife designed that suggestion," he said: "I think it was clever of her." And he handed back enough money for car fare and put another sound tooth in his collection.—Chicago Times-Herald.

GIVES HER OLD NUMBER.

Young Bride Confused in Making Her First Purchase.

She was one of the prettiest little things in the world and the way she stepped into the store and ordered a bill of groceries was a sight worth witnessing. When she came to settle for them she found she did not have enough money with her, so blushingly asked that they be sent C. O. O.

"Certainly," returned the obliging grocer, smilingly. "What is the number?"

The little lady stammered as she gave the name Gibson, but failed utterly when she came to the number. At last she faltered out:

"No. 4621 M——; no I mean 5537 B," and hastened away covered with confusion and blushes.

MISUNDERSTOOD.

Mr. Casey Was Not Up to Polite Parlance.

Madge Casey threw herself with wild abandon on luxurious Turkish divan in the magnificent drawing-room of the palatial brown stone mansion owned by her father, the wealthy but honest politician. Madge's amiable mother had just given her a good scolding for being out so late the previous night with that "spalpane av a Moike Cassidy, who niver intinded gettin' married," so the rebellious daughter entered the abovementioned room for the purpose of having a good cry.

Ten minutes afterward her father entered, and seeing the pride of his heart in tears, said soothingly: "Arrah, Madgy, me darlint; phwat's th' cause av all this grafe?"

"Oh, papa," replied the beautiful girl between gulps, "I'm bemoaning my fate."

"Bemoanin' yer fate, eh? Thin it sorves yez roight," said her now cruel parent. "Hovn't Oi towld yez toime an' agin thot iv yez didn't stop wearin' shoes two soizes too shmall for yez thot ye'd hov bunions on yer fate? Oi hov thot."—Up-to-Date.

Not Up in Nautical Lore.

At sea, as many people know, time, instead of being reckoned by hours, is divided into watches of four hours each. From four o'clock to six, and six o'clock to eight, there are half divisions, nautically termed dog watches. In an insurance case the counsel asked an old sailor what time of day a certain collision occurred, and received the reply: "About the middle of the first dog watch." In summing up the case the barrister enlarged upon the information thus imparted, as follows: "You can imagine, gentlemen of the jury, the care which existed on this occasion, when, as appears from one of the plaintiff's own witnesses, this valuable ship and her cargo and the lives of passengers and crew were intrusted to what, gentlemen?—why, to the mere watch of a dog!"—English Paper.

"EVERY YEAR."

LIFE is a count of losses,
Every year;
For the weak are heavier crosses,
Every year;
Lost springs with sobs replying
Unto weary autumn's sighing,
While those we love are dying
Every year.

The days have less of gladness,
Every year;
The nights more weight of sadness
Every year;
Fair springs no longer charm us,
The winds and weather harm us,
The threats of death alarm us,
Every year.

There come new cares and sorrow,
Every year;
Dark days and darker morrows,
Every year;
The ghosts of dead loves haunt us,
The ghosts of changed friends taunt us,
And disappointments daunt us,
Every year.

To the past go more dead faces,
Every year;
As the loved leave vacant places,
Every year;
Everywhere the sad eyes meet us,
In the evening's dusk they greet us,
And to come to them entreat us,
Every year.

"You are growing old," they tell us
Every year;
"You are more alone," they tell us,
Every year;
"You can win no new affection,
You have only recollection,
Deeper sorrow and dejection,
Every year."

Too true!—Life's shores are shifting,
Every year;
And we are seaward drifting,
Every year;
Old places, changing, fret us,
The living more forget us,
There are fewer to regret us,
Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher,
Every year;
And its morning star climbs higher,
Every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burthen lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter,
Every year.
—Albert Pike, in Washington Post.

HOW IT TURNED OUT.

"THA'LL live to rue it."

"Well, aw cannot go again' my feelin's. Aw cannot help lovin' thee."

"Naw, an' tha' cannot help lovin' someb'dy else, con ta? Tha'll live to rue it, aw tell thee, an' so will that hupstart tha's seet thy heart on—mind that."

The girl thus addressed blushed faintly, but did not hang her head. Rather, she lifted it with a proud look which, despite her working shawl, plain black hat and somewhat pasty-white complexion—the common heritage of mill girls—lent something queenly to her whole appearance.

Had you seen Rachel Swann on Sunday, as she walked with her Bible and hymn book to the Methodist Sunday school to teach her class, you would scarcely have known her. Dressed in the latest style—or the latest that had percolated to the provinces—from the "tips" in her hat and the "fall" which expressed rather than hid her delicate features, to her neat little shoes, she looked—what she was—a lady. And had you seen her at the chapel door after evening service, without ado or even greeting, beyond a mutual look of satisfaction, meet a pleasant-faced young man and walk away by his side, you would have been in possession of the secret—no secret now—that James Sumner, assistant cashier at Messrs. Peel's mill, and Rachel Swann were "keeping company."

Jim Sumner had started life as a half-timer and little-piecer, but, naturally an intelligent lad and a great favorite with the schoolmaster, he had, in spite of the great disability of beginning to earn his living at ten, made such good use of his opportunities that he was early taken into the "office" and was now quite "looked up to" by right-thinking folk as a man who "could addle (earn) his brass 'bout takkin his cooat off." Moreover, he was junior "chapel steward" at the Methodist chapel, and altogether a man any girl in that place might be proud to "keep company" with.

That Rachel was proud of her lover everybody knew. They had only "made it up" a short time ago and had walked in public less than a fortnight when the above conversation took place. The man, for such he considered himself, who threatened to "mak' her rue" was considerably older than herself and an "overlooker" at the mill in which they all worked. He had long forced his attentions upon Rachel, who, while giving him no encouragement, had not absolutely repulsed him until she heard that he did a little private bookmaking among the youths and young men in the great mill. Until then she had regarded him as a decent fellow and shrank from hurting his feelings, hoping he would desist in time and give it up as a bad job. She did not know Jabez Smethurst. He was the sort of man whose love can turn to bitter hate, and now, both against the girl and the man he deemed his supplanter, his rage burnt fiercely.

"Aw'm fair miserable at my work, Jim, now," said Rachel, as she walked with her lover from his mother's cottage along the embankment of the great reservoir.

"Why, how's that, my lass? Aw thought tha' wur all reet now, an' gradely set up wi' four looms, an' averagin' nineteen an' six a wik"—for, though Jim was an assistant cashier, he dropped, like his lady love, into his native Doric on all familiar occasions—"an' tha' towd me that even thy cross-grained owd aunt could speyk civil now."

"Ay, aw was fain enuf, Jim, but—Eh, lad aw can hardly tell yo', aw've kept it to mysel' for days, but aw cannot bear it no longer—th' overlooker's ta'en one o' my looms off me, an' says he'll tak' another if aw don't mend my work."

"Dost mean Jabe Smethurst? Aw'll see that reet—ne'er heed, Rachael," and as they had passed the railway station which stood at the upper end of the reservoir, and were in a somewhat secluded place, he put his arm around her waist, drew her to him, and kissed her fondly.

"Say nowt, Jim. It'll do no good. Gaffer thinks weel o' Jabe. He hearkens to him as if Jabe knew everythin' an' him nowt. An' it does look as if my work was bad, for he gives me such bad 'soarts' 'at aw con on'y do half what t'others con, an' my aunt says whoo'll gie me th' key o' th' street if aw cannot addle more than a little wench. It's piece work, tha' knows."

"Ay—well, ne'er heed, my lass. Kismas'll soon be here, an' we'll get wed as soon as th' New Yer comes in. Aw'm gettin' two pounds a week now, an' aw'm promised a rise wi' th' New Yer."

A month had passed. Poor Jim! All his fair hopes seemed blighted. Brimley Brothers, a firm in the neighborhood with whom Messrs. Peel occasionally did business, in checking their bank book, found themselves indebted with an amount paid by check to Peel & Co. for which they could find no corresponding item in Peel's account, and, on making inquiry from them, found that there was no account of its receipt in their cash book, nor did such an account appear to have been paid in the usual way to their credit at the bank. Evidently a check had been drawn and paid of which the books of neither firm had any record. It was a sum under ten pounds, but as the youth who ran between the mill and the bank in the adjoining town of Blackbrook appeared too unsophisticated to transact such a fraud, and as Jim Sumner was immediately responsible for the current cash, of the firm, he was held to be morally responsible, if not actually criminal, and, accordding to the immemorial custom of the firm, "had to go."

Poor Jim! He did not wait to meet his chapel folks and intimates. He just kissed his widowed mother, who would not have believed "owt again' Jim" on the testimony of an archangel, and went out into the frosty air, straight to the station, and away to a town 30 miles distant, to make a fresh start. His sweetheart was still in the mill. He ought, of course, to have waited for her, and told her. But he didn't. He would write. She would learn soon enough. The village would buzz with the news, as though the new "hooter" had proclaimed it, by nightfall. And it did.

HE TICKED HER UP.

There were girls who seemed to be glad to tell Rachael, and when she flared up and said:

"Yo' know as well as aw do 'at Jim ne'er did it," they only replied:

"Well, he's ta'en his hook at any rate. Yo'r Aunt Bet seed him goo, and says 'good riddance to bad rubbidge.' She doesn't seem to think as weel o' Jimmy as her niece does." What could Rachael say? She went home with rage in her heart against her aunt, and something like resentment against her lover for hasting away without a word to the girl who could have died for him. Ah, little did she think—yet even now a dead misery had taken hold of her.

"Well, Miss Proudie, an' how's thy fine gentleman naa?" (Aunt Bet's own lad had had hopes of the "office" once, but had turned out o wastrel—hence her bitterness.) "Aw thout wot it 'ud be. Some fowk can't stand gettin' up i' th' world. Pride'll hev a fa', an' thy whippersnapper's come a cropper at ony rate."

In tongue warfare Rachael was nowhere; besides, Aunt Bet wasn't worth answering. Then, that very day the overlooker had threatened to reduce her to two looms, and had humbled her so terribly before the other weavers, that all the spirit seemed clean gone out of her. She went to bed, but not to sleep. The "knocker up" had an easy task next morning. That day was the blackest of many black ones during the past few weeks, and now no lover's comfort awaited her. Everything went wrong. The stuff wouldn't weave. Her looms seemed bewitched. The overlooker overlooked with a vengeance.

"Yo'll start on two looms to-morn," he said; "think on that! Aw've lots a wenches o' 14 'at weave better nor thee, an' do moor wark on two looms t'an tha' con o' three."

It was the last straw. She dare not face Aunt Bet and her sneers.

"Oh, Jim, Jim," was the cry of her heart, "why couldn't you say a word to me?" For when her heart spoke it cried for Jim and not for looms. Coming out of the hot mill it was bitter cold. Next week was Christmas week. Merry Christmas! She drew her shawl over her head and hurried away. Not to the place she called "home." She scarcely knew where she went. A hopeless despair weighed on her sensitive spirit. Tears unchecked and unheeded dropped as she walked. "Anywhere, anywhere, out of the world!" would have been her exclamation could she have expressed her deepest wish. Suddenly she found herself on the top of the reservoir embankment. The moon was shining upon the water, which sparkled and shone with a crystallire brilliance.

"There's nowt left to live for, an' I won't live!" and, casting her shawl from her, she threw herself from the embankment. There was a sharp, ringing sound. The moon shone on, and all was still.

"Now, aw wonder what's come out about this money?" thought Jim Sumner, as he struck the reservoir bank on his way from the station home. "Folks are fain to stay in to-neet, aw reckon. Aw'm glad nob'y'll see me till aw've cleared mysel'—if clearin' it is—and what can th' masters ha' taken th' trouble to get my address fro' mother—for nob'dy else knew it—an' telegraph me to come instantly, if it's not? My! but th' frost has bin keen this two days. Aw'll bet th' lodge'll bear." So saying, he ran down and tried it with his foot, and, finding it safe, walked a distance on the margin.

"What's that? Good heavens!" He had stumbled over the prostrate form of a woman lying a few feet from the embankment. The ice was starred in every direction where her head had struck it. "Poor wench!" He turned her over and the moon's light fell upon a face he had often kissed. He reeled as though he had received the blow that made the blood flow from that marble brow. How cold she was! But she breathed. He picked her up and carried her, he knew not how, up the bank and away till he staggered into his mother's cottage.

Could she be in better hands? Still unconscious, but with signs of returning animation, he left her and hastened to the mill. The lights still burned in the office. The masters were seated by the fire, and in the background sat the messenger and Jabez Smethurst.

"How d'ye do, James—you got our wire?"

"I did, sir, thank you."

"Boy, tell us again what you told this morning." Whereupon the penitent lad, with fearful looks at Jabez, told how the overlooker had terrorized him about small betting debts; how, at his instigation, he had obtained a blank check from the office lad at Bromley's; how Jabez had filled it in, copying the writing from another of Bromley's checks; how he had presented it with the rest at the bank and got the cash. The sequel was known, and did not need recounting. Jabez swore it was a parcel of lies, but the boy's evident sincerity, revelations of Jabez' bookmaking transactions, and, later, Rachel's account of her rejection of his suit and his subsequent threats and persecution, convinced the masters of Smethurst's guilt. They simply discharged him and eased their consciousness of Jim's overhasty dismissal by raising his salary to £150 a year.

What We Can Do.

The passing of the year is not a "presto, change," but a reminder, a kind of interrogation point crying: "Which way? up or down, right or left?" The apostle says: "Redeem the time," not time will redeem you. The New Year offers nothing sentimental and no guarantee for good resolutions, but just three hundred and sixty-five days of opportunity. We can be made good or bad, as we choose. We can make the old year a lesson of wisdom or a load of incumbrances. And we can make the New Year old by repeating all the follies of the past, or we can keep it new from start to finish by making ourselves newer and better.—Chicago Advance.

The New Year.

Fairy stranger, who art thou,
With the gems upon thy brow?
Coming in the stilly night,
Clad in robes of spotless white,
Noiselessly thy footsteps fall,
In the cottage and the hall.

Soft and low the answer came:
"Surely thou must know my name;
For, while speeding swift away,
Ere the dawning of the day,
All the voices of the night
Cheered me as I came in sight.

"Heard you not the minster bell
As it tolled the Old Year's knell?
Heard you not the glad refrain,
As all nature pealed the strain,
'Welcome to the bright New Year,
Welcome, welcome, cheer on cheer?'"
—Chicago Standard.

Women at the Berlin University.

Women are not yet admitted to the examinations at the Berlin university, nor is there a general permission for women students to attend lectures. Every professor has, however, the right to admit or exclude women from his audiences, and the number of women studying in Berlin increases every year. It has now reached the highest figure yet attained—132.

Carry Many Passengers.

Over 400,000 passengers have been carried on the third-rail electric cars in Connecticut since the line was opened five months ago.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

A Good Showing.

On Jan. 1, 1898, the two years will have expired which constituted the term of the agreement made by F. H. Peavey with the newsboys of Minneapolis. It will be remembered that Mr. Peavey offered to duplicate the savings of seventy-five newsboys to the extent of $1 every three months for one year, and to guarantee interest on the deposits for two years, the sums deposited not to be drawn out in that time. The plan proved very popular. The seventy-five newsboys started in briskly and were further stimulated by an offer of the Minneapolis Journal to add to Mr. Peavey's gift by an additional dollar. Mr. Peavey's desire to encourage in the boys a habit of saving has borne good fruit. Of the seventy-five boys who accepted his offer two years ago, sixty-eight are still fulfilling the conditions of the agreement. Under the agreement the seven boys who dropped out forfeited the sums advanced by Mr. Peavey, but they were at liberty to take their own money.

Must Be Pink.

Judge Lochren has decided that the Minnesota "pink law," providing that all oleomargarine or butterine offered for sale in this state must be colored a bright pink, is constitutional, and the officials of the state dairy and food commission are happy, though they lost possession of that car of oleo that was seized back in 1895. The decision has been filed at Duluth, where the case was brought, and copies were filed with Assistant Attorney General Edgerton and Dairy Commissioner Anderson.

It was in 1895 that the inspectors of the dairy and food department seized a carload of oleo from Armour & Co., at Duluth. The inspectors relied upon their own authority and did not take the precaution to obtain warrants from the court.

Poultry Exhibition.

In the rooms of the St. Paul Commercial club, members of the State Poultry association and other interested persons met and completed arrangements for the annual show of the association, which will be held in St. Paul Feb. 7 to 12 inclusive.

Five silver cups, valued at $150, will be competed for, and in addition to this, cash prizes aggregating over $1,000 will be given. To assure the payment of the prizes, the Commercial club, chamber of commerce, and the jobbers' union will jointly subscribe $600 as a guarantee fund. Special prizes will also be donated by business men of the city.

Good Deeds.

As a result of the generosity of L. Elsinger & Company, of the Golden Rule Department store, over 350 presents were distributed to friendless little children, the inmates of several orphans' homes in St. Paul. A large tally-ho with Seibert's band and a genuine Santa Claus, and loaded down with presents, made the rounds of the charitable institutions, and gladdened the hearts of many of the little souls who otherwise would probably have spent an uneventful Christmas.

Ripe Old Age.

Bazille Suprenet, aged 109 years, died at St. Gabriel's convent, in Little Falls. He was a Canadian Frenchman and was born near Montreal in March, 1788. He was hale and hearty until three days before his death, and often expressed the belief that he would live 20 years longer. He said that his father lived to be 98 years of age and his mother 91. He had no relatives living that he knew anything about. His only son was a carpenter and went to New York in 1841, and he has not heard from him since.

What Does This Mean?

A perusal of the history of railway transactions during the past four years shows us that this period has been the most disastrous, from a financial standpoint, of any other of the present decade. Under the circumstances it would almost seem as though the further development or improvement of railway facilities must cease. Yet, strange to say, many notable instances prove that the contrary is true. In numerous instances first-class roads, despite the hard times and general business depression, have made very decided advances, not only in the improvement of the material condition of the roadway itself, but likewise the equipment and service. And the public has been a great gainer by the public spiritedness of the roads.

One of the most notable cases of railway development is the Nickel Plate Road, which seems to have forged right ahead with its improvements and has exhibited an unrelenting determination to give the public the best possible facilities, in spite of the hard times. And how well this corporation has succeeded in its laudable efforts, the excellent condition of its system bears ample evidence. Yet the secret of this success is obvious. The people have responded very generously to a generous effort to give them the worth of their money. That is all. The people's money has enabled the road to better its facilities in every respect; thus the work has been of a mutual and reciprocal character. The liberal patronage accorded the road has brought a handsome return to the people in the shape of improved facilities for travel, yet at the same time at lower rates.

And now, it seems, the Nickel Plate Road is still engaged in further efforts to serve the people well. It has a high-class roadway to begin with; a most excellent equipment to end with, and a safe, fast and reliable service for the delectation of its patrons. All in all, it offers a most attractive menu to travelers bound east or west in the shape of "A Peerless Trio of Fast Express Trains."—George A. Benham, Special Correspondent.

Hadn't Thought of That.

"Some time ago," says an insurance man, "a man asked me to accompany him home, as he had some things there to be insured. When we arrived at his home he showed me 100 boxes of cigars, which he wanted insured. There were 100 cigars in each box, making 10,000 in all, and were valued at ten cents each, so I insured the lot for $1,000. A few days ago the man came to me and asked for the insurance money. 'You've had no fire at your house,' I replied. 'No, but I've smoked them,' said he, 'and according to the paper, I am entitled to the money, as it reads distinctly that if the goods are consumed by fire money is paid on application.' As far as technicalities were concerned he was all right, but I knocked him cold about a minute later by saying, in a very stern manner: 'All right, sir; you'll get the money; but, according to your own confession, I will proceed at once to make a charge against you for incendiarism.' 'Well, I'll be hanged!' was all he said, and the room shook violently after he banged the door!'"—Philadelphia Record.

Inappropriate Music.

Speaking of church music, there is nothing which is so frequent a source of wonder to me as the lack of understanding some of our church musicians display in their choice of music. I have heard the intermezzo from Cavalleria Rusticana played as an organ voluntary—that intermezzo whose story of earthly passions is so plain that it does not need words. I have heard the same organist play Schubert's "Serenade" on communion Sunday, but the most glaring exhibition of bad taste I have ever heard was just a few Sundays ago when a certain soprano sang an old hymn to that famous air of Delilah's, "Samson et Delilah," the most passionate music I know. She sang it beautifully, too, and was evidently utterly unconscious of the fact that the meaning of music does not depend entirely on the words. I actually heard the superintendent of the Sabbath school—dear, simple soul—congratulate her on the success of her effort, too.—Washington Post.

Yukon Gold by the Pound.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 21, 1897.—The General Passenger Department of the Great Northern railway received today a consignment of gold dust and nuggets from the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, the total weight being 27 pounds, 11 ounces, having a value of $6,365. The precious stuff ranges from a nugget of 1 pound, 6 ounces, to flakes not unlike the scales of gold fish, and grains of cracked or crushed wheat, and comes from Bonanza Creek in the Klondike district, Birch Creek, Miller Creek, and Eagle Creek in the Circle City district, and Minook Creek in the Tanana district. The gold will be displayed here for a few days, and then go east to the general agencies of the road for exhibition. It is the largest quantity of the yellow metal from Alaska yet handled outside of the banks and mints.

Had Lost His Faith in Them.

A theatrical manager told a story against himself the other day. An actor came to him and applied for an engagement. There did not seem to be much need of him, but his demands in the way of salary were very modest, and the manager said to him:

"Well, you may consider yourself engaged. I fancy I can find something for you to do. Come round on Tuesday and I'll try you."

The newly-engaged man looked at the manager questioningly.

"How about a contract?" he asked.

"Oh, never mind a contract. We'll have a verbal contract."

There was a look of mild reproach in the eyes of the man, as he answered, sorrowfully:

"Sir, the last time I made a verbal contract I drew a verbal salary."—Spare Moments.

Tremendous Exodus to the Klondike.

Despite the warnings of those who have been on the spot, and predict suffering in the Klondike region, thousands of adventurous Americans are wending their way thitherward. All of them should be provided with that medicinal safeguard, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which warms and nourishes the system, and prevents malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble, besides remedying liver complaint, dyspepsia and constipation.

For Croup,

asthma, bronchitis, or whooping cough, there is no remedy so sure and safe as Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose its healing influence is manifest. The sufferer who has been kept awake by the cough falls into a refreshing sleep, and awakes strong and refreshed. Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is acknowledged to be a specific for all pulmonary complaints. Physicians praise and prescribe it.

This standard remedy for coughs, colds, and all diseases of the throat and lungs, is now put up in half size bottles at half price, 50c.

"One of my children had croup. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breath. Having a part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given the child's breathing grew easier, and in a short time it was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved its life."

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, DEC. 31, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

--Delano Fair January Saturday, 8.

—The Standard Oil company now runs two teams on the road from their depository here.

—Dr. Ames has moved his office back into the Dugan house, corner 2nd and Bridge streets.

—Several members of the Masonic lodge attended a public installation at Rockford Wednesday night.

—The K. P's of this place went to Waverly, Wednesday night, to help organize a lodge. A big time was reported.

—The Alumni and High School scholars had a Holiday party in the City Hall last night. They had a very nice time.

—The ice crop will soon be ready for gathering. In fact it would do very well now but there is hardly snow enough to move it on.

—It looks like cold exercise, yet occasionally a bicycle goes along the street. One came from Howard Lake and one from Watertown, lately.

—Rev. J. W. Powell, who was pastor here a few years ago, will preach at the M. E. church at 10:30 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m. next Sunday, Janv. 2.

--Drayman McRoberts bought a couple of pails of oysters just before Christmas. They fell off from the dray and were spilled in the street.

—Martin Conzet was seen shingling his hog house, on Monday morning, Dec. 27th. Pretty good for a man of his age, so near Christmas in Minnesota.

--The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church will hold a Watch Night Social on New Years eve at the M. E. Parsonage. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

—Delano's enterprising tailor, John Brandser, has made for his own use a new style of vest which serves as both vest and overshirt. He says he intends having it patented.

—The first Sunday of each month is consecration Sunday for the Epworth League. The meeting will begin at 6:45 p. m. at the M. E. church. The business meeting will be held on Thursday evening Janv. 6.

—John McGary, of Independence, made us a call yesterday. He says the administrator's sale of the Hysted children's property passed off nicely, and better prices were realized than he had expected in some instances.

—Christmas passed off pleasantly. The next morning the usual number of Christmas trees were to be seen tumbling about the yards, stripped of their many presents. Several of the Sabbath schools had entertainments and trees on Friday evening, Christmas eve.

—Wednesday's warm wind took off almost all of what little snow had fallen this year, so the wheel and sale has come into power entirely as a means of conveyance. We have had a fine open winter so far and believe that most of the people in this vicinity would just as soon have it continued.

—We understand that the round elevator had the grade cut down on about 3,000 bushels of wheat shipped this week as No. 1, to No. 2. We met the proprietor that morning and he didn't know us. We suspected something was wrong. Perhaps Mr. Leiter's rejection of wheat in Chicago as grading too low had something to do with the cutting in Minneapolis.

The Gold Craze of '49.

At the time of the first gold discovery in California the prospector was unknown. Captain Sutter built his house at the head of navigation, on the Sacramento, because he believed that a tide of immigration would flow westward over the Rockies as soon as the news of California's addition to the Union was known, and that this would be a good spot for a trading post and outfitting station.

In 1847 he made an agreement with James Marshall, a machinist from New Jersey, to build a sawmill, some miles up the river from his own house. It was while the mill was building, on January, 24, 1848, according to the diary of one of the workmen employed there, that Marshall found some grains of gold in the sand while walking in the tail-race of the mill. He showed the specimens to his half dozen workmen, but none of them realized the importance of the discovery at that time. On the following day Marshall gathered up as many of the bits of gravel as he could carry in the crown of his hat, and took them down to his employer, Captain Sutter. The latter conveyed them to San Francisco, where they were analyzed and pronounced to contain gold.

Then ensued such a scene as mankind had never before witnessed. With almost electric rapidity the report went around the world. Gold in California! Rivers lined with gold! Mountains of gold! Gold to be had for the labor of picking it up! From all parts of the Union, from Europe, from every quarter of the globe, an army of frenzied argonauts was soon racing across the plains, around the horn, crowding every available route that led to this wonderful Western land of gold.—From "Great Gold Discoveries," by E. W. Mayo, in Demorest's Family Magazine for January.

Happy New Year, '98!

Personal.

Joe Dornseck returned to Delano last week.

Frank A. Cramer took a trip to Minneapolis Monday.

Miss Anna Darlow spent her holiday vacation at home.

Lafe Nelson, of Minneapolis, visited Delano friends this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell Young visited at the paternal home this week.

Miss Della Briley, of Minneapolis, visited Delano friends this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Schulz visited with James Young's folks this week.

Miss May Staples, of Howard Lake, visited Delano relatives Tuesday.

Roy Mulford, of Missouri, made a trip home for a visit during holidays.

A. T. Ranna, of Herman, visited Delano on business and pleasure Tuesday.

Mrs. Fannie Brasie and son of Monticello, visited Delano friends this week.

Harry Thompson, of St. Paul, visited his sister Mrs. H. S. Babb, this week.

John Sturman came home from Dakota to eat Christmas turkey with the family.

Prof. Babb has been on the sick list for several days but is convalescing at present.

Dr. J. R. and Mrs. Soper visited in Minneapolis this week. Dr. came home today.

Prof. Hawker and Miss Hattie Gross attended teacher's meeting at the capitol this week.

Joe Cramer, one of Minneapolis' prosperous meat dealers made his mother a Christmas visit.

Henry and Fred Hendricks, of Lac que parle county visited old time friends in Delano, Wednesday.

John and Misses Addie and Alvira Cameron, of Minneapolis, visited Delano relatives during holidays.

Charley Coolen and Prof. Williams, of Smith Lake, made Delano friends some holiday vacation visits.

John Coolen, Frank Schaffer and George Barth came up from St. Thomas college for a few days vacation.

Miss Stella Davis came home and helped the Alumni and High School scholars have a good time during vacation.

Rev. and Mrs. Parker drove to Montrose Sunday to hear Rev. Powell preach. They say they heard an excellent sermon.

Frank Sutton left in answer to a telegram Tuesday afternoon for Denver, to bring home the remains of his son James, who died there that day.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Hamley, of Minneapolis, have been stopping at Mr. Baltuff's for several weeks helping care for Mrs. H's mother, Mrs. Blake during her sickness.

Rev. McDermott, of Howard Lake preached at the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. His audiences are growing larger. He is to be here again next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

County Cullings.

Charles Crank lost his house by fire on Sunday.

Otsego is reported as having an epidemic of diphtheria, several deaths having occurred.

The Eagle is proceeding to kill off Ole Mattson as a candidate for office by saying he is too sick to run. There are other Scandivavians about Cokato.

The Standard failed to choke off the wind of the Enterprise as fast as it evidently thought it had; or was it only a case of exciting the combative propensities of the Cokato Swedes to assist Brother Frank in making the Enterprise a better paper?

Who would suppose the G. O. P. would keep such a set of hard tickets in the editorial chairs of their organs in Wright county as the editors are trying to make out each other is? It is an outrage on the reading public to have to read, and have their families read such articles as some of those lately appearing. Why who would care to belong to a party with such leaders as we read in their own papers they have? It's terrible gentlemen. And some of 'em want office too.

Brother Tanner critizes us for saying "there is no telling just yet what the issue may be." He intimates that free silver and "Tariff is a Tax" are all the issues we want. We don't always get what we want. The issue may be, and it probably will, as to who will we have for United States Senator. We should elect good men for business for all offices and good Legislators will elect a good Senator. Just who he should be ought not to be the issue, but has been and may again.

Court News.

Maria Stevens vs. G. N. Ry., for damage to foot at Delano. Settled without cost.

Earnest Brabec vs. Mat Cook, for wages. Jury verdict for $23.45.

O. L. Dudley vs. Village of Buffalo, for flooding his park. Judge dismissed action on motion of defendant's attorney on the ground that plaintiff had failed to establish a case.

State vs. Joe Shaffer, of Howard Lake, charged with setting fire to dwelling. Continued till next term.

Faults in School System.

The senate chamber of the state capitol, where the county superintendents met last evening, was the scene of some lively debate over a paper read by Supt. George W. Sherer on "Some Things That Are and Some Things That Ought to Be." He arraigned university graduates, who are not required to pass teachers' examinations, who are independent of the county superintendent, who do not attend teachers' meetings or summer schools and know nothing of the work of the county and feel no sympathy with the movements for the betterment of the schools. He found fault with the questions prepared for teachers' examinations, saying that they were too easy, and criticising severely the privilege offered applicants of answering ten out of every fifteen questions, saying that where formerly seventy out of every 100 applicants had failed, last fall eighty out of every hundred passed. This, he said, was lowering, instead of raising the standard of scholarship.

Another condition which ought to be remedied as soon as possible, Mr. Sherer said, is that under which people can teach without certificates. In closing he referred to the need of an open market for the books so that the districts could buy books where they pleased.—Pioneer Press,

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.
